PROBATE ORDER.—State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the probate court for said county, held at the office in the village of Boyne City, in said county, on the 19th day of February, A. D. 1889. Present, Fred. W. Mayne, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Lucy Van Horn, deceased. On reading and filing the petition of Myron L. Denton and Lucetta Hunting-ton, praying that a certain instrument now on file, purporting to be Edward H. Van Horn's last will and testament, be admitted to probate, and that the administration of said estate be granted to some other suitable person, the executor therein not being a resident of this state. It is ordered that the 26th day of March, A. D. 1889, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for hearing said petition, and that the heirs at law of said Edward H. Van Horn, deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court then to be held at the probate office in the village of Boyne City, in said county of Charlevoix, and show cause why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted; and it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Journal, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing.

A true copy.) FRED. W. MAYNE, Judge of Probate.

SHAVED SHINGLES.

Description of the Gage Patent Shingle Machine.

On January 24th the JOURNAL mentioned the organization at Chicago of the American Shaved Shingle company; its relations to the Michigan Shaved Shingle Company of Charlevoix, and the importance to Charlevoix of the success of the Gage patent shingle machine. Since that time the published descriptions of the machine have created a wide-spread interest, and the company here are in receipt of a great number of inquiries concerning the practical workings of the machine. Those who have never seen the machine will get a good idea of its appearance from the illustration and from the following description taken from a recent issue of the Lumber Trade Journal of Chicago, a recognized authority on lumber matters all over the United States:

The Lumber Trade Journal has heretofore spoken of the recently perfected machinery by which shaved shingles are produced by the cutting process. Cut shingles for many years, and indeed in many places, still are, held in the highest esteem by those who knew how to lay them properly, but the inherent defect of a tendency to disintegration of the fibre of the wood, leaving sound timber to appear shaky, has of late years prevented their general use, except by such persons as know their peculiarities and how to lay them to avoid cracking. The Gage Patent Shave Shingle Machine, a device which, possessing all the advantages of old style cutting machines, adds points of excellence peculiarly its own, which obviates and overcomes the objections mentioned above. The old machine were set upon the floor and belted from above the objection being a lack of solidity, a tremulous motion causing unevenness of cut, increased by the downward thrust of the knife in the timber as pushed from above. In the Gage machine, the power is applied from below, the machine resting upon a solid foundation, and the knife being set for a drawing cut through the timber. The machine is built with heavier and more solid castings than was possible in former days when the component parts of the frame were of wood. But the security of this machine and what distinguishes its work from former methods, is in a series of rollers which hold the timber in the accompanying illustration, as they appear just below the cutting edge of the knife. The office of these is to hold the thin shingle firmly against the knife as it passes through the block, thus preventing the curling which causes the cracking of wood, the only possible objection which has ever been urged against cut shingles. Various devices have been tried to accomplish the object attained by these rollers, but hitherto without success, on account of the rigidity of the pressure bar, which but partially performed its work. The roller bar is in sections, each working independently of the other in such relations to the cutting edge of the knife as effectually to prevent that curling of the shingle which produces the cracking of one side in the old methods. The result is a smooth shaved shingle solid in texture. This result attained, it is evident that the cutting process does away with all shavings or saw dust, and that the saw kerf in sawed shingles is saved in the Gage shaving process.

We have before us as we write a block of 18 perfect shingles just as they dropped from the machine and the rule shows us that they were produced from a block four inches in thickness, whereas the same block would have yielded but 13 shingles under a 16 gauge saw. From this we see that timber yielding 100,000 sawed shingles would produce 140,000 under the Gage patent and that while the expense of manufacture is reduced to just two cents per thousand. This then shows a saving of nearly 40 per cent. in timber and a handsome profit in cost of manufacture. Contracts have been made for a cut of 50,000,000 of the Gage shaved shingles, to go to Eastern points during the coming season, while 15,000,000 have been contracted to A. P. & W. E. Kelly of Chicago, who handled a large proportion of the 3,000,000 cut of last year. The Michigan Shaved Shingle Company of Charlevoix, will operate two machines during the coming season, and expect to cut 15,000,000. The Wisconsin Shingle Company of Ashland, will manufacture 20,000,000 with two machines. Three others have been ordered for a mill at Ramsey, Mich., one at Advance, Mich. and one at East Jordan, Mich. The daily capacity of these machines may be set down at from 75 M., to 100 M., contingent upon the experience of the operator.

Tests upon cypress give equally good results as those upon pine and cedar timber. The machine weighs about 4,200 pounds and requires from seven to eight horse power for its operation, while its product recommends itself in being as smooth and as solid as a breasted shingle, as well as in the increased product from a given amount of timber.

For the Charlevoix mill, Mr. A. Bultare is getting material together, and making every possible preparation for its erection as soon as the snow is off, and for its steady operation when completed. There is reason to believe that this mill will add considerable to the prosperity of other lines of business in Charlevoix, and the cash that it brings into the county will supply numerous families with the comforts of life.

FULL OF THANKFULNESS.

The Rancher Tells Why His Heart Is Suffused with Gratitude.

"Thankful! Oh, yes. I've got a heap to be thankful for. I'm just billing over with gratitude," said a San Joaquin rancher who had just stepped out of a lawyer's office on Montgomery street. "Look here, young man, did you ever try to run a ranch with one pair of mules and a mortgage? No, Iypposed not. When I took up my quarter section I had to mortgage it to start. The first year was a bad one and the wheat crop failed. Then I had to go into debt for seed and grub, and the interest piled up on the mortgage. I've been wrestling with that mortgage ever since, but it downs me every time.

"Last spring when the wheat come up it looked first rate, and my wife and I watched it growing as you'd watch a youngster, if you had one. We worked hard, got along without help most of the time, and went to bed plumb tuckered out every night. We hoped to get a little ahead of the mortgage this year, but it would have to be a big crop and a big price to pull us out of the hole.

"Well, the crop was just fair. Bags cost a good deal more than anybody had a right to charge, wages were high, and I have got only a middling price for my wheat. While we were waiting for harvest time we used to figure up once in a while to see how we'd come out. My wife would be tired most to death with her work, for you must remember that I was at work on a ranch where she does all the cooking, washing and mending, and takes care of two or three children, isn't any picnic, and my back would be aching like I was breaking in two, but we'd just sit down and figure. It was close calculating, but we allowed that a good price for the crop would just about make both ends meet for the year.

"When a letter came up from the commission man telling us how much that all our year's toil was going to bring in, we only cried and tough wrestling for grub over again, we just looked at our roughened, stiff-jointed hands and wondered whether it was worth while raising stuff for other folks to eat, and going hungry ourselves.

"It just meant that our backs had ached that somebody else might take things easy. It meant that the kids would have to get along with the same old duds for another year. Do you know, it seemed to me for a moment that if I took a shotgun and went out on the stage road I wouldn't be doing any more than the chaps who live on mortgages do, and, bethlee, it would be just a little quarter and more genteel fashion way of getting what doesn't belong to one. Still, as I wasn't brought up to that business, I didn't think of it long.

"You work like a Chinaman all the year, work till you ache all over, raise wheat enough to feed a small village for a year, and then find that you've worked yourself deeper into debt, and see if you don't have some queer notions bobbing about in your head. Then you go up to a fellow that sits in an office, wears good clothes, and never does a lick of work that's of any use to anybody, hand over to him the money that your wife and children need, almost get on your knees to beg him for the favor of being robbed by his mortgage for another year, and tell me if you feel your heart just bursting out of your shirt with promiscuous all round gratitude."—San Francisco Examiner.

A Scrap of Paper Saves Her Life.

It was just an ordinary scrap of wrapping paper, but it saved her life. She was in the last stages of consumption, told by her physicians that she was incurable and could live only a short time, she weighed less than seventy pounds. On a piece of wrapping paper she read Dr. King's New discovery, sent out a sample bottle; it helped her, she bought a large bottle, it helped her more, bought another, and grew better fast, continued its use and is now strong, healthy, very plump, weighing 140 pounds. For fuller particulars send stamp to W. H. Cole, druggist, West Sunbury. Trial bottles of this wonderful discovery free at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store. 4

THE DEPARTED CONGRESSMAN.

Eloquent Tributes to the Memory of Mr. Burnes—Other Matters.

In the Senate, Mr. Cockrell offered appropriate resolutions, on the 25th ult., on the death of Representative Burnes, of Missouri and delivered a review of the life and character of the deceased. Eloquent tributes were paid to his memory by Senators Ingalls, Voorhees, Coke, Harris, Cockrell, and Vest, the latter suggesting as a fitting epitaph "Here lies one much loved by friend and foe." The resolutions were adopted unanimously. Among the bills introduced in the Senate were those providing for lighthouses and steam tug whistles at the Chicago outer breakwater, and for a lighthouse at Grand Haven, Ottawa County, Michigan. The last named bill was passed with amendments. And a conference asked. Among the House bills passed were the following: Authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue patents in Lake Superior, submitted by request of the Commissioner of Pensions, to register the steamer George H. Parker of Michigan, and to divert a portion of the sinking fund to Indian relief; an amendment. The Senate also passed the Senate bill for the relief of Mrs. Burnes, accompanied with the resolution to erect a monument to her husband, at a cost not to exceed $5,000. The House also passed the Senate bill for the relief of the Cherokee Nation, with amendments. The Senate agreed with the amendments. The House concurred in the Senate amendment to the Indian appropriation bill, providing for the payment of the proceeds of the sale of the Cherokee lands, and the following amendment was agreed to: Provided, that the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, use the money herein appropriated for the purpose of the relief of the Cherokee Nation, in the purchase of the Cherokee lands, at any time within the fiscal year for which the appropriation is made. The House also passed the Senate bill for the relief of the Cherokee Nation, with amendments. The Senate agreed to

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

For Justice of the Supreme Court,
THOMAS R. SHERWOOD, of Kalamazoo.
For Regents of the University,
JOHN N. LAWRENCE, of Grand Rapids.
WILLIAM J. BEAL, of Mt. Clemens.

Harrison's Cabinet.

On Tuesday, March 5, president Harrison sent to the senate the following nominations, and all were unanimously confirmed:

James G. Blaine of Maine, to be secretary of state.

William Windom of Minnesota, to be secretary of the treasury.

Redfield Proctor of Vermont, to be secretary of war.

William H. H. Miller of Indiana to be attorney general.

John Wanamaker of Pennsylvania, to be postmaster general.

Benjamin F. Tracey of New York, to be secretary of the navy.

John W. Noble of Missouri, to be secretary of the interior.

Jeremiah M. Rusk of Wisconsin, to be secretary of agriculture.

Evils of Cigarette Smoking.

The Lansing Woman's Club have been collecting evidence to support the bill now before the legislature to prohibit the sale of tobacco and cigarettes to minors under 17 years. From accumulated mass the Lansing Journal makes the following synopsis: From the 200 replies received to date, two-thirds, notably those from cities and larger towns, report an alarming increase in the use of cigarettes by the young. Nearly all note serious failure in school work. Many give answers similar to the following:

"One young man seriously dwarfed physically."

"A 11-year old boy is almost an idiot from the use of beer and tobacco."

"One boy in my school recently lost two weeks with throat trouble caused by the use of tobacco."

"A lad of moral promise took to the use of tobacco and cigarettes several years ago, and is now a total wreck, mentally and physically."

A prominent educator writes: "The death of two boys formerly in my school is to be attributed to this villainous habit, and at least a dozen others have impaired their physical and mental growth fully one half."

In reply to the question "what evil effects of the tobacco habit among school children have you noted?" Several answers in substance were as follows:

"It tends to produce and intensify all forms of nervous disease."

"It is utterly fatal to physical well-being, causing diseases of the throat, brain, heart, ears, eyes and general muscular debility."

"It leads to failure of memory, headache, diseases of vision and has caused epilepsy."

As to progress in study all agreed is having noted incapacity, lack of ambition, serious failure and inability to do successful work on the part of those addicted to the use of tobacco and cigarettes. There is a unanimous opinion that this habit tends to vandalism, to profanity, obscenity and many other vices; that it leads to bad company, deadens the moral perceptions, and is a direct antagonism to morality.

The above sentiments were expressed by professors in the University, Normal School, Agricultural College, institutions at Hillsdale, Alma and other points, and by all the leading school superintendents and teachers in the state. The following statement was indorsed and signed by each, President Angell's name heading the list: "We believe that the increasing use of tobacco by growing youth demands serious consideration by every patriotic citizen, and that it endangers wealth, mental vigor and morality, and that the future welfare of this commonwealth demands that its sale or gift to minors should be prohibited."

Coffee Houses.

It is a principle in algebra that you cannot eliminate a quantity from an equation without putting something exactly equal in its place, this is also a principle in human nature. The neglect of it has led to the failure of many attempted reforms, and will lead to the failure of many more.

We are glad to see that our enterprising religious contemporary, the New York Observer, recognizes this principle, and advocates the establishment of something to take the place of the saloon as a social center, as well as the abolition, so far as that is possible, of the saloon itself.

The saloon, in metropolitan life, or in any city or even in village life, for that matter—is more than a place where men pander to depraved appetites. It satisfies not only thirst for liquor, but thirst for human companionship. It is the poor man's club. If we are able to abolish the saloon we must put something in the place of it. If a substitute can be found that will offer all the social attractions of the saloon and all its creature comforts, without the intoxicating liquor, then the chance of abolishing the saloon is largely increased.

The only thing that ever has succeeded in taking the place of the saloon so far is the coffee house or cocoa room. In Liverpool there are now sixty-one of these coffee houses, paying an average yearly dividend of 10 per cent. The capital invested, and in the whole of England there are more than two hundred.

Such houses have, to a small extent, been established in this country; but they have generally been run, not as a business, but as a philanthropic enterprise or charity. They are not likely to succeed on a charitable basis. Men are shy of charitable or avowedly philanthropic institutions of this kind. They prefer to feel that they are giving value received for what they get. Furthermore, there are apt to be too many restrictions in a charitable coffee house. In many of them men cannot smoke or talk above a whisper. They cannot play games other than checkers. Such places are not attractive, and will never supplant the saloons. Coffee houses, without pandering at all to really vicious tastes, should be made as attractive as possible, with as few restrictions as possible. Says the observer:

The rum power is being weakened every day by the attacks made on it from the ground of politics, of morals, and of religion. Attack it from the social side and the line of ammunition is even date. Let something be devised which shall take the place of the saloon as a resort for the masses, making up for all that is lacks of the features of the saloon in honest comfort, good cheer and real humblemess, and the most difficult, just yet remaining to the problem of the drink evil is solved.

Our contemporary is right. It is the social feature of the saloon that constitutes its main strength to-day. Let that be supplanted and its power is more than half gone.—N. Y. Express.

MONTANA'S ABUNDANCE.

A MAGNIFICENT CLIMATE AND A SOIL OF UNSURPASSED FERTILITY.

Saxon's Graphic Letter Descriptive of the Northwest, Particularly of Montana—Interesting Facts Gleaned by Actual Investigation.

GREAT FALLS, Montana, Feb. 18, 1889.

A man need not be very old to remember when Chicago was in the far West, and a journey beyond the Mississippi was like going into a far country. Now a dozen railroads run to the Rocky Mountains, and the Pacific coast is separated from New York as easily as from Saturday, Lewis and Clarke, whose wonderful trip in the early years of this century added so much to our knowledge of this region, would now spend a year in reaching this locality, starting from and pushing their canoes for nearly 3,000 miles against the swift current of the Missouri. Now it takes a day or two in a Manitoba palace car or a free-colonist sleeper to reach here, and no danger or privation and three good meals a day.

Most people have been so accustomed to look upon this part of the continent as so far away and so snowy, so far far away and so far of other access—that it would probably never be the home of mankind but the facts show to the contrary. Hundreds of miles north of Montana, in the country with winters no more severe than those of the north New England States, and summers more suitable to the growing of grains. We are separated from that region by the forty-ninth parallel, an imaginary political boundary which nature will not take into account when adjusting affairs in the future. The intermingling of people of the same blood, speech, religious ideas, and ambitions will obliterate it. Immigrants will come to it, and business interests will hasten it. Those who think Dakota and Montana are now the extreme north, and that settlement can go no further should look to the east. The south line of Dakota is the forty-third parallel of north latitude. Follow this line across the Atlantic and much of Europe will be found lying north of it. All of Britain and Norway and Sweden lie a full degree above the northern boundary of our two great Territories. Edinburgh, St. Petersburg, Stockholm, and Christiania, in the midst of parallels of latitude which run on the parallel of Sitka, Alaska. And Sitka is as far from great Falls as the Gulf of Mexico. England and the north of Europe are habitable by the influence of the Gulf Stream does to Northern Europe, and why should not this country, like that, be filled with a race of industry? Water heated in the Gulf of Southern Asia sweeps across the Pacific and softens the climate of some of our western coast nearly to the Arctic Circle. This river of warmth strikes British Columbia, Washington, and freezes winters so mild that ice is a scarce article, even in Sitka, while roses bloom in the gardens along the coast at Christmas time. Departing in due to the air, which, ascending, passes over the Rocky Mountains much lower here than to the south, it affects the climate of a region nearly as large as original United States. Comparatively speaking it comes with the Atlantic Ocean to the eastern coast of Asia. The rivers of Montana, close later and much earlier than those of other States for south of this parallel. The Missouri River here is fast of ice a month earlier than it is at Omaha. In the light of existing knowledge who will say that up to the 49th parallel is this northwest is not as capable of being settled as Russia and Norway and Sweden south of that line?

Glance at the physical features of this great plain inclining northward. It is the great plain sloping northward. It is the latitude of the Mediterranean Sea and Asia Minor. Nowhere else in the world is there such a succession of lakes and navigable rivers; no other country possesses such an area of agricultural land so intersected by fresh water. Within a radius of 1,000 miles is half the fresh water of the globe. At Grand Forks, Dakota, the Red River is from 800 to 1,000 feet above the sea. Follow the river to its mouth, Lake Winnepeg, and it has descended 700 feet, and in a boat one can steam westward on the Saskatchewan more than 1,000 miles, and then go another the distance on other rivers. Follow the Red River to its source in Lake Traverse, and in high water a boat can reach Big Stone Lake, the source of the Minnesota. Science pass to the Mississippi, this gulf, and follow the Missouri 2,500 miles. Two hundred miles to the east is Lake Superior and a water way to the Atlantic. Three hundred miles to the west the Missouri can be reached, and the traveler so borne into the shadow of the Rocky Mountains, from whose western side another mighty river springs—the Columbia—and leaps to a different sea. After the Mississippi and Missouri the Columbia draws the largest basin in the republic.

EDGERTON'S TART TALK.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PRESIDENT —ACCUSED OF PLAYING FALSE.

The Deposed Civil Service Commissioner Accuses Cleveland of Having Fallen with the Mugwumps in Order to Please the Democrats.

(Washington special telegram.)

John A. P. Edgerton, who was recently removed from the office of Civil-service Commissioner, has written a long letter to the President. He says among other things:

Your letter of April 30 was very appreciative office I ever held. You now declare to your own friends that I was a faithful officer. I do not claim that you ever said to me that I filled the exception. Your regret was never made known to me by you in any word or utterance or action until now, at the close of your administration and on the eve of my removal. If you thought so, you believed me not fit for the position or equal to the duties of the office, and should have removed me long ago. I presume you have prudential reasons for not doing so, and I do not make the removal my ground of your election. In this regard it would

Nothing is a class of political reformers who have never yet been satisfied with any one who has not been a tool subservient to reform, as reformers are not effected by the spirit of reform. I have been a reformer since the election placed you in a position to be a reformer. I have been a reformer in the office of Commissioner of Pensions, and I presume

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., March 7, 1889

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Eveline.

MARCH 5.—Pleasant weather the past week.

Chas. Hardy of Norwood, is visiting his sister, Mrs. A. B. Noyes of Ironton.

O. D. Wood of Charlevoix was in town one day last week.

Will Hayes of East Jordan, informs us that he intends starting on a trip to Oregon about the 15th of this month.

Business may be dull in other towns but here everything seems to be moving along with a rush. Stand from under when the merry spring boom cometh.

Miss Edith Beers of this place, is attending school at Boyne.

Are we going to lose our snow? is what we hear people say. It looks that way to a man over the fence, for the lumbering roads are beginning to get bare in places and are consequently obliged to be patched out with snow. But don't be alarmed.

Who is going to be our next postmaster? Is the question now being agitated by the people at Ironton and vicinity.

Joe Tuttle and lady were at Petoskey Sunday, visiting his brother Roy. Dr. Winslow of Petoskey, was in town Monday visiting his brother-in-law, W. A. Stanley.

We learned last week that Mr. and Mrs. James Better of this place were taken very ill; at last reports they were on the gain. As both are very old people it will take time for their recovery.

On Wednesday night of last week Mrs. Dugal Galbraith was stricken with paralysis, and on Friday night lost the entire use of her right arm. Dr. Carlstein was sent for on Saturday, and last reports were that she was much better.

The P. L. L. Co. have put up thirty cords of ice.

It is rumored that A. Box will add a shingle saw to his mill the coming spring.

We learn theough the Petoskey Independent-Democrat, that Charles Soe, step son of Nathan Jarman, brother of E. G. Jarman of this place, while at work in McManus saw mill one day last week, and while in the act of trying to throw off a belt, was caught and thrown to the floor striking his head against a piece of timber. His sleeve was caught tearing the clothing from his body and otherwise was injured. When found he was unconscious. He is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

Many thanks to you brother Ironton. We shall endeavor to leave you news enough to amply pay you for sending down, notwithstanding our short distance apart. So go ahead brother, and so far as commenting with us, we have not the slightest idea we could run a newspaper.

Mrs. D. N. Gregory has just completed a double log-cabin quilt containing 14,114 pieces. It will probably be exhibited at the fair next fall.

☞ Malcom McDonald has a fresh supply of groceries, tobaccos, and confectionery, and reports trade on the increase.

Eastport.

From the Elk Rapids Progress.

Eastport was not discovered by Columbus, because Chris. Columbus was at that time busily engaged in seeking a route to India. Eastport was somewhat new at that time, but we have indications that the site was here but covered with a growth of massive hemlock, pine and cedar-swamps with just enough soil around the shores of the lake and bay for aborigines to bury their dead and make foot-prints in. A number of years later (about 400) a schooner landed several families on the shores of Grand Traverse bay with enough accoutrements to aid in carving out a few houses in their leisure hours. Gradually they carved—more families came with their carving tools and by steady industrious pegging away managed to erect log houses, clear land, cut cordwood and subsist; they subsisted principally on corn bread "sopped in tallor" with enough of other articles of food to relieve the monotony; making jelly cake and mince pie as not a part of the culinary duties; the settlers being epicures of a peculiar class didn't seem to grieve for any thing in that line. Rutabagas were easily raised and consumed in large quantities. The cold season generally came here in the winter and though the privations were many, the pastime of journeying nine or ten miles to a dance swith a yoke of "bay" steers attached to a "pung" served to alleviate the distresses of the settlers in the same proportion as the square of the distance to the time consumed in making the round trip. One would hardly think when looking over this section of the Grand Traverse region now that it required any effort to live here in an early day, but such was the case nevertheless; the "rapid stride of civilization" got their and now we have a busy, bustling, prosperous population, reaching out for more worlds to conquer.

Advance.

MARCH 5.—Miss Edith Beers is attending school at Boyne City.

Mr. Cox, of Petoskey, is conducting a singing school here. He has a class of twenty-eight members.

The book agent is abroad in the land, again. This time it is Chas. Pierce of Boyne City.

Henry Conn got his arm hurt by the overturning of a load of wood last Monday.

Mr. Geo. Bettes and his wife are both very ill again. Dr. DeLacy, of Boyne City is attending them. Mr. Bettes' brothers from Grand Rapids is with them.

The artist from Boyne has been here and has taken a view of the schoolhouse, teacher and children.

The people here are beginning to fill their ice houses. They think they won wait till June this year.

Say, Eveline correspondent, you want to come off the desk long enough to come up here the 22d to the bazaar. You will have a chance to be highly entertained and can also have a chance to become the owner of a bedquilt if you are lucky. Jumbo will be one of the attractions.

The Wilson correspondent is to be pitied, living in such a cold climate. In last week's JOURNAL (s)he says "16° below zero Sunday noon." The coldest weather we have had here this winter was that same Sunday when it was 13° below zero, but at noon it was twenty above zero.

In the last JOURNAL we stated that the bazaar would be held here on the 15th. The time for holding it has been changed to the 22d.

Wilson.

Warm spring-like weather.

Chas. Knuttel is night watching again.

Wm. Wing has gone to visit his parents in Howell, Mich.

Rebecca Todd was taken quite ill at the entertainment, and had to be taken home. She is better.

School closed on Friday last, much praise is due Miss Wilson for the efficient manner in which she taught.

The school exhibition on Saturday evening was a success. The play of Cinderella at the close elicited much favorable comment.

A party of Echoilans, another from South Arm, others from East Jordan and the Wilks neighborhood, completely filled the school house on Saturday night.

While Wm. White of Boyne City was eating dinner at J. R. Vance's recently, his pony took fright, and started for home, but turning up a log road and finding a load of logs in his way, he was finally caught. Fortunately no damage was done.

Mrs. Nowland and son Samuel have returned from Cadillac where they been for three months.

C. Cunningham is afflicted with a spider cancer over his right eye. He thinks it is getting better slowly.

Ironton.

MARCH 5.—We are having good sugar weather just now, and the thaw is so hard as to first class strike to the wood and log business.

Loren Campbell lost a valuable horse last Friday, and Pete Sheldon lost one today. We are sorry for the boys.

J. D. Parish has purchased another horse and is busy as a bee.

Between Joe Tuttle, Harry Coblentz, and other boys, John Peterson's rigs are kept pretty busy these days.

Mr. Box has purchased a shingle machine.

Mrs. Galbraith has been quite sick for some time, and last Thursday night had a severe stroke of palsy.

Charley Zeithers youngest child is having severe spasms or fits. Mrs. Aldrich of Charlevoix, is attending it.

The social at John Ward's was a success in every way; about sixty from Ironton attended and report a splendid time. About twenty-eight dollars was realized, which goes toward paying the pastor's salary.

The teachers of the Congregational Sunday school gave their scholars a grand sleighride Saturday afternoon.

We would like to give our brother eveline a little advice. Don't listen to what people say, most always tell many stories. What we really would have done had we seen the bear we are unable to say, but we certainly didn't see him. Perhaps whisperer was only judging us from that late experiance of his own.

MARCH 4.—Very fine weather and the roads are getting soft.

Mrs. Doline of Ellsworth, visited her parents last Friday and Saturday

Dr. Kanagy who has been on the sick list is able to be out again, though quite weak yet.

Mr. Nash will run his saw mill thirteen hours a day till he finishes his stock.

Mr. Sigar is getting out cedar to build a small vessel adapted to the Florida coast. Capt. Bedford will also build one for the Michigan coast.

C. W. Johnson will plant twenty-five acres of beans for seedmen.

D. Flanagin's shingle mill failed to connect. He went to Kewadin to run his saw mill there and broke the crank of his engine.

Your correspondent attended the Norwood minstrel troup entertainment last Friday night. It was their "maiden effort" no mistakes. As usual it closed with a dance.

Elk Rapids.

The Progress is elated over some new street lamps in Elk Rapids, and now ask for water works.

Traverse Bay froze over at Elk Rapids on the 24th of February.

The mumps have struck this town quite hard and a number are still suffering with unusually large jaws.

The Cameron Brothers, of Torch Lake, are about to put up a brick factory in the spring. Mr. Newberry, of Traverse City, is drawing the machinery.

Dexter & Noble's teams commenced hauling ice out of Elk lake Tuesday morning. The ice is about 12 or 14 inches thick this year; clear as crystal and without snow, as it usually is.

Echo.

The snow is going off rapidly.

Elder Wakely preached in the morning and Elder McGregor in the evening on Sunday last.

Chas. Knuttel of Wilson, Sundayed at Mr. McMillan's.

Messrs. Dugan and Johnnie McMillan, Misses McMillan and Dingman attended the school exhibition in Wilson conducted by Miss Wilson, formerly teacher here.

FROM NEW MEXICO.

Notes and Opinions of That Country by A. D. Cruikshank.

Albuquerque, N. M.,
Feb. 24, 1889.

FRIEND STRANG.—Some time ago I gave you a general description of Red Canon and the country around that part with the promise that I would write you more fully after we had investigated further.

Frank and I mounted two horses and started for the San Mateo mountains, where is situated the headquarters of the ranch we were going to visit. We had been invited to this ranch by one of the owners of the ranch and by some of the cowboys whom we met when on a gallop over the table land, and aided in rounding up some cattle. After riding for two hours, we arrived at the base of the mountains.—a distance, apparently, not to exceed three miles. Then commences a panorama that we can never forget, up through passes in the mountains, down through canons of beautiful scenery, turning as you come through their winding and crooked way, to continue above about as if revolving in a show so that you look upon them at all sides and from all heights.

The scenes with which these mountain sides are covered is a light green, and is a beautiful view from the canon, deep down, as you look up the sloping and rolling sides to the snow line, and all in this clear, brilliant sunlight, the hundreds of cattle feeding quietly upon it, in the month of February. Our almost unanimous wish was for a photograph of the view. We continue our way through changing views of beauty and grandeur until we reach the last pass in the mountains, where we find a grand open plain, guarded on all sides by high, rugged mountains, covered with pine timber and snow. Over this we gallop, and then descend to Red Canon, or box canon, down a winding road along the mountain side. Here, out of this canon, runs a clear stream of mountain water, at this season of the year about like Stover's creek at Charlevoix, but at times when the snows melt and during the rainy season it becomes a mighty raging torrent that carries everything before it. This stream is very peculiar in its habits, for it dodges out of sight every mile or so, or dives down into the ground, and you see no more of it until it suddenly makes its appearance and flows on as large and clear as ever. There are two main canons here, north and south, meeting near the ranch headquarters, which consists of a log house of four rooms, and a corral for stock. These canons are called box canons sometimes from the fact that the rocks through which the water has forced its way boxes up many places and leaves nothing but a narrow passage through which the water can flow. (To give you an accurate idea of canon I would need the adaptation powers of a railroad land advertiser or a Dakota reel estate man.) They are the waterways for the east slope of the San Mateo mountains and for miles the walls are perpendicular on both sides and run up hundreds of feet, and come so near together sometimes that you can touch both sides with your hands, and the rocks meet over your head. Of all the wild grandeur that can be thrown into rocks and depths and heights, nature has seemed to have given here. We viewed the massive piles of rock almost with fear lest they topple over upon us. The further you advance into the mountains the more wild and awful the scenery becomes.

Game of all kinds is plentiful here,—deer, antelope, turkey, quail, bear, mountain lions, etc. The lions sneak about the cliffs of these canons and make excursions at night out among the deer, turkey and the cattle. Two of these were killed some time before we arrived at the ranch, and there were more in the neighborhood. Their tracks could be seen in the snow upon the mountains, and the den of one or two had been discovered by some of the men before we arrived. Now you will not believe, I suppose, when we say to you that Frank and I went hunting for lion one day while here, but it is true. We armed ourselves with a Sharp's rifle and a belt of cartridges, and a 45 caliber revolver, and started out up these canons expecting to see some lurking around the cliffs of these rocks, where they are often seen. We hunted all day and returned without any lions. It was well for the lions that they kept in that day, and perhaps well for us.

In our rides through the mountains and over the ranch with the boys, we saw many deer and antelope. We took some delightful and exciting rides while here, over the plains and the lower mountains; riding where in Michigan no man would think of going with a horse. The men here ride with as much confidence as we would at home upon the highway. They guide their horses while on the run by the sway of their body in the saddle, or the motion of the hand, and you can see them riding their horses when after a steer that has broken from the herd, urging his horse on down the mountain side, or up, as the case may be, by the spurs he always wears, his lasso swinging around his head ready to throw for the feet or head of the steer that is running like a deer before him; and all the time he is guiding his horse simply by the sway of his body in the saddle. When the lasso is thrown it generally goes right to the place aimed at. The horse will stop short from a full gallop and brace himself. The rope is fastened to the horn of the saddle. The steer goes on in his mad career, until he reaches the end of the rope which is generally about 60 feet long, and then he will in all likelihood turn a somersault or fall in some other way. When the horse stops the rider throws his whole weight into the opposite stirrup to help his horse. These men will throw the rope with such precision that with an animal running at full gallop they catch it by one of the feet, and many of them catch it in other way. This is the only way these cattle can be handled as they are wild as deer, and many of them will fight when roped, and then there is fun for horse and man.

On this ranch there are about 7,000 head of cattle, and there are neighboring ranches within about 25 or 30 miles distance. These are the headquarters of the ranches at the springs or watering places. No man owns the land over which the cattle roam. They own the wells or springs, and the United States owns the land. All the cattle run at large, and you will find all kinds of brands mixed together in one herd. Once a year they "round up," as they call it, and brand the calves and stray cattle. Any animal over a year old caught without a brand, or his ear split, is the property of the first man who catches him, and many exciting races take place by the cow boys after what they call a "maverick." The branding is another exciting scene. The cattle are driven into a strong corral, two men enter on horseback with their lassos; others attend to heating the branding irons. The horsemen lasso an animal by the foot and throw him down, he is stretched at full length, his head held, and the brand applied by burning the letters or marks into the skin. These marks are all registered in the county clerk's office, so that there is no two alike.

When driving these cattle to the corral in large herds they sometimes stampede, and then there is an exciting chase. We saw one or two of these. Something startles one or two of them while they are huddled together, and like an electric shock it is communicated to the whole drove, and they seem to be perfectly crazy. If one falls, the others go right on over him. Sometimes they will pick up, one upon the other. All the men can do is to ride before them and keep out of the way. If a horse goes down, the cattle go right on over horse and rider. Frank and I witnessed one of these stampedes, in which one young man from the town not accustomed to the business, went down as his horse jumped a hole. The horse fell and threw the fellow clear over his head, but both horse and man were on the run again in less time than I am writing it.

Such is the exciting scenes about this business that develop those men into men of courage and coolness, meeting danger in many ways that a person not accustomed to witness, would shrink from as impossible to be done without danger to the life of both horse and man. But with all these constant dangerous and exciting tasks you find them generous, kind, intelligent, honest and upright, a character that would throw in the shade many a young man of the east and eastern cities who imagine themselves the soul of society and are looked upon as the coming men. And let me say here, before leaving this ranch, that Julius Estes, Dan Walker, James Robie, and the others with them who superintend the Red Canon ranch, are gentlemen who are capable of going in the best society in larger cities, nor is the population so cosmopolitan. We are suffering in a good measure from the lack of good manners due to the great preponderance in our midst of foreign elements. However, in Boston conductors are constantly upon the outlook for the comfort of their passengers. If there is a chance to make more room they will do it. I have only seen one or two instances of this supervision on the part of our conductors. Even in Chicago the better class of foreigners and the native Americans will almost invariably give up their seats to ladies."

"What made me mad, the other day," chimed in another passenger, who had listened to the conversation quietly up to this point, "was this: I was on a Brooklyn car and it was raining even harder than it is now. The car was jammed and many of the passengers were women, young and old, many of them evidently being shop girls, for it was the hour of the close of labor in the stores. A delicate looking girl, who seemed very weary, was standing at some little distance from me, and I tried to attract her attention in order to give her my seat. I could not catch her eye, so I finally arose and reached over to touch her. I had no sooner left my seat than a spindle looking dude, with a cape coat on, slipped into it. Was I mad? Was I? Well, I should say I was, but what could I do? I hate a fuss, so I quietly slipped out on the platform and let my mad cool off. I'd have given a ton to have punched dudeship's head, though, if I'd have had him in a more secluded place."

"That's it," said the elderly gentleman as he stepped nimbly to the edge of the platform preparatory to jumping off. "Well, they're all bad enough, heaven knows. Good night," and with a quick jump he disappeared in the darkness.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Another New Subsidie.

The newspapers have exposed the Bohemian oats swindle, which was a swindle on men. The Tradesman has another oats swindle to chronicle, which is a swindle on horses. It is in the manufacture of "corn and oats chop," and is done by grinding corn with pure oat hulls from which the grain has been extracted. Car-loads of this worthless stuff is shipped to the leading mills in the country, ground up with corn and sold for corn and oats chop, making a feed which has not a particle of oats in it. The millers say there is a demand for it from dealers and they simply supply the demand. The hulls are brought from the oatmeal establishments, where they are probably bought for a nominal sum. They are probably not injurious to the animal, but when a horse owner wants to feed oats and corn chop, he ought not to be swindled with oat hulls and corn.—Tradesman.

Polluted Ice.

Years of ice must need up on the report investigations of Keilie, Pengres Problem, showing that ice taken from streams containing polluting stable matter or sawdust it will induce diarrhœa. In 1878, at Byron, an epidemic broke out in a hotel, and was traced at last to taken from an adjacent pond. The refuse of this pond in summer was foul with tainting with putrescent animal matter, as well as bacteria, not eliminated by any ordinary means of cold. Too many of our rivers are the recipients of sewage, is the ice sold for civilization. Two must have it pure.—St. Louis Medo-Democrat.

In Honor of Burns.

A Burns masquerade to celebrate the birthday of the poet is an annual event in Leslie, Ingham. At the celebration twenty-four plowmen, merchants and farmers, mounted and dressed to represent the principal characters in Burns' works, paraded the street headed by a volunteer band and accompanied by a crowd of people. The festival appeared in no cost, some buttons and lines excepted, which the committee borrowed in Ontonagon County, Johnnie, Auld Lang Syne, Tam O' Shanter, Twenty Years Ago, Highland Mary, Bonnie Doon, Jeanie Deans, Cotter's Saturday Night, Tam O' Shanter, Bonnie Doon, Highland Mary, Jeanie Deans, Cotter's Saturday Night, Auld Lang Syne, Twenty Years Ago.

LAST OF CONGRESS.

The Senate and House Adjourn Sine Die on the 4th.

A CONFERENCE report upon the bill to settle all land grants in the State of Michigan for forfeiting wind was known as the "unearned land" was agreed to by the Senate on the 4th inst. The report was adopted without a division in the House. Amendments to the Senate amendments were also agreed to, and are hereby tendered, to the Hon. John J. Ingalls, President pro tempore of the Senate, for the uniformity, acts, courtesies, and dignities which have characterized his service in the chair. After thanking the Senate for its courtesies, Mr. Ingalls declared the Senate adjourned sine die. In the House of conference report was agreed to on the bill for a bridge across the Ohio River at Cairo, Illinois, and in the construction of a railroad from Marquette to Lake Superior, Michigan, and to the Mackinaw Bridge, a flying vote was adopted. That the thanks of Congress are tendered to the Hon. Speaker C. Carlisle, the Speaker, for the courtesy, ability and fairness with which he has presided over the deliberations of the House of Congress. Mr. Carlisle courteously acknowledged the compliment, and then declared the House adjourned sine die.

THAT GREAT BALL.

It Proves a Grand Success and Is Largely Attended.

The shifting scenes of the great inaugural panorama culminated on the evening of the 4th inst., in the brilliant ball at the new pension building. No more glorious pageant ever marked the momentous transfer of the destinies of a nation into new and honored hands, says a Washington special, and then continues:

Aside from all the patriotic sentiment which touches such an event as this in national history, the eye feasted on a scene unparalleled in magnificence, splendor and social eclat. The richly decorated galleries and corridors of the pension building, which is the ground for the notable assemblage of men and women from all parts of the country, who promenaded the entire length of the vast hall or watched the gay scene from the galleries, in the words of a lady who was there, was a picture, and tropical in the description that seemed as well a carnivorous part of it, there was an atmosphere of refinement and delicacy that marked with an indefinite touch of exclusiveness, the occasion in those subtle arts that would suggest nothing but culture and taste. The decorations of the place were very elaborate and rich. The fresh dental party entered the hall when the brilliant throng was at its height. Looking down from the balcony it seemed as if every inch of space was occupied by a mass of bright and gay people. A sea of upturned faces watched their entrance and accompanied with loaging took the disappearance of the procession up the stairway. The President looked pleasantly at the scene, and bowed to the thousand seated with the doors of his reception room were thrown open and the little party had a few minutes to themselves while they were divested of their wraps by the usher in attendance, and then they passed through the corridor of the room. His manner was decidedly cordial. He repeated, quietly yet clearly, the name of each person introduced with "I am glad to see you." Mrs. Harrison took no part in the reception. She stood on Sabbath and almost breakfast watcher of the passing line. The Presidential party, Mrs. Harrison escorted by ex-President Cleveland, passed out of the west hall the President, escorted by Mrs. Cleveland, and then retired to his apartments, where he became the inauguration ball. Every nook and corner was alive with well-dressed humanity. Fully fifteen thousand persons passed in and out of the hall during the evening, a, in another great social and historical event in the nation's record had been accomplished. The supper was a sumptuous triumph of the culinary art, and was thoroughly enjoyed. The scene in the supper room was a strikingly elaborate one, the fabric being an exquisite brocade of purple and manufactures, was a combination of two materials, brocade and apricot satin. The ceiling was covered with a network of festoons of fine smilax terminated and the figures which covered its surface with flowers and leaves and nature. The petticoat was of smooth apricot satin. A magnificent brocade train was attached to the waist in the top to the left side, the usual panels of the train lined with the satin of the petticoat, and the front. The design gracefully lessened in width as it reached the waist line. A deep ruffle of lace edged the panels, with a band of lace of gold and silver over the point formed the train. The sleeves were of the brocade and like the train was made of the satin. The opening at the neck was filled in up to the throat with a delicate lace work of small gold and silver beads and the corsage was decorated with a profusion of gold and silver. The train was very long and fell away from the waist line with a lovely plated effect. Diamonds in a handsome setting were worn. The gloves were pale-gray suede, and reached to the shoulder. Her hair was worn in a full bang over the forehead and smoothly coiled low on the neck.

POLITICAL POINTERS.

Interesting Happenings of More or Less Importance in the Works of Politics.

Delegate Joseph (N. M.) introduced in the lower house a bill providing for the admission of New Mexico under the provisions of the omnibus bill. Mr. Springer, also of Congress, introduced a similar bill for the benefit of Arizona, Idaho, and Wyoming.

A conference of prominent colored men will be held at Washington, March 13, to urge upon the administration "the necessity for the adoption of a conservative policy for the treatment of the race problem."

W. S. Hammaker, Postmaster of Dayton, Ohio, has resigned his $2,500 office, declaring that he will not hold office under Harrison.

John W. Linck, the Republican member of the Indiana House of Representatives who struck Mr. Willard (Dem.) of Lawrence County, during the debate on the Prohibition amendment to the Constitution, has been suspended for ninety days—the remainder of the session—and fined $150.

The Arkansas Senate has passed over the Governor's veto the resolution allowing C. M. Norwood to withdraw his contest for congressional honors.

Certificates of election have been issued by Gov. Wilson, of West Virginia, to J. D. Alderson (Democrat), from the Third Congressional District, and to J. M. Jackson (Democrat), from the Fourth Congressional District of that State.

The National League of Republican Clubs, in convention at Baltimore, elected officers as follows: John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, President; Andrew R. Humphrey, of New York, Secretary, and P. C. Lounsberry, of Connecticut, Treasurer. H. M. Washburn was selected as Vice President for Illinois. The next convention will be held at Nashville, Tenn.

Gen. Clark, the Clerk of the National House of Representatives, has received from the Governor of West Virginia the certificates of election of Congressmen for the Third and Fourth Districts of that State. They are issued in the names of the Democratic candidates. This makes a Republican majority of three in the next House of Representatives.

BUSINESS FAIRLY BRISK.

Some Traders Complain, However, and Collections Are Unsatisfactory.

In their review of trade for last week, R. G. Dun & Co. say:

Trades was more warm in the south and west, and in the opening of other lands find that it does not come, and spring has arrived. Home there are on hand large stocks of unsold winter goods, which accounts for the backwardness in many quarters, and for the general complaint of unsatisfactory trade. Yet there are better points which report there is natural or fairly good trade or some improvement. Pittsburgh observes an advance of cent in some kinds of pig iron and a better feeling in other branches of business. Manufacturing strength is also observed at Cleveland. Philadelphia notes most cautious dealing in dry goods, a firmer market for coffee, and a slow market with tardy collections for drugs and chemicals. Boston finds no change in the general improvement. The money markets everywhere amply supplied for legitimate business, the manufacturers are buying more freely of leather, and for bankruptcy prices are lower than ever. Wool is dull and prices unchanged, and cuts lay stronger. Pork is higher, and a shade lower, lard is quarter higher. Lower prices are noted for butter and cheese, but cotton is higher. Flour is quiet, but the excess of imports over exports for the month now in progress will be quite small, over $30,000,000 less year. The general course of prices has been downward, though with some slightly. The business failures reported for the quarter with 270 the previous month, and 2,338 corresponding week of last year the figures were 234.

APOLOGY OF THE THUNDERER.

Expressing Its Regret at the Publication of the Forged Letters.

A London special says: The Times has given up the fight against Parnell. When court opened the other morning Attorney General Webster said no weight could be attached to Pigott's evidence, as it was his party to aid the court to withdraw from consideration the genuineness of the letters. The Times, he said, desired to express regret for publishing the letters, and the proprietors of that paper would themselves more fully expressed their regret later. Pigott escaped to Paris, and in a letter from that city he more fully retracted the forgeries. The Times, in apologizing, said:

Mr. Parnell having, in the witness-box, stated on oath that the letters are forgeries, we accept his word in preference to the truth of that statement, in these circumstances, we deem it our duty to express our regret fully and sincerely at having been induced to publish the letters. We have been the victims of a fraud of a most gigantic character. We express our sense of regret, warmed hardly yet in modes also to the members of the Parnell Commission, Mr. Parnell, and Mr. O'Kelly. We must add that we firmly believed the letters to be genuine until the disclosures made by Pigott in the course of the cross-examination.

The Times has withdrawn its advertisement of "Parnellism and Crime" and "O'Donnell versus Walter." Applicants for the pamphlets are informed that the publications are out of print.

CABINET PERSONNEL.

The Maine Statesman Will Be Premier, with Mr. Minnesota Nine for the Treasury.

A Washington special of the 28th ult. says that New York is still the stumbling block in the way of a settlement of the Cabinet problem. An impression prevails here that the Cabinet of the incoming administration is complete, with the exception of Attorney General, and that no further change will be made in the slate as at present arranged. This is the make-up that receives the most credence:

Secretary of State—Blaine of Maine.
Secretary of the Treasury—Windom of Minnesota.
Secretary of War—Proctor of Vermont.
Secretary of the Navy—Swift of California.
Secretary of the Interior—Noble of Missouri.
Attorney General—Some New York man.
Postmaster General—Wanamaker of Pennsylvania.
Secretary of Agriculture—Palmer of Michigan.

These names may be shifted around somewhat but this is the way they now stand, and it will take a good deal of pulling and force and personal persuasion to change it. At least six of the eight ministers seem to be absolutely certain, all except those of Swift and Palmer.

A SENATOR ARRESTED.

Riddleberger Makes Annoying Appeal for Recognition and Gets Into Trouble.

Senator Riddleberger, of Virginia, was arrested in the National Senate Chamber by the sergeant-at-arms. The night session began at 8 o'clock on the 3d inst., and the galleries were crowded with spectators, but little work had been completed when Mr. Riddleberger was on his feet endeavoring to interpose a motion to proceed to executive business. The presiding officer (Mr. Ingalls) took no notice of him at first but finally recognized him. The Senator from Virginia moved it lost, whereat some one of the gallery spectators applauded. The sergeant-at-arms left the chamber, and, returning, informed the presiding officer that he had intercepted the person who had made the demonstration. The Chair repeatedly directed that he take the seat, but Mr. Riddleberger, in the language of Artemus was finally directed to take Riddleberger in charge. This was done, the scene being accompanied by a disorderly one. The Senator was hustled into a cloak room and kept under guard. His conduct is attributed to the fact that he was afraid the next for a temperance lecture.

CHARGED WITH BRIBERY.

Indian Agent Owen Makes His Report, Which Is Sworn to at Chicago.

The report of Indian Agent Owen, dated April 18, 1887, has been sent to the upper House of Congress in response to a resolution concerning alleged bribery of the Cherokee council by ex-Senator Pratt. Report says there is no doubt that representatives of the Cherokee Live-Stock Association made a lavish use of money and whisky to secure a re-lease of the lands. Mr. Owens mentions instances where influential Cherokees were paid $500 and similar sums for services which they then solicited to aid the entlemen in securing a renewal of their lease. Mr. Owen expressed his opinion that the real purpose in paying these claims was bribery, and recommends that the representatives of the association be not allowed to lobby for the national lease, but be required to submit proposition they may have to make in writing through the Indian office.

PERIDIOUS PIGOTT.

The "Times" Witness Flies After Confessing to His Forgeries.

A London special says: that the cessation of the Parnell case came on the 20th ult. when Sir Charles Russell announced to the commission that Richard Pigott went to the residence of Henry Labouchere, and, in the presence of George Augustus Sala, signed a confession. In the letters upon which the Times based its charges against the Irish members of the House of Commons were forgeries. Pigott in his confession said that he had forged all the letters which purported to have been written by Messrs. Egan, Parnell, Davitt, and O'Brien. He also admitted that he had been guilty of perjury in his evidence before the commission. A warrant was at once issued for his arrest, but he had anticipated such action, and sought safety in flight.

HIS INFAMY COMPLETE.

Pigott Adds the Crime of Suicide to That of Forgery.

A Madrid special says: An Englishman, supposed to be Edyl and Pigott, was arrested at the Hotel Continental, under the name of Leonard Pensonby. The man afterward committed suicide with a revolver. The description of the suicide corresponding with that of Pigott, who forged the Parnell letters.

RUMORED FIGHTING AT SAMOA.

Reports that German and American Warships Have Been in Conflict.

A Berlin dispatch says: A rumor is in circulation at Kiel that a naval conflict has taken place in Samoan waters between the American war ships stationed there and the German corvette Olga. The government officials here have no knowledge of such an engagement. A truce has been arranged between the German Consul at Samoa and King Mataafa, to remain in force until after the British conference. By the terms of the truce Mataafa agrees to prevent the destruction of German estates.

APPROVED BY THE PRESIDENT.

Various Acts of Congress Receive the Approbation of Cleveland.

The President has approved the act to authorize the Union Gas Company to lay conduit pipes across the Ohio River; the act for a crib in Lake Michigan; the act providing for a steam tender on fast gravel lakes; the act providing for the establishment of lights on the coast of Mississippi; the act for a light house at Chicago, Ill.; and the act for a railroad bridge across the Mississippi near Alma, Wis.

A Move in the Right Direction.

About fifty newspaper editors and publishers met at Harrisburg, Pa., and passed a law on libel, which they will present to the Legislature at its next session, one clause provides that a newspaper shall be given a chance to retract any article regarded as libelous before action against it is brought or maintained.

The Alaska Boundary.

The people in Southeastern Alaska Ogilvie, who was sent out by the Dominion Government to explore the Yukon district, says that the international boundary line between Alaska and British Columbia is nearly ninety miles below the point where it is marked on United States maps.

Railroad Statistics.

The annual report of Massachusetts Railway Commission for 1888 shows that the total income of all the roads in the State increased $5,175,165 during the year, and that the total expenses increased $5,304,498, leaving a net income of $3,666,667, a decrease of $346,292.

Dakota Short on Wheat.

Territorial Statistician Sheridan, of Dakota, states that there is not enough wheat in the Territory for seed, and that it will take 11,000,000 bushels for that purpose, and that there is but 8,000,000 bushels in farmers' hands and in elevators.

A New Ambassador.

It is reported at Ottawa, Ontario, that Sir John Macdonald has been offered the post of British Ambassador to the United States. If he accepts the office, it is believed Sir Charles Tupper will assume the leadership of the Dominion Government.

He Passed Bum Checks.

A man giving the name of John Nelson has been arrested at Omaha, Neb., for passing bogus checks. He is said to have been very successful in his forgeries, and has visited Kansas and Nebraska with worthless paper.

Dropped Dead.

Colonel George W. Friedley, General Solicitor of the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago Railway, dropped dead at Bloomington, Ind. He was one of the best known railroad lawyers in the West.

Tough on Robbers.

Both houses of the Arizona Legislature have passed the bill making train-robbing in the Territory a capital crime. The bill will doubtless be signed by the Governor, he comes a law.

A Dyer Assign.

Henry A. Gould & Co., of Boston, dealers in dye-stuffs, have assigned, with liabilities estimated at $100,000. The assignee is a lawyer named Cox.

A Postmaster Killed.

Daniel Case, Postmaster at Cass, Ind., was murdered while asleep. The man he was driving ran away, and he was thrown from the vehicle.

Held in $5,000 Bonds.

Robert Watkins, accused of stealing the ballot-box at Plummerville, Ark., has been held in $5,000 to appear for examining.

THE NATIONAL SOLONS.

WORK OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Our National Law-Makers and What They Are Doing for the Good of the Country —Various Measures Proposed, Discussed and Acted On.

THE Senate chained up a lot of pending legislation on the 28th ult. by the passage of a long list of bills. Among them were bills authorizing the construction of bridges at Leavenworth, Kan.; near Columbus, Miss.; at Cairo, Ill.; near Red Wing, Minn.; Dubuque, Iowa, and across the Ohio River at Louisville; way through Indian reservations in the Northwest to various points in Dakota; to authorize the construction of a railroad in Lake Jewett, of Minnesota, to be a navigable lake; to provide for a Government exchange, to be rented, W. T., bills to be Made and Received Land Grants, Indian-ship, B. Cincinnati, and Lake Erie Railroad, Mr. Matthews; Mary Walsh, East Tawas, Mich., Mr. Stockbridge; Mr. Cullom's bill to pay the pensions of Illinois soldiers, with amendments, limiting appropriation to one year, also a bill for a pension to Mrs. Grant and for fast and tights to sell. Commissioner Sparks, of the General Land Office, in his annual report, recommended, and a conference was agreed to, after a long debate, the Senate amendments, and a further amendment was added to the House bill providing for the payment of pensions in Indian Territory and Oklahoma. On motion of Mr. Cullom, the House bill was passed, the Senate substitute was substituted for

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

For Justice of the Supreme Court—
THOMAS R. SHERWOOD, of Kalamazoo.
For Regents of the University—
JAMES L. ROWNEY, of Grand Rapids.
WILLIAM J. DALY, of Mt. Clemens.

T. W. PALMER of Michigan has been appointed minister to Spain.

MRS. CLEVELAND goes out of the white house to come into a fortune. She will have $120,000 from the sale of her real estate in Omaha, property which she inherited, and which a few years ago could not have been sold for $10,000.

GROVER CLEVELAND never gave more striking indications of his greatness as an American citizen than he gave Thursday when he walked out of a New York hotel where he had become a boarder, stepped aboard of an "L" railroad car, rode to his new law office, and went to work over briefs and cases. The greatness of the act consisted in its simplicity.—Tradesman.

SALARIES OF STATE OFFICERS.

For twenty years efforts have been made to get the people to increase the salaries of state officers, with the result, so far, that the salaries of judges of the Circuit Court have been increased from $1,500 to $2,500 each, with provision for additional compensation in certain circuits, and that the Auditor-General is excepted from the state officers whose salaries are fixed by the Constitution. The proposition to increase the salaries of circuit judges was twice submitted as an independent proposition, as well as once in connection with others, and each time rejected. In 1882 the people ratified the amendment, the vote being 85,705 in the affirmative to 55,638 in the negative. This amendment, which set out in terms the whole of the article on salaries as it would stand if adopted, omitted the words "the Auditor-General shall receive an annual salary of one thousand dollars," and by adopting it the people left it in the hands of the Legislature to fix the salary of the Auditor General.

The people have voted but once upon an independent proposition to increase the salary of the Governor, though on two other occasions the question was voted upon in connection with other propositions. It was separately submitted in April, 1880, the proposition being to fix the salary at $3,000 per year, and was then rejected—49,056 for and 91,733 against. The experience which Legislatures have had with salary amendment is that independent propositions are regarded more favorably by the people than those in which more than a single thing is attempted. This, with the fact that the Governor is now the most inadequately paid officer in the state, is the reason why the proposition to increase the Governor's salary is again separately submitted this year.

The amendment is one which the people ought to adopt. The proposed salary ($4,000) is not too large, though experience teaches that it will meet with much opposition. It will be really money saved for the people to pay the Governor a salary which will enable him to devote his whole time to the public service. There is plenty for him to do.

In 1870, 1872, 1876, 1880, 1882, 1884, and 1886 the people voted on amendments relative to salaries. These numerous submissions show, it seems to us, as the common sense view of the case does, that the question of salaries is one with which the Constitution ought not to deal. The Legislature should submit a naked proposition for the repeal of the entire salaries article and keep at it until the people come to see its desirability. What they save in one way by meager salaries to the principal state officers they more than lose in others.—Free Press.

WIDE AWAKE.

Wide Awake for March has several features appropriate to the Inauguration month: a charming adventure story, "How Nat Saw the Inauguration," relating to what befell a little fellow who walked into town from Alexandria to see President Cleveland take the oath of office four years ago; a reminiscence of the Harrison campaign of 1840, and a pretty little tale about Mrs. Harrison when she was a school girl—these last two are in the department of "Men and Things." Daudet's pathetic Alsace-Lorraine story, "The Last Day at School," has been translated for this number by Mary Fogueon. There is an amusing Western story, "How Bess was Kidnaped," by Theodora Jenness, and a good outdoor story, "The Coon Hunt in Wheeler's Woods," by Rowland E. Robinson. Margaret Sidney's little Peppers are having a jolly time back at the "little brown house," while Mrs. Sallie Joy White, in another part of the magazine, tells "How the Blind kindergarteners Read Five Little Peppers," the Pepper serial published several years ago. Mr. Trowbridge's "two Davids" are getting tastes of country and city life, each in a way hardly counted upon. Mrs. White, in her cooking paper, tells how the Boston Public School children are taught to boil calsbaf "without smell" in the school-kitchens. Professor Starr writes about "Some Odd Fish" in his geological talks, and Prof. Mason describes the flying pros Queen Kapiolani sent to President Cleveland. There is a delightful article on "The Skylark," by Mrs. F. A. Humphrey; also a richly illustrated paper about "Pets in Literary Life," by Eleanor Lewis. The poems of the number are charming—"Schmoutz and I," by Mrs. Graham R. Tomson; "March Bugles," by Mrs. Whitson-Stone; "In a Glass House," by Agnes M. Lewis; "Capt. Carnes' Profitable Pepper," by John Albee, and others by M. E. B. and Clinton Scollard.

The department "Men and Things" is very full and rich in anecdotes and pithy talks. Wide Awake is $2.40 per year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston.

DEMOREST'S MAGAZINE.

Does it seem possible that only one hundred years ago, when Washington was inaugurated in New York the First President of the United States, that the city was then a small place, sixty times smaller than at the present day, or having only about thirty thousand inhabitants? How New York City looked at that time, and the customs and costumes of the residents, are graphically told and beautifully illustrated in DEMOREST'S MAGAZINE for April, which has just arrived. At this time, when the Centennial of the Inauguration of Washington is about to be celebrated, this article will be greatly appreciated, and those who purchase the April number of this popular Magazine will be repaid, not only by this, but by numerous other attractions, not the least of which are the beautifully illustrated article on "Birds" by Olive Thorne Miller; "Young Japan at Play," which will gave many hints to the children for new games; "Homes with Two Servants," which contains suggestions for the management of servants; and there are numerous other equally interesting subjects.

The Blanket Sheet Must Go.

The modern newspaper is growing too large. It is swelling too much, not growing. Any one examining the immense blanket sheets of many pages can readily see that their bulk is due frequently to sawdust and not to real literary flesh and blood. There is a grain of the true rural metal in many of the columns, but it is hammered out like the most thinly beaten gold so thin sometimes that it is almost mere vapor too flimsy to be picked up and make perceptible to the mental touch.

The extreme of newspaper ballooning has almost been reached and then there will be a sharp reaction to the compact sparkling, pointed little daily sheets with the news boiled down to palatable candy, the diamond of journalism and not diamond dust as we now have it. You can pack a very pretty large wardrobe in a small trunk and you can fling a small outfit into a big one in such a way that it will appear full. This latter is the method of some of our fortypage Sunday magazine sheets which hold less than the modest penny dreadful which has supplied its readers and squeezed its items.—Germantown (Pa) Telegraph.

Bill Brazelton's Death.

A gentleman from Tucson, A. T., in the lobby of the National hotel, spoke of one of the desperadoes of his town:

"I want to tell you that the first and greatest lone highwayman in this country lived in Tucson, and his name was Bill Brazelton. It has now been seven or eight years since he was killed. While he lived he was the terror of southern Arizona, and he did all of his work single handed. He used to work in a livery stable in Tucson. He was a young fellow who did not say much, but was all the time practicing with his revolver when he was not at his work. He was the most active, powerful young man I ever saw.

"He got so he could turn a somersault with his pistol in his hand, and as he came up hit a half dollar every time, twenty-five yards away. He could shoot in every position, whether standing, running or riding, and every time he 'plumped' the ball's eye. Suddenly he left town, and it was not long till we heard of his robbing stages all alone. He had nerves of steel, and did not seem to be afraid of anybody or anything. The greatest efforts were made to capture him, but he eluded all of his pursuers. He seemed to be here, there and everywhere at the same time.

"Finally it was suspected that a bootlier working in the stable where Brazelton had been employed knew something of him. He was taken out to the edge of town and hung up till he was almost dead, when he agreed to confess, on condition that Brazelton should be shot outright, as he would kill any man who betrayed his secret at the first opportunity. The bootlier said he was to go out to meet Brazelton that very night and take him something to eat. He was to wait behind a log in a certain piece of woods.

"A party of six well armed men took the bootlier and went with him to the place of rendezvous. They all lay down behind the log and waited for Brazelton. By and by he rode out of a thicket into an open space and came slowly toward the unsuspected ambush. He carried his pistol in his hand, as if suspecting that things were not all right. When in thirty yards of the log the whole party rose and fired, killing both horse and rider in an instant. It was one of the most dramatic incidents that ever occurred about Tucson in those troublesome days. Brazelton's body was riddled with balls. He was brought to town and the next morning he was propped up against an adobe wall and had his photograph taken, and the local photographer has today in his showcase a ghastly illustration of the triumph of his art."—Washington Post.

☞ One dozen cakes best toilet soap for ten cents, at Beaman's drug store.

A. T. Washburne starts for New York next Thursday, to buy new goods.

A continuation of present weather will soon fill the market with "new maple sugar."

Geo. A. Wilson commenced business as assistant postmaster on Monday morning.

The bill making Cheboygan a fullfledged city has passed both houses of the legislature.

School commenced in the Green block on Wednesday morning, Maggie O'Neill, teacher.

On Wednesday the house of representatives passed the bill legalizing the Charlevoix bridge bonds.

James Mulford, traveling for the Charlevoix Cigar Mfg. Co., reports trade improving in his district.

A F. Myers is making some extensive changes and improvements in his residence on Mason street.

Archie Miller of Traverse City, visited his father and brother, Lewis and George Miller, in Charlevoix, last week.

James Hemmings has done some very fine painting, papering and calsomining for Mrs. Dr. Sweetland this week.

The supper at the M. E. church Tuesday evening for the benefit of Rev. G. Daniels, netted about forty-five dollars.

☞ The largest stock of wall paper ever handled in Charlevoix, just received at Beaman's drug store. Call and see samples.

The village of Clare was visited by a disastrous fire last Thursday morning. Four places of business were destroyed, and two others badly demolized.

On next Monday there will be 25,000 speckled trout fry at Petoskey for the small streams near Charlevoix and improvements have been made to plant them.

A two-year old son of Ed. Tunnoth of Boston caught fire in his clothes Monday night, and was seriously burned. Medical aid was summoned but nothing could be done, and the child died on Tuesday morning.

Arrangements are being made in most of the cities of the country for an elaborate celebration of the centennial of Washington's inauguration on April 30, but we have heard of nothing tobe done in Charlevoix.

The continued pleasant warm weather points to an early opening of navigation on Lake Superior, and we may expect the first boat this season far in advance of that of any previous year.—Hancock Copper Journal.

☞ Bad blood causes dyspepsia results by causing bad blood. So both go on, growing worse, until the whole system is poisoned. The sure and easy means of relief for the victim is a thorough and persistent course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The village election at East Jordan on Monday resulted as follows: President, Jas. B. Palmiter; trustees, Eugene Burdick, Reason Reynard; clerk, Jas. H. Stone; treasurer, Frank A Foster; street commissioner, Geo. Haynor; assessor, Frank E. Fogg; constable, W. H. Simmons.

☞ Miss Bessie H. Bedlos, of Burlington, Vt., had a disease of the scalp which caused her hair to become very harsh and to fall out so freely she scarcely dared comb it. Ayer's Hair Vigor gave her a healthy scalp, and made the hair beautifully thick and glossy.

A. D. Cruickshank returned home last Friday, and his friends are regaled with interesting stories of what he saw and heard on his travels in New and Old Mexico. He purchased 160 acres of garden lands near Albuquerque, and will move to the country next fall.

A farmer came into Flint Wednesday with a load of beautiful potatoes, and after visiting every grocery and warehouse in the city, finally sold them for twelve and a half cents per bushel. There is no market for potatoes in the city. Everybody is supplied.—Flint Globe.

At the Congregational church Sunday morning. Subject, "The Ribbon Mould and our Limit." Evening "Church Lumber," cedar christians, hemlock christians, willow christians, ornamental christians. Y. P. S. C. E. at the usual time. Mr. Andrews, leader. Come, and come early.

F. J. Dettenthaler, wholesale fish dealer of Grand Rapids, is in town this week bargaining for the building of an ice house and the storing of a large quantity of ice, and will build a packing and freezing establishment as soon as he is satisfied of the prompt building of the railroad.

The Young People's Alliance of the M. E. church will give an umbrella social at the residence of Dr. Brown, corner State and Clinton streets, on Tuesday evening, March 19th. Refreshments served at 9 o'clock. Ladies are requested to bring their umbrellas, and gents their purses.

Petoskey elected the entire democratic village ticket on Monday, as follows: Village President, John G. Corse; Trustees, Burt H. Cook, William Birkett, Frank Wegemer; clerk, Albert C. Huntley; treasurer, George Brown; assessor, Matthew F. Guinon; street commissioner, Thomas Hyst; constable, Thos. A. Hoe, Jr.

At this time of year the thrifty housekeeper is looking about for the best and cheapest, means of housecleaning, decorating, etc. A reference to our advertising columns will show that Geo. W. Beaman is thus early provided with the largest stock of wall paper and decorations in Charlevoix, and we are quite sure the prices will be right.

Mr. Gurden Geer died Monday morning, aged 78 years, and was buried on Tuesday. Mr. Geer was born in Connecticut; came to Michigan in 1862, settling in Antrim county. Came to Charlevoix in 1876. He leaves a wife and five children,—Harrison Geer of Ohio, Mrs. Henry Wade, Wm. Geer, Mrs. Geo. Wells, and Olie Geer, of Charlevoix.

The annual entertainment of the Charlevoix schools is expected to occur at the close of the present term, March 24. The interest which our people have heretofore manifested in these occasions is a guaranty that the one soon to be given will be largely attended. Some new features are to be presented, and a good program is assured. The fire having closed the primary departments have prevented the smaller pupils from taking as large a share as usual in the exercises but the older ones are making extra effort. For the reason above noted, the date may be postponed a short time, but not very long.

On Tuesday morning of last week the safe in F. A. Cock & Co.'s store, Bellaire, was "cracked," and the noise awakened a family living near. An alarm was given, and the burglar skipped. Afterwards he was tracked and captured, but not until he had emptied his revolver into the body of Jim Adams, and led a large mounted party several miles into a cedar swamp. The burglar was placed in jail and has confessed to the shooting of Adams and blowing up the safe. In size he is rather below the medium dark complexioned, short black moustache, dressed in black, with a knit cap. At the hotel he registered as "Frank Howard, Bay City," but he tells the sheriff that his home is Indianapolis, Ind.

The office of grand master, I. O. O. F., brings quite a lot of business to Dr. Cronter's office. During the past week he has mailed over five hundred letters, and the JOURNAL presses have printed 3,500 impressions of letter circulars for him, with more to follow. The preparing and mailing of these letters makes it necessary for him to engage a private secretary. Miss Annie Blodgett has accepted the position and commenced her duties March 1st.

C. A. Haslett, representing the Guttan Warming and Ventilating Co. of Chicago, was in Charlevoix over Sunday, and on Monday explained to the school-house committee the merits of the system. From the diagrams one can readily see that the supply of pure fresh air is constant and unfailing, by the simple action of nature's forces, while the degree of heat or cold is entirely within the control of the teacher or other person having charge of the room. The agent guarantees that by their system the air of any room can be entirely changed every fifteen minutes, and that there will not be to exceed five degrees difference in the temperature at the floor and ceiling. The fact that the system is in successful operation in many of the largest school houses and public buildings in the country, and that furnaces, hot water, and steam are, in many places, being taken out, and this system substituted, is much in its favor. Grand Rapids and Muskegon have adopted the system and are now making changes (the latter at an expense of $8,000) after a thorough examination and trial of other systems. The only question so far raised against them is the expense. But the agent quoted reports showing the expense of running, including fuel and repairs, to be less per room per year than for steam, hot water, or ordinary furnaces, and does not require an engineer or other special qualifications for janitor. The agent extended an invitation to the committee to visit Detroit, Toledo, or Chicago, and see the system in its practical operation, and the following gentlemen started on Wednesday afternoon: L. L. Bartholomew, R. W. Kane, Dr. L. Lewis, and A. Bartes (the latter going in place of J. Milo Eaton, member of the committee). Their report to the meeting on March 20th will doubtless be of considerable interest.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

GEN. HARRISON'S FIRST FORMAL ADDRESS TO THE COUNTRY.

He Thinks that the Naturalization Laws Are Not Stringent Enough—Civil-Service Reform Will Be Enforced—Views on Other Important Subjects.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Following is the inaugural address delivered by Gen. Harrison:

"There is no constitutional or legal requirement that the President shall take his official oath or make his official declaration. I think it is much in accordance with the spirit of the Constitution to office of the Chief Executive officer of the nation than from the mouths of the thousands of the people to whom service the official oath connects the officer, have been called to witness the solemn ceremonial.

"The President is the agent of the people. He is the only officer of the people who is empowered to serve the whole people. Hence it is the peculiar duty of the people's agent to see that they may be the unfailing defense and security of those who have given him his place of trust. Among the much which, under our system of government, shall be able to confer their penalties or to withdraw them from a honorable public purpose to serve the cause of civility or a kindness.

"The Executive office is a station unpolluted, but not free from trial and solicitude. The people of every State have here their representatives. Surely I do not misinterpret the spirit of the occasion when I assume that the whole body of the people commit themselves to the President of the United States to support and defend the Constitution and the union of States, to yield willing obedience to the laws and each to every other citizen his equal civil and political rights. Entering thus solemnly into covenant with each other, we may always fairly invoke and confidently expect the favor and assistance of Almighty God, who has ever been so bountiful and so merciful to this favored people, a people a spirit of fraternity and a love of rightousness and peace.

"This occasion derives peculiar interest from the fact that it is the beginning of a new century and the dawn of a new twenty-years nearer our Centennial anniversary.

"The first inauguration of President Washington took place in New York, whence Congress had then adjourned to meet in Philadelphia, the seat of government selected for a period of ten years, during the organization of Congress and the removal of the executive offices. The population of the ten years, which the wisdom of the Continental Congress had thus provided for the temporary residence of the government, was about one-fourth of the population of the United States at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, and will shortly celebrate in New York the centennial of the second great department of our constitutional scheme of government. When Congress assembled for the first session of the first Congress under the organization of the Government under the Constitution, the census then in progress, if it will be not unfair to say, would have fully entitled its second century.

The Nation's Glory.

"I will not attempt to enumerate the marvelous and in great part happy contrasts between our condition as a people at the beginning and at the second century of organized existence under the Constitution, and that weak but venerable body, the Continental Congress, which so long represented the nation in the first century, when all its years stretched out before them.

"We shall not fill in this time to recall the history of the one hundred years of our life as a nation under the Constitution, or to draw inspiration and guidance in the teachings and counsels of Washington and his great associates and hope and courage in the contrast which we may draw between our condition as a people and that which they so courageously faced at the opening of the century. The population of the United States was then 3,929,827, and the area of our country had not extended much west of the Alleghanies, and it was argued by well-informed statesmen that it could not and ought not to extend west beyond it. Yet in the year in which it was decided to be near Cincinnati, and the town laid out, preparations were then in progress for the settlement of the Northwest Territory, which was to be the first addition to the original States, and which was to have no less influence upon the character of our institutions than the States by which it was then surrounded. Yet in the year in which it was decided to be near Cincinnati, and the town laid out, preparations were then in progress for the settlement of the Northwest Territory, which was to be the first addition to the original States, and which was to have no less influence upon the character of our institutions than the States by which it was then surrounded. "How you sell?" he asked, pointing to open baskets of Concords, Catawbas and Malagas.

"Two cents a pound," said the fruit vendor, who was busy with a customer, now turning to the short man's actions with a smile.

"How much for grapes?" he asked laconically, cutting a Delaware from a bunch.

"Forty cents a basket."

"Too much," said the old man, taking away two more Concords.

"Are you a wholesale dealer?"

"No."

"Own a vineyard, maybe?"

"No."

"Where did you learn English?"

"Well, see here, old man, I'm about a pound and a half of grapes and you have eaten about a pound of them. The sign says 10 cents a pound, and if you want to buy grapes I'm willing to sell them to you, but I don't want to be fooled around here."—New York Sun.

Charlevoix, Mich., March 14, 1889

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Eveline.

MARCH 12.—Our time caught cold last week, but up to this date is again thawing very fast. Some of our lumbermen have been obliged to abandon work, and many more will do likewise, and a great quantity of wood will be left in the woods.

A. J. Beers and G. W. Jarman were at Horton's Bay Monday.

The hop at Bedwin's hall Friday evening, was a success in everything. The attendance numbered fifty, and everyone expressed themselves as having enjoyed the evening.

We were informed Monday night that Mr. and Mrs. Bettes are both very low again, and it is reported that recovery is nearly impossible.

E. G. Jarman returned Saturday, having been on a two week's visit to his brother Nathan at Petoskey and friends at Boyne Falls.

Frank May, of Boyne Falls, spent Saturday and Sunday in town visiting.

It should have been Charlie Lee instead of Charlie See as stated last week.

We are afraid that our brother at Ironton has got into trouble. It is this: One of the young men mentioned last week as keeping John Peterson's rigs busy these days, wishes us to state that it would be to his interest not to mention names at all times. The said person stepped up to us with blood in his eye. We thought we were taken, but after finding out the cause of his temper, we explained his error, but nevertheless he thought otherwise. An explanation soon satisfied him. There are many who do not know the meaning of the "rigs" mentioned by our brother, but ye scribe and many more do.

Look out for a few words in regard to election next week.

We shall undoubtedly be at Advance on the 22d to get that quilt. Keep Jumbo chained so he will do us no harm.

We would inform our brother at Ironton that "whisperer" is not a story teller.

Boyne City.

MARCH 11.—The pound social at Rev. J. Burge's last Wednesday evening was well attended, the guests leaving a good quantity of substantial groceries with some money. They dispersed between ten and eleven o'clock well pleased with the pleasant time enjoyed.

J. C. Shaub is building a fine large ice house adjacent to his meat market on Main street.

Wm. Boswell the Boyne photographer is doing a lively business in his line, and gives good satisfaction.

Harry Russell while working on J. C. Shaub's ice house today, fell from the roof, badly spraining his ankle besides suffering numerous bruises and contusions and was a good deal shaken up, and will probably be confined to the house for several days.

We are informed that T. R. Chapin owner of the Citizen, has sold that paper to F. M. Chase, of this place.

The Boyne City schools will hold an exhibition on Friday evening next.

The annual election for the village of Boyne was held today and the following officers were elected: President, Alfred J. DeLacy; Clerk, F. M. Chase; Treasurer, John F. Faircauld; Assessor, George W. Bailey; Street Commissioner, Charles S. Heller; Constable, John Sudman; Trustees, full term, Walter Ware, William J. Pearson, Charles Denell; to fill vacancies, Robert Crawford, John Webster. The contest was exciting and the election close, DeLacy getting only two majority over E. H. Shepard for president.

Advance.

MARCH 11.—Henry Conn talks of going to Ohio to spend the summer.

John Goodman and family have moved to Boyne City.

Dan Miville has moved into the house formerly occupied by John Goodman.

L. E. Phillips traded forty acres of land lying three miles south of Boyne City, for Dan Miville's property here.

A break occurred in Von Platten's mill dam last Sunday. Men are now repairing it and it will soon be in running order again.

Dan Miville and son Frank, have gone to Petoskey.

L. E. Phillips has moved into town, occupying the house formerly owned by Dan Miville.

Charley Norton is still "gathering up the shells by the sea shore."

Quite a number of our school ma'ams attended the teachers examination at Boyne City last Thursday.

People here are still cutting and hauling logs and wood, and wishing that winter would last two or three months longer.

We understand that Mr. Backenstose intends moving into town soon.

Echo.

We are losing our sleighing, which seems hard for lumbermen.

A young man from Wilson recently came and took J. McMillan to work in J. R. Vance's mill there.

The famous tramp (supposed to be burglar) was caught near Crothers' mill in this township. He is supposed to be an escaped convict.

Elder Wakely is holding revival meetings in the Marsh school house.

J. McInnes and Robbie McMillan have gone to Kalkaska to work.

Darwin Scofield has recovered from his sprain which he incurred while loading logs three weeks ago.

An old fashioned quilting was held at Mrs. Dingman's one day recently. It was well attended, and proved a most enjoyable affair.

Feb. 22d was celebrated at Joe Moore's by the arrival of a pair of twins,—a boy and girl. Call them George and Martha Washington.

As Alfred Scofield was loading logs on Tuesday last, the cant-hook slipped, and the log came in contact with his knee, which was badly bruised, and he may be laid up a month or two.

Thomas Nowland of Charlevoix came up recently and took Mrs. N. and children home with him.

Wilson.

Lovely weather for March.

Richard Lewis was on the sick list last week.

J. H. Vance went to Boyne City on business on Saturday last.

A. Box, of Ironton, called at the mill on business on Tuesday last.

Tip Easton, of Central Lake, and R. Someville, of Echo, was in this township on business on Tuesday.

Mrs. Priest and Mrs. Cooper, with their daughters, took a sleighride as far as the Vance mill one day last week.

Miss Stella Smith is afflicted with a felon on her finger. It has pained her about a week and is scarcely any better.

Misses Mabel and Prudie Scofield spent several days recently in Echo visiting relatives and friends.

Isaac Bowen is suffering with a boil on his neck, Geo. Bowen has the neuralgia, also grandpa and grandma Bowen are not very well.

Atwood.

MARCH 11.—Weather fine and roads sloppy.

Nearly all the boys are home from the lumber woods.

The teamsters here are working night while the roads are frozen.

Mr. Nash is running his mill night and day now.

Mr. Nash has donated enough lumber to finish the shed at the M. E. church.

WillSuperman has added a barber's chair and a set of dumb bells to his grocery.

The school exhibition at the Ingalls school house last Friday night is reported a success.

Burgess.

MARCH 12.—Mrs. Drigget who has been quite sick is slowly recovering.

March still keeps quite pleasant.

School closed at Burgess last Friday with a spelling school and exhibition. Miss Solter spelled the school down.

Mr. and Mrs. Webster were visiting friends in Bay last week.

Miss Hattie Ferguson was visiting her father and brother the last of the week.

Ruben Bennett is the happy father of a girl baby.

The Teacher

Who advised her pupils to strengthen their minds by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, appreciated the truth that bodily health is essential to mental vigor. For persons of delicate and feeble constitution, whether young or old, this medicine is remarkably beneficial. Be sure you get Ayer's—the only $1 Sarsaparilla with $5 a bottle.

"Every spring and fall I take a number of bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and am greatly benefited."—Mrs. Jas. H. Eastman, Stoneham, Mass.

"I have taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla with great benefit to my general health."—Miss Thirza L. Crerar, Palmyra, Md.

"My daughter, twelve years of age, has suffered for the past year from General Debility.

A few weeks since, we began to give her Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Her health has greatly improved."—Mrs. Harriet H. Battles, South Chelmsford, Mass.

"About a year ago I began using Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for debility and neuralgia resulting from malarial exposure in the army. I was in a very bad condition, but six bottles of the Sarsaparilla, with occasional doses of Ayer's Pills, have greatly improved my health. I am now able to work, and feel that I cannot say too much for your excellent remedies."—J. A. Hume, South Solon, Me.

"My daughter, sixteen years old, is using Ayer's Sarsaparilla with good effect."—Rev. C. J. Graham, United Brethren Church, Buckhannon, W. Va.

"I suffered from

Nervous Prostration,

with some back aches and headaches, and have been much benefited by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I am now 46 years of age, and am satisfied that my present health and prospects of life are due to the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Lucy Medlitt, Killingly, Conn.

"Mrs. Ann H. Farnsworth, a lady 70 years old, So. Woodstock, Vt., writes: 'After several weeks' suffering from nervous prostration, I procured a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken half of it my usual health returned.'"

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Price $1; six, $5. Bottle $5 a bottle.

FROM NEW MEXICO.

Notes and Opinions of That Country by A. S. Dickinson, Eashbaugh and F. E. Wood.

Albuquerque, N. M., Feb. 24, 1889.

As mentioned in a former letter, in Red Canon there are many caves or holes in these rocks that look dark and forbidding, but some are interesting and we must describe one or two. We learned from the men on the ranch that they had discovered a cave that had been occupied by Indians or the early inhabitants of the country. They directed us where to find it and Frank and I armed ourselves with revolvers and rifles and started up the south canon. About five miles from the mouth of this stupendous pile of rocks, we found it. A little east of it is a depression in wall of the canon, so that access can be had from the top as well as from the bed of the stream. The passage between the rocks at this point is not more than 30 feet and opposite the rock stands 100 to 150 feet perpendicular, then slopes off up into mountain. Here is a cave that has been the habitation of human beings for hundreds of years.—no one can tell how long. It is 25 feet wide in opening, 30 feet deep into the solid rock and about 10 to 12 feet high. It is in the shape of a half circle with an overhanging rock. From the stream there are stone steps partly artificial and partly natural, approaching the mouth of the cave, and the entrance is about 20 feet above water. The floor is a hard rock that has been chiseled out in some way, and the buck part has the traces of the work done yet where the rock has been cut away in the floor. There are 13 round holes made in the solid rock in the floor; the rock looks like red granite. These holes are perfectly round and from six to 22 inches deep, and from six to eight across. In the cave lying beside the holes is a stone pestle about two feet long, round and formed to work in these holes. There is also a stone dish made out of a piece of red rock that seems very hard; it is shaped and looks very much like our oval butter dishes, about 18 inches long, and nine or ten inches wide, and dug out as smooth as if it was wood. These holes in the floor are as true, round and finished as if made by the best workmen with the finest of tools.

The approach to this cave over the solid hard rock from the mountain side is worn in a foot path, and shows that this has been occupied for many years by many people. The walls are covered all over by hieroglyphics, carved in the rock. Birds of all kinds beasts, men, women, Indians in full dress, war dress, white men in all attitudes, images, weapons of all kinds except the gun, bows and arrows, clubs, spears, the skins of animals,—and we cannot mention half that is carved on these walls. Then there are forms and figures that we do not know what they are nor can we describe them; they are very savage looking. Then comes red and yellow paint, and the outside walls or those near to the opening are decorated with this in the same manner. We found here a good many things,—arrow heads of flint, pottery of all colors and styles, peculiar shapes and curious construction. I think Frank and I have the pleasure of being the first visitors to this cave of antiquity except the cowboys, and here we placed our names and the date. If we could read these things on the walls we might read a history not yet known to civilization, and I have no doubt it will be yet read and published.

Returning from this trip somewhat elated over our success. We were informed by the same men of two other caves further down the canon, that one was filled up by the wash of the river, so that only a part of it could be seen, but that this was the largest cave that had yet been discovered. Getting the direction we prepared to look it up, but were informed that they had not explored it because of the ferocious animals that were in the neighborhood and were known to live and den in this one. We saddled our horses, supplied ourselves with two candles (used in the camp), matches, a shovel, and a six shooter, 45 caliber. We struck into the canon and rode down its course through the same stupendous piles and fantastic shapes and dangerous heaps that seemed to only require a good stiff breeze to topple them over upon us. Far down below we reached the place; found a grand opening in the solid rock, much like the other, only larger. But the action of the river had filled it up until only a portion of the arched doorway and roof could be seen. Into this we could look into darkness. Many tracks of animals were seen going in and out. We tied our horses and began to dig, one holding the revolver and keeping guard while the other dug. We dug our way in a good ways by digging a narrow pathway, and by the light of the candle we saw how the rock had been hewn out, chipped, or chiseled, to form the ceiling and the walls. We could see the hieroglyphics and painting upon the walls, carved as before into the rock, and the forms and position of birds, beasts, men and trees, and implements of war, etc., are good, and I doubt if they could be duplicated at this day. Over the archway after a short way as if over the main entrance, there is carved a man's hand spread open, with fingers and thumb and hand complete. What it represents we do not know. We still could not discern the end, but could see still the arched ceiling and the doorway. We had to desist digging, for to remain and clean out that cave would take more time than we had allotted to this portion of the territory. There is another further up the canon, that is accessible. We rode into this one on horseback and viewed the figures and paintings. This one is partially destroyed by the falling of a large portion of the roof. About all these caves you can find—relics, such as pieces of highly colored pottery, arrow heads, flints, tools, etc.

Returning from this trip we fed our horses and ate dinner, and then mounted and started for town. We rode at a quick lope all afternoon over the plains and through the mountains until we reached the town with our saddles loaded with relics.

Near the shanty in a little opening in this canon, there took place a fight with the Indians. Victoria was the leader. Some of the citizens of this community were following them up after they had made a raid and came upon them here. When they had secreted themselves in a side canon and while the citizens were taking lunch, here beside the stream, the Indians attacked them, killed three horses, shot one man, wounded another so he died, and shot a Mexican through the lungs. We have seen some of the men who were in the fight. Two Indians were killed and some of their horses, but the Indians got the best of it and ran away with the horses of the whites. Upon the ground can be found the bones of the horses, some pieces of saddles, etc. This took place in the spring of 1882.

But there are no Indians to bother now. A man is as safe to travel here as in Michigan. He can herd his flocks all day and lie down at night in the open field without fear of any thing.

We are now in Albuquerque, the queen city of the territory, growing and bidding for her place among the cities of the west; surrounded by a grand and inexhaustible supply of grass land, supplied with plenty of good water from mountain and plain, located in one of the richest valleys in the world. Her mountain background supplies minerals in abundance. The climate and soil is suited to grow the fig, plum, apricot, peach, quince, apple, almonds, English walnut, cherries, gooseberries, etc., in abundance, and in two to three years

Representative Wachtel has introduced a bill to vacate the county of Manitou and divide the islands between Leelanaw and Mackinaw counties, on the ground that creditors can get no satisfaction for their claims.

Last Thursday a body was seen on a cake of floating ice on Lake Huron near Hammond's bay. An attempt was made at rescue, but as the floater exhibited no signs of life it was abandoned. It was thought that the unfortunate had been frozen to death.

The Methodist minister at Manton has decided that the members of his choir can't lead in singing "A Charge to Keep I Have," or "Sweeping Through the Gates of the New Jerusalem" Sunday mornings and then contest for the hockey prizes at pedro parties, or dance with the worldly and ungodly during the week.—Cadillac News and Express.

The Detroit Journal says the wages on steamers this season has been arranged as follows: Engineers, $85 to $115; second do, $55 to $75; first mates, $35 to $30; second do, $15 to $30; cooks, $45 to $55; helper cooks, $10 to $15; firemen, $30 to $35; lookout, $25 to $30; wheelmen, $30 to $35; deck hands, $15. On sail craft—First mates, $50 to $65; second do, $35 to $45; cooks, $30 to $35 seamen $30 to $35.

Tout of Death.

Coroners have been suggested to determine whether or not life is extinct when death has appeared to occur. If the most recent, and held to be the most reliable, is called the ammonia hypodermic test. In using it at the operator injects one hypodermic syringeful of strong solution of ammonia under the skin of the arm or some other convenient portion of the body. If the body be not dead—if there be the faintest circulation—the ammonia will produce on the skin, at the point where it was injected, a red patch, on the surface of which raised red spots will appear; but if there be absolute death, there will be produced a brown dark blotch, which is definitely conclusive against all possible vitality.—Boston Herald.

Polluted Ice.

Readers of ice must read up on the recent investigations of Kedzie, Fengers Prudden, showing that ice taken from polluted streams is not purified by freezing. Kedzie tells us that if ice from streams containing rotting vegetable matter or sewbat it will induce diarrhœa. In 1875, at Ryech, an epidemic broke out in a hotel, and was traced at last to ice from an adjacent pond. The river of this pond in summer was foul with stinking with putrescent matter organic matter, as well as bacteria, not eliminated by any ordinary device of cold. Too many of our rivers are the recipients of sewage, so is the ice age of civilization. I we must have it pure.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In Honor of Burns.

A Burns masquerade to celebrate the birthday of the poet is an annual show in Leslie, Fifeshire. At the celebration twenty-four plowmen, merchants and farmers, mounted and dressed to represent the principal characters in Burns' works, paraded the street headed by a volunteer band and accompanied by a crowd of people. Bonnie Jean appeared in the coach, bare footsies and knee breeches, while other characters were Tam O'Shanter, Souter Johnny, Auld Ale, Dr. Hornbook, Bonnie Jean (in the coach), Nelly, Mare Maggie, Jean Armour, Highland Mary, etc.—New York Sun.

DREXEL'S PHILANTHROP

He Establishes an Institution for the Practical Education of Women.

A. J. Drexel has purchased the Lonella mansion at Wayne, Delaware County, Pa., and selected trustees and managers for the Drexel Industrial College for Women. The institution is for the instruction of females between the ages of 15 and 19 years in all duties pertaining to the care of a household, and to teach such trades and business as will make them practical women, able to earn a respectable livelihood. The benefits of the college will be extended, first, to the daughters of clergymen, and, second, to daughters of respectable parents who, through adverse circumstances, are unable to give their children proper training and education. The entire expense of the purchase, new structures, and endowment will be met by Mr. Drexel, and the amount he said, will reach $1,500,000. In connection with the college, instruction will be given upon the plan of the Cooper Institute, by which people will receive tuition while residing at their own homes.

KILLED BY AN EXPLODING BOILER.

Fatal Accident in the Hammer Shop of the Cleveland Rolling-Mill Company.

A shocking accident occurred in the hammer shop of the Cleveland Rolling-Mill Company, the largest iron concern in Cleveland, Ohio. Four large boilers are used to generate steam for this department, one of them exploded with terrific force while thirty men were engaged within twenty yards of it. The boiler tore through the roof and broke into two parts, each flying in a different direction. Two of the workmen, James Barr, 26 years of age, and Thomas Dorney, 30 years of age, lately from England, were killed. Anthony Budesak, Joseph Denesika, Frank Galopski, and Alexander Clark, were badly injured.

Wheat and Corn on Hand.

The statistical report of the Department of Agriculture for March says the amount of corn still on hand is 104 per cent. The surplus amounts to 767,000,000 bushels, of which the seven corn surplus States have 499,000,000 bushels. The proportion merchantable averages 82 per cent. The March average price for merchantable corn is 33.9 cents per bushel; for unmerchantable, 28.8 cents per bushel; the general average of the seven States, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, and Nebraska, 34.6 cents per bushel. The quantity of wheat on hand March 1 is estimated at 112,000,000 bushels. The quantity of wheat on hand March 1 is estimated at 112,000,000 bushels. The average of wheat State percentages are in the principal wheat-growing States, as follows: Ohio, 77; Michigan, 73; Indiana, 78; Illinois, 82; Wisconsin, 86; Minnesota, 86; Iowa, 82; Missouri, 71; Kansas, 84; Nebraska, 84; Dakota, 24. In these States the quantity on hand is less than in March last by about 22,000,000 bushels.

One Million for Charity.

The will of Isaiah V. Williamson, the dead millionaire, has been admitted to probate, in the Register of Wills Office at Philadelphia, Pa. The estate of Mr. Williamson will amount to between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000, exclusive of the fund of $2,500,000 for the Mechanical School. Any more approximate value cannot be given until an inventory is taken of the personal property. Of this amount special bequests are made to the surviving brothers and sisters of the testator; the income of money is given to each of their children during life, $1,000,000 is given to charity, and the remainder, forming the bulk of the estate, is devoted to the grandnephews and grandnieces of the deceased, share and share alike.

Political Sips.

President Harrison has sent to the Senate the following nominations, which undoubtedly will be confirmed:

Thomas W. Palmer of Michigan to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Spain.

John F. Swift of California to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Italy.

John B. Washburn of Massachusetts to be Minister Resident and Consul General of the United States to Switzerland.

George Tichenor of Illinois to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, vice Isaac L. Maynard, resigned.

The nominations were referred to the appropriate committees.

Senate Committee Chairmanships.

The vacant chairmanships of the Senate committees, at Washington, have been filled as follows. This relates only to the Republican membership: Agriculture, Algernon S. Paddock; Engrossed Bills, Wilkinson Call; Enrolled Bills, Charles H. Farwell; Manufactures, James S. McMillan; Railroads, John H. Mitchell. Senator Quay declined the chairmanship of the Committee on Manufactures. Senator Washburn takes Senator Palmer's place on the Commerce Committee.

Aswarthy's Vessels.

Two vessels, the Keystone and the Master, belonging to Aswarthy, the Cleveland dealer, were sold at Sheriff's sale at Duluth, Minn. They were bought by a representative of the Oglo Boat Syndicate for $54,000.

Heavy Liabilities.

William Burgess, a canner at Mimico, Ontario, has disappeared, leaving liabilities estimated at $50,000.

DUN & CO.'S WEEKLY REVIEW.

A Big Iron Trade Expected This Unsettle Business—Trade Improving.

In their review of trade for the last week, R. G. Dun & Co. say:

The failure of an important iron establishment at Philadelphia, which was followed by a feeling of increasing confidence which seems to be well founded, has caused some hesitation in the iron business in prospect of a decline in Pittsburgh prices, were a little better, and at Philadelphia and New York there was more inquiry and value. But the Reading failure has so checked the hopes of a revival of business in that city that a real market is dependent, but actual sales are small. Pittsburgh reports a decided improvement in demand, one day consumed coal is dull. Lead is inactive at 3c and tin has risen a fraction, but other metals have been advanced nearly 1 cent to 10. Wool is firmer at Boston, but more nearly at the old prices, and there is a better feeling. After declining sharply to 70½ cents, a fall of 3 cents, cotton has risen to 71½ cents, but the decline was due to further information of the large crop, and the rise to the belief that the crop will be much smaller than at first expected. Corn and oats have risen a little, and wheat has fluctuated, but prices are 1½ cents lower than a week ago. The failure of cotton has had some unsettlement in the South, and there is more hesitation in the West about buying, but sales are still in excess of those of last year, and the tone of the wool market is decidedly better. Manufacturers report that the spring city business is not so large as last year, but that it is more satisfactory than a regular. Reports from interior towns generally show a good demand for money, the reports of slow collections are not so numerous, and the failures are fewer, but business is more than it disappointed, and the outlook is not encouraging. No change in the general situation has been observed during the week short-sighted of a per cent. Business failures number for Canada, 25 as against 20 in the previous week.

A STARTLING HUMOR CURRENT.

The Nipsic Said to Have Been Blown Up by the German Olga.

A San Francisco, Cal., special of the 8th inst. is as follows:

One of the most sensatory naval battles in American waters since the Civil War is reported to have taken place off Apia, Samoa, and to have been blown out of the water by a German man-of-war, the Nipsic being sunk by the American vessel on the ripple. The Nipsic was one of the finest of the American fleet, and was considered a formidable adversary. Nothing is known of the disaster, but it is believed that the Americans with contempt. All this at the ground for the belief is in the fact that positive advices are received here to the effect that the New York Herald has received a telegram from Consul Gordon Bennett, at Paris, which is to the effect that the Nipsic is a total loss. Mr. Bennett claims the Herald has a dispatch direct from Samoa, but it is believed also that the naval officers at Washington telegraphed to a naval officer at Honolulu Island, and confirming the Herald dispatch, the Herald dispatch referred to is a fabrication. The Herald dispatch gives the details of a previous private telegram from Samoa. The German frigate Olga has disembarked Bismark's camp. The capture of the American man-of-war proceeded, but, the Olga was disabled in the engagement, and the crew, 3,400 strong, fled in panic and in much damage. The Olga then directed a torpedo at the American ship, the result of which is unknown.

NOT SIGNED BY THE PRESIDENT.

A List of the Bills Which Failed to Become Laws.

The following is a list of the bills which did not receive the President's signature before the adjournment of Congress and failed to become laws:

The act for a bridge across the Arkansas River, near Canadian landing, Ark; the act to require the United States Circuit and District Courts to hold a term at Fort Worth, Tex.; the act to create a land office at Lakewood, Ore., and the act for a National Cemetery in right of way through the Indian Territory; the bill for the relief of Mrs. Lucy Lee Hancock; the bill for the relief of Lieut. Commander Bowman H. Mc Calla, U. S. N.; the bill for the relief of Lieut. Commander Frank Wildes, U. S. N.;

He Got Away With It.

A short old man in a long gray beard and an armful of Christmas goods passed through Fulton market at noon and stopped at a well-loaded stand of grapes were displayed.

"Here you are!" yelled the proprietor to the man. "Concords, Catawbas and Malagas!"

The small man stopped, hesitated for a moment, as if to free himself from an instinctively pulled off a bunch in a basket of Concords, ate them up, declared that he tried a bunch of Catawbas, and began on the Malagas.

The fruit vender, who had with a customer, now had a short man's actions with.

"How much for grapes?" he asked laconically, eating a Malaga.

"Forty cents a basket."

"Too much," said the man, throwing away two more Concords.

"Are you a wholesale dealer?"

"No."

"Own a vineyard, then, or wine?"

"No."

"Where did you learn to eat?"

"Over in Jersey."

"Well, see here, old man, I'm about a pound and a half of grapes, cents, or I'll do that business over again. I know how hard, and then go over to Jersey; we don't want no grapes around here."—New York Sun.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

For Justice of the Supreme Court—
THOMAS R. SHERWOOD.
For Regents of the University—
WORTHY L. CHURCHILL.
JOHN S. LAWRENCE.

A TWENTY million dollar steel trust has been formed in Chicago.

J. S. CLARKSON of Iowa has been appointed first assistant postmaster general.

Be sure and vote to give the governor of Michigan a decent salary. It is a shame to pay him less than the janitor at the state capitol receives, and it prevents all but rich men from being governor.

THE first postoffices that will be filled by President Harrison in Michigan are those at Bangor, Ironwood, Newaygo, Nashville, Fowlerville, Ionia, Vandalia, Morenci, and Au Sable. The democratic appointees at these towns all failed of confirmation by the senate.

A GREAT English syndicate is buying up all the American breweries it can get hold of, and apparently cares little what it pays for them. This would be an excellent chance for our brewers to unload before Prohibition comes along, they will be ahead just the amount they get out of the Englishmen.

Note the following bit of humor from the Petoskey Record: "WANTED—A first-class boss and a couple of good workers to organize and assist the republican party in Petoskey to do that. To persons who have a good moral character in addition to the 'git thar' stroke, extra inducements will be offered. Address, with terms: 'The Republican Village Committee.'"

THE Michigan Salt Association has joined the Salt Trust, and the price of salt will go up. The millers are now organizing to control the grain market, so as to bear the price of wheat and corn down next fall. It looks hilious for our grangers friends, but they voted to continue the school experience for "four years more," with the grand old party as Professor and supply it with a seasoned birch rod. We hope they will be graduated by 1892.

Some Reasons Why Judge Sherwood Should be Returned.

The republican press seems to think that in the coming judicial contest it has on hand a political struggle for place in which the usual appeal to prejudices and party strifes are to form the principal incentive in driving to the state an able and independent judiciary. This, however, is not, and never has been, the view taken by the intelligent voters of this state, so far as relates to our supreme court. The great business interests of the country, and the business men engaged in railroading, manufacturing, mining, commerce and agriculture, are not given to changing judges of ability and opinions upon our supreme bench for those who are yet untried and without experience. The selection of the members of that court should be removed just as far from party politics and prejudices and political methods as possible and such is the unbiased feeling of all our people. No person was ever occupied a seat upon that bench with greater satisfaction to the bar, to the people, and to the state than has Chief Justice Sherwood during the last six years. The great labor and ability he has brought to bear in the discharge of his duties has not only astonished his friends, but commanded the respect of his enemies and assigned to him a place among the ablest jurists in the country and he has shown himself in every case he has written more than master of the subject presented and the questions involved for solution. He was re-nominated by a rising vote in the convention re-nominating him and before the question could be fairly put on every delegate was upon his feet, and we do not believe there is a man in the state who would oppose his majority on election day if less than 50,000, only as reduced by the necessities of partisan intrigue and party policy.—Kalamazoo Gazette.

A TRULY GOOD MAN.

The pious Philadelphia merchant who dropped $400,000 into the slot and saw a cabinet portfolio come up is a typical protectionist.

The New York World published an elaborate description of Mr. Wanamaker's factory in Berlin, Germany, where girls are paid the fabulous sum of 60 cents for making a $20 cloak. He advocates protecting American labor but has his goods made at his sweat shop Berlin. Mr. Wanamaker's cloaks are all made on the contract system and the average earnings of the girls he employs is $2.40 a week.

This is the record of the sincere "friend of American labor" who raises a nearly half a million dollars to put the candidate of the protectionists and monopolists in the Presidential chair.

It is hard to imagine a more disinterested patriot. Of course he had no thought save to relieve the lot of those who toil. His intimacy with Quay that able professional sympathizer with labor, proves the true goodness of his nature. He would scorn to pay $400,000 for a piece of official distinction, but he would cheerfully spend that sum to alleviate the hard condition of American workingmen. It is seldom that such a guileless and philanthropic individual as Wanamaker is met with in actual life. It is a small wonder that Harrison picked him out for his Postmaster General as soon as he heard of him—and his contributions.—Lansing Journal.

Hon. W. L. Churchill.

Hon. Worthy L. Churchill, the democratic candidate for regent of the university, is a native of Batavia, Ill. At an early age he moved with his parents to Davenport, Iowa, where he attended Griswold college. Afterwards removed to Geneva, New York, and finished his education at the Walnut Hill college. His father was a prominent lawyer and designed his son for the same profession, but he decided to take up civil engineering as a business. In 1869 he purchased a portable saw mill, hired a crew to run it and started for Pike's Peak, but kept on until he reached San Francisco. From there he removed to Mississippi, where he engaged in business; remained until the breaking out of the war, when he came north. Was for a while in the wholesale grocery business, but in 1869 engaged in lumbering and the manufacture of sash, doors, etc. He then published the Universal Moulding book, which is yet a standard in that line of business. In 1871 he located at Alpena, Mich., where in connection with his brother, H. D. Churchill, he purchased a large saw mill plant, which they ran in connection with their Chicago lumber yard. After two years he closed out the Chicago business and concentrated everything in Alpena. Three years ago he purchased the old Fletcher house, moved it up town, and named it the Churchill. It is today one of the finest hotels in the state. He has been successful in his business operations, and is noted for his energetic, able and methodical management of all enterprises he undertakes. He is a gentleman of fine presence, very popular at home, and is universally respected by all with whom he comes in contact. He has served as mayor of Alpena, and also represented his county in the state legislature. His name is prominently mentioned in connection with the democratic nomination for congressman in his district next fall. He has all the qualifications necessary for a regent of our State university, and cannot fail to poll a fine vote.

THE SUPREME JUSTICE.

It would be a work of supererogation for THE JOURNAL to dilate upon the importance of the approaching election of a member of the Supreme Court of the State. The people of Michigan know the worth of a judiciary that holds the scales with even hand and interprets the laws with a clearness and ability that have excited the admiration of the bench and bar everywhere. It has been the good fortune of this state to always possess a supreme judiciary of this pure, exalted and able character. The personnel of the present court is not inferior to that any period since the organization of that tribunal. It embraces as much of individual purity, learning, acumen, industry and justice as it did when COOLEY, GRAVES and CAMPBELL were the compeers of the venerated Nestor of the present court. It remains to be seen whether the voters of the State desire to express by their verdict next spring the spiritual which they would not hesitate to bestow upon the splendid record of the Supreme Court if they were left free to act as patriotic citizens instead of as partisans bound to obey the dictates of political bosses.

The member of the Supreme Court whose term expires this year is T. R. SHERWOOD. He was elected in 1883 as a Fusionist. He is able, honest, spotless man. No wearer of the ermine has ever dishonored office with greater conscientiousness or fidelity. It can truly be said of him that he holds the place he occupies by virtue of his brains, character, knowledge and industry. His nature is frank, sincere and devoid of guile. The members of the bar irrespective of party, will bear us out in saying that a more profound love of justice never abode in the human heart than Chief Justice Sherwood has exhibited throughout his distinguished career on the bench. He loves truth for truth's sake. His character is symmetrical and lovable. As a friend of his once remarked to the writer: "I have seen Justice Sherwood in difficult places and under various trials, circumstances and situations, and when every criticism has been fairly and unreservedly pronounced, I can add without too much hyperbole that

> None knew him but to love him;
> None name him but to praise."

He is indeed a grand character. His simple, manly and unostentatious life has raised him to the top notch in the esteem of those who know him well. It would be a great loss to the Supreme Bench if a man who has devoted himself so unremittingly, so conscientiously and so earnestly to his high duties as THOMAS R. SHERWOOD, is retired at the close of his first term. We do not believe that the people will vote to put an inexperienced man in the place of such a veteran and capable jurist.—Lansing Journal.

A Big Project.

Lansing, March 18.—W. H. Morrill of New York, arrived here to day to endeavor to induce the Legislature to grant a charter to the proposed ship canal across the Upper Peninsula connecting Lakes Michigan and Superior. The route selected is thirty six miles long and begins at Bay-au-Train, about fifteen miles east of Marquette. The southern terminus will be Little Bay de Noque, near Gladstone. Two locks will be necessary, and its projectors state the cost will be less than the proposed canal improvements at Sault St. Marie. It will save ship commerce a distance of 271 miles each way between Duluth and Chicago. Mr. Morrill says that he has an abundance of New York and Chicago capital interested and that the ship canal company will be organized within sixty days after a charter is granted. Senator Stockbridge is looking after the matter in Congress.

Miller Bros., Bay City, are building a vessel on the old plan which will be a surprise to sailors. She will be a brigantine in rig, including a bandspike windlass, will be steered by a tiller, and will have her cooking galley amidships on deck.

The New Discovery.

You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it is, that when once given a trial, no ship's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any throat, lung or chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial Bottles free at F. G. Hinsch & Co.'s drug store.

Promptness.

First a cold, then a cough, then consumption, then death. "I took one dose of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for Consumption the moment I began to cough, and I believe it saved my life."—Walter N. Wallace, Washington. Sold by G. W. Beaman, druggist.

On Monday, Alick Rosenthal moved into the north store of the Lewis block, and a large force of workmen are making the changes and enlargement of the one just vacated. When completed it will be a handsome store.

☞ "That tired, debilitated feeling, so I peculiar to spring indicates depraved blood. Now is the time to prove the beneficial effects of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It cleanses the system, restores physical energy, and infuses new life and vigor into every fibre of body."

Easter Sunday is the Sunday after the first full moon falling on or after March 21. The council of Nice so fixed it and we don't know of any authority that is likely to change it. You can now hunt up the position of the moon and the old hens nest and make a proper conjunction.—Ex.

On Friday, Mrs. A. G. Cook received a telegram announcing the severe illness of her brother, R. Brainard, at Hartford, Mich., and she started at once to see him. He died on Saturday two days before she reached there. At one time Mr. Brainard worked in the Sentinel office, and for a number of years at Petoskey, and had many friends in this region.

One dollar and fifty cents is not a very large sum standing alone, but ninety bills for $1.50 each aggregate $135.00. That is the amount we asked for by mail this week, and of the answers so far received, two in five ordered the paper discontinued, apparently mad because we asked for what is due. It takes money to run a newspaper, and we must have some.

Petoskey schools have regular fire drill and the Record notes results as follows: "At the last fire-drill, the Howard street building was emptied in two minutes and thirty seconds, the children taking every book with them. The children take great interest in these drills and are as spry as crickets. These drills may be priceless in their results some day."

By one of the aggravating accidents never satisfactorily explained outside of a printing office, the name of S. M. See was omitted from the committee who went to Chicago to examine the Ruttan system of heating and ventilating for school houses. Mr. See was one of the party, and his name was intended to have been included.

Annie M. Metcalf, teacher in district No. 8, Norwood township, reports the following pupils neither absent or tardy during the month ending March 11th: Charlie Kendall, Ora Bowdish, Clara O'Brien, Byron Bowdish, Herbert Wallace, Dora Wheaton, Lottie Hantz, Horace Sanboura, Yettie Hantz, Ethel Sanbourn, George Hanalin, Bertha Heisa, Herbert Hanalin, Paul Heisa, George Thier.

The Charlevoix band is preparing a big surprise party for our people. The boys are rehearsing some high-grade music, under the leadership of Mr. Frank McGibeny. At Kirby's wagon shop is being built an elegant chariot for use of the boys in their semeweekly open-air concerts next summer. It is proposed to make this the best band in northern Michigan, and the boys will not stop short of success.

The committee which met at this place last week to decide upon a location for the proposed Congregational college before taking definite action regarding the matter, appointed a committee of five, consisting of Rev. Leroy Warner, of Lansing, Rev. E. W. Miller, of Big Rapids, A. O. Downs, of Charlevoix, L. M. Kanagy, of Banks, and H. B. Hudson, of Manceilona, to visit the competing points and report to the full committee at a meeting to be held early in June. The competing points are Traverse City, Cadillac and Benzonia.—Manceilona Herald.

SPECIAL SCHOOL MEETING.

Size, Plans, and Kind of Material for New Building Decided.

At the special meeting of District No. 1 last night, Robert Miller acted as chairman, and Robert W. Kane secretary. The committee appointed at the last meeting to present plans and specifications for a new building made their report, which was accepted and placed on file.

After considerable discussion, a plan was adopted, an outline of which is shown in the following diagram:

PLAN OF FIRST FLOOR.

PLAN OF SECOND FLOOR.

It was decided to build the walls of solid brick, on a stone foundation.

On the question of heating and ventilating, Mr. Buttars, for the committee, explained the Ruttan system as seen by them on their trip to Chicago, and after a quite thorough discussion and comparison of figures giving cost of construction, operating, etc., of various systems, it was decided to adopt the Ruttan.

The committee recommended, and the district adopted, a resolution to build by days' works, rather than by contract, and to give preference to resident mechanics.

The committee estimated the cost to be about $14,000, which will include seating, and everything ready for occupancy.

A building committee consisting of Messrs. Eaton, See, Lewis, Nicholls, and Fox were appointed, to act in connection with the school board, who were to have general charge of construction, purchasing of material, etc.

The building will face the east, with the main entrance on that side, under the tower, but there will be entrances on both north and south ends. The main stair-case will be at the west end of the hall, but there will be an extra stair-case on the north end, so arranged that there can be no possible danger to life on account of lack of means of exit.

Lack of time prevents us complete a description of the building as we would like to make this week.

Bonds of the district will be issued and the work will proceed as rapidly as possible.

A Sound Legal Opinion.

A LYRIC NOTE.

We'll listen to news
That is trite and diffuse
And let bores take a seat on the floor.
If they'll only have sense
To the pains present issue
To let tales be fathered by the floor.

ANTICIPATION.

Life's sand of time now ever nestl.
Nor credits us for what we've done;
Our highest hope, our greatest wealth
Lies in the pleasure of pursuing.

So measure we our each away;
In sunshine and in sorrow,
Still, what we are today,
But what we hope to be to-morrow

SAVING HARD SINNERS.

BY JOHN STEPHEN.

Two commercial travelers sat in the office of the Brunswick Hotel. "Tom," said the younger, I have just obtained an inside position in the firm, and will leave the road, I imagine, for some time. I have had enough of hotel and restaurant life, and am determined to try the portal of home, if not home itself, a boarding house. Do you know of any good place?

"No, Jim. I've not been boarding for years. The best way is to put an advertisement in one of the Sunday papers, and you will have plenty of replies, for Chicago is divided into residences, those who board and those who keep house."

"I should like to get a nice, quiet place, where I could have some home comforts, a little music, a chat in the parlor, and that sort of thing, you know."

"Oh, yes, I know all about it, Mr. James Barclay. You have got romantic notions of boarding houses and expect to find in them all the comforts of home, but you will learn that there is no place like home, and trying to find a substitute in a boarding house is like trying to gather figs from thistles and grapes from thorns."

"Come now, 'was the cheery rejoinder, 'don't try to discourage me. I think I can get through an advertisement just the place I want.

"No doubt you may. It seems to me there is nothing under the sun that may not be obtained through the medium of an advertisement."

"Yes, I believe you. And I don't think there is anything one ridiculous on earth in the way of an advertisement that will not elicit a reply."

"I ben, suppose you illustrate the truth of you own theory by advertising for 4o.rd to some quaint, out of the way manor, that will ward off the average rascal professional boarding-house keepers, and bring to your relief one of those matronly souls, full of the milk of human kindness, who only keep boarders for the sake of company, and are entirely above mercenary motives?

"Since you have been talking I have framed an advertisement, which you, no doubt, may consider ridiculous, but I bet you a supper at Kinsley's I shall get an answer to it. Here it is."

Mr. James Barclay, taking a pencil and note book from his pocket, wrote the following:

"Board Wanted—A young gentleman, with the best of references, desires board in a refined, social family, where social position, where his editying conduct will be considered an sufficient compensation for his board.

"Did you ever hear of such assurance? Does this person really expect to find people to board him for the benefit of his edifying conduct?

"It has been a singular advertisement," replied the mother. "I have heard many a misdeeds of taking boarders to our companions, but not without compensation.

"Perhaps this editying person's conduct might be of some good to Harry; but the probabilities are that he is a good-goody divinity student, and you know Harry is something of a Robert Elsmere and has peculiar views on religion."

"But, my dear, you are taking for granted that the advertiser is a divinity student. In all probability he is a very different sort of person, and states he has the best of references. Suppose you write him a note and request him to call?

"In a few days after the insertion of the advertisement Mr. James Barclay called at the newspaper office and received but two replies. One of them was a lady desirous of "the good young man will apply at the gambreling, mansard and a field for his editying conduct, as the present Chaplain is off on a vacation."

"Guess that won't sink," said Mr. James Barclay, with a grim smile. "It looks like a put-up job; there is a strong resemblance in some of these scrawls to Tom ·temple's handwriting; but he is one who we've got here."

The other answer was a dainty missive in a feminine hand, requesting the advertiser to call at a certain residence on Michigan avenue. It was exceedingly brief, though courteous.

"Turning to the clerk with some degree of satisfaction, he demanded to know if there were no other replies, and left with an impatient shake of the head when one was but an advertising clerk feel uncomfortable.

On this little missive, therefore, hung the truth of a lonely old man's evening supper. But Mr. Barclay was a man of resolution, and after a careful toilet rang at the residence on Michigan avenue.

"Hugo, this is simplicity itself, he mutered, as his wandering eye took in the elegant surroundings. "If I get accustomed to them here, I'll be inclined to think the place I want, I've yet seen is a hamlet to this place."

His reveries were cut short by the appearance of two ladies, who gave him a cordial their most genial visitor-epis ned the object of his call.

The younger, Miss Susan Pelford, was a lady of convictions. She had conceived the idea that the writer of such an advertisement must surely be a divinity student, and thus she regarded him.

Mr. Barclay, she said, reading his card, and then proceeding straightway to open the campaign, "My mother and I, the other evening, were discussing the advisability of having some company in the house for the benefit of my brother, who was with us over a month one time ago, and has been confined to the house. We have just arrived at a decision, and were prepared to answer it, but I must forewarn you that my brother has let a very serious acquaintance with those of other cities, and to speak of Chicago with quiet scorn. They love to jump with pleasure when they their five mayors, neither one of whom lives out in our ward, and that no one near one of the others would be sold even for a horse car. They also speak with some acrimony of the last time Chicago justice of the peace, who used to be in the shoe store on Clark bell. He had a deaf and dumb waiter and a boy who was a cripple and spoke talking, by means of which he and refer difficult points of law to a learned chemist in his office adjoining a strange thing occurred. It has nothing to do with anything else, and I do not put it in here in order to teach a valuable lesson. It is just a simple unadvertised fact.

A shy young man decided to abandon a venerable pair of trousers to its fate, having put around a new pair as he went on the boat. So he said to himself, I will go into the room of my cabin window into the remorseless tide, and all will be buried in the great, calm bosom of the old parent of waters. He rolled them up carefully and tied them fast, for fear of the dangling wale of the boat near the bow. As they sped through the air they unfurled with a soul-piercing plunk. They filled with air and looked as they struck on the crest of the waves like a man stooping over to peer down into the depths of the tide. A nervous woman about middleage heard the impact of the pantaloons and looked out, looking down with a slumber said: "Mr. Gill, a human being has went to his account." She then became the author of a long poly and all hands rushed to the boat and long-suffering Mr. Gill, the author of the "Man overboard." that awful cry which never fails to bring a crowd in a hundred hands with boat hooks and rubbish opened up to the lower decks, and amid the cries of women and the quick-drawn breath of pale men, a tall gentleman jumped from the bulwarks in the vitals with a jabber, and, while fainting passengers looked at the other way, he pulled out the now collapsed trousers and found on the inside of the waistband the name of the owner, also the leg and waist measurement, together with the name of a St. Louis tailor. Then they began to hunt over the boat and in the dying of the river for the man who had occupied the trousers aforetime, and that shy young man's name was in every mouth and he didn't dare to come down for his breakfast, and he jet black mustache, which could be distinctly seen when he left St. Louis from fright turned around and went white.

A Very Fertile Country.

A few years since there resided at Newton, Kan., a gentleman by the name of Schmidt, who was general land agent for the Atchison Topeka and Santa Fe railroad. A large party of capitalists from New York and the old country came to Kansas with a view of making heavy investments.

Schmidt was called upon to show these men around, and right royally did he do it.

Taking them out in the prairies far from the railroad, Schmidt would in a few words point out the many advantages of the climate, soil, etc. As one farmer would hold up a clod, and think this or that could not be raised there, he would walk a few miles further and show them just the soil needed for that kind of grain or fruit. At last one of the gentlemen spoke up:

"Mr. Schmidt, I find after going around with you, there is nothing that can cannot raise in Kansas."

To this, Schmidt quietly replied: "I forgot to tell you, gentlemen, that you cannot raise pumpkins in Kansas."

"Why is that?" they all, with one voice, inquired.

"Well, you see, this land is so very rich, and the vines grow so rapidly, that they wear the pumpkins all out dragging them along the ground.

At any one denies this, the land is still to be seen.

Paralyzed by Chewing Gum.

The most remarkable case that has come under the observation of the medical fraternity in this city for a long time is that of Mary Yountz, aged 12 years, who is suffering from facial paralysis. This affliction is due to chewing gum, she having employed the use of her jaws so constantly during the last three months that the muscles of her face are powerless and her nerves are in a dilapidated condition. When she laughs her face presents an amusing sight, and yet there is much sympathy felt for the little girl, as her condition is regarded as a serious one by the physicians who have been called upon to treat her. In whatever position she is able to twist her mouth the muscles remain, and the face is thus in a contorted shape until one of the members of her family assists her with their hands to place it in proper condition. Her chin drops, and it frequently becomes necessary to tie a bandage over her head to keep the lower jaw in the proper place. Mary is now under the care of Dr. Ehrlich, who is applying plasters to her face, and under his treatment she seems to be improving, though slowly.—Philadelphia Press.

BILL NYE IN ST. LOUIS.

It Is Doing a Man a Service There to Lock Him Up.—An Exciting Episode Involving the Fate of a Fool Traveler.

ST. LOUIS is the only city I have ever visited where it seemed like taking a man as a delicate tribute to arrest him. When you are arrested in St. Louis you do not go immediately to the sacred station by the means of the scruff of your neck, through a hooting and mobbing crowd, but the policeman who has arrested you sends in a signal from the nearest box, and directly a hack comes out, or, if it be a Sunday, as the American has it, a beautiful six-horsed drayful, with Bissop William-Riley-and-come-along-with-me phaeton, drawn by early cultivated and well-fed horses, dashes up to the curb, driven by an Olive street goodoir. You bound lightly into the beautifully fleeked chariot, a tiny silver gong about the size of a mustard pot tinkles merrily, and away you go, scouring the city and leaving the people who have never been under arrest.

But how, after the hot and pungent render, can St. Louis afford to do this, while in a city like New York the delicate attention of a hack would tention-house or forego the joys of arrest entirely. The average fine, after the criminal pays $5.50 for an arrest which he used to get at $1. This pays the cross-bars and makes it seem like something to look back to with pleasure. People who live in the city and become arrested from time to time do not care for hacks and long-suffering Mr. Barclay was a man of resolution, and after a careful toilet rang at the residence on Michigan avenue.

"Hugo, this is simplicity itself, he mutered, as his wandering eye took in the elegant surroundings. "If I get accustomed to them here, I'll be inclined to think the place I've yet seen is a hamlet to this place."

AN exchange speaks of a woman as being the only one left of her kind. But how can a woman be the only circumlocution?

JOHN, if I got as interested as you do I'd shoot myself. Prosecu—If you was a toxicated as I am you could not hit a barn door.

SNAGGS—I see an Elmira minister preached last Sunday on "What can I do to be saved?" Edgar—Seems to me one of the first moves would be to get out of Illinois.

WOMAN is rarely able to sharpen a lead pencil or drive a nail in the proper way, but she generally knows how to massage a husband and that's a good deal tougher job.

EDITOR—You say that your habits are all correct. Applicant—Yes, sir. I always offer a prayer before I pass—Do you drink? Applicant—Sometimes—Thanks. Don't care if I do.

FOR the sake of humanity and humanity it is earnestly hoped Mr. Edison will never hear any sort of a machine which will enable people to hear what is said about them behind their backs.

WIFE (reading morning paper)—Why, the Mormons actually call this the right of having two, three, and sometimes four wives at one time. Husband—Why, at that rate, I wonder ever hope to be a widower.

FUNNY (who has given his concert)—I hope, young man, that you know the value of the prize you will get in my daughter? Young man—Well—er—sir, I don't know the exact value; but as near as I can find out, it's in the neighborhood of $25,000.

FOOD carging with Brown—I tell you prohibition will never prohibit. If they pass the constitutional amendment we shall have free rum. Mrs. J.—(suddenly interested)—O, that'll be a great saving to you, won't it, Dick? You'll be able to buy me the sea skin sack next winter.

BIRKE Coachman (colored)—I thought you saved yoah folk; was so dog gone rich. Jinks Coachman (colored)—Ah, yes, I saved my money. Birke Coachman—Huh! I guess not. I loaded up de winder last night an' seen two oh de young ladies playin' on de same piany. Guess you all has her some mire.

"AH," she said, with a troublous vibrator little sigh, "true happiness is something that is rarely experienced, is it?" "Yes," he replied, "rarely, and yet I have known it." "When?" "This evening." "With me?" "Yes; about five minutes ago, when you told me that your father was laid up with rheumatism in his right leg."

A MADON'S PRAYER.

A maiden of uncertain age
To catch a husband did engage
And having passed the prime of life
Is striving to become a wife.
Beneath an oak this ancient maid
Knelt down and thus her prayer prayed:
"Send, send a husband, Lord, to me,
While yet I may become a bride.
Else I'll die without an ear I love
And none to meet me in Heaven above."
Then from the heavens a voice did call
Deep, hoarse yet sweet, and said, "Hold on awhile"
"And dost Thou ask me, you Lord, who?
"Why, my man, dear Lord, who do?"
—Washington Critic.

First department official (at Washington)—I had a strange experience to-day—strange, I mean. Second department official—You look as if you'd seen a ghost. Come, tell me the story, anything to relieve the monotony. It is not a ghost story. It's all flesh and blood. "Well, well! (cut with it." "A man came to me to-day to ask about a matter which I could refer to any other department, and I actually had to attend to it myself."

Rumors—The nurse says, mum, that yez worr in the kitchen while I worr out? Mistress (timidly)—Yes, Bridget—Yis—indade, mum; an what wud ye think if I wint into your hood wu when ye worr out? Mistress (more timidly)—I should think it strange, Bridget. Bridget (emboldened a little as she shattens a piece of Sevres on the floor)—Well, mum, but begorr if yez will stick to yez own parlor of the house O'll stick to mine.

CHOICE TEXAS LANDS
Rare Chance for Settlers.
The Railway Lands of Texas have been divided into farms, within easy access of good markets and schools, and are now offered for sale on HOUSTON & TEXAS CENT'L RY. CO.
Most favorable terms ever offered by any Railroad Company in the United States.
Renowned Agricult'l Lands
Located along the line of the Fort Worth & Denver City Railway, in Northern Texas.
200,000 ACRES
In farms of 40 acres and upward. These lands were formerly in the hands of the Texas Pacific Railroad Company, and are now offered for sale at the same prices and on the same terms as those of the Houston & Texas Cent'l Railway, which have been so highly commended by thousands who have purchased and settled upon them.
Thousands of acres of these lands are in the most productive portion of the great wheat belt of Texas, they possess great climatic advantages, favorable to man and beast, where the farmer can raise his crop of wheat, and have it safely housed in his barn, and ready for market early and late in the season, without the risk of being injured by inclement weather.
Texas is fast becoming the great wheat producing State of the Union. Our climate is healthy, the soil is productive, and the markets are good. Our lands are offered for sale on long time, with interest on deferred payments, and we invite the attention of the public to our lands, as we believe we can offer inducements to farmers and lands in Texas not to be found elsewhere.

The Answer to the Conundrum.
"If you will observe," said the philosophical traveling man, "you will agree with me that for the most part our likes and dislikes are utterly unnatural—without any logical foundation whatever."
"I can't agree with you."
"Well, I'll prove it to you. Now, I observe that you are very fond of ginger ale. Now, why do you drink it?"
"Because I like it."
"Precisely. I knew you would say that. But can you go a step further and tell me why you like it?"
"Yes, I can."
"Indeed! and why?"
"Because it doesn't make me drunk."

A Terrible Misfortune.
It is the earnest desire of the best kind to feel that one's physical energies are failing in the prime of life—to feel more nervous, more disposed, weaker every day. Yet this is the unhappy lot of hundreds who surround us. A source of renewed strength, which science approves, is the best of such mortuaries of the debilitated have not yet reached the last stage of life, and which, in the instance, has built up constitutions supposed to be wrecked beyond repair. It is a vegetable tonic, combined with a wholesome stimulant, and is adapted to all who need a tonic. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a medicine of great merit, ranking in the opinion of the medical profession as the most efficacious preventive of dyspepsia, and as a tonic it is unsurpassed for invigorating the system. Sold by all druggists and dealers generally.

A TRAVELING MAN
Creates Great Excitement in the Empire House.
INDEPENDENCE, Iowa, Feb. 14, 1888.
Rheumatic Syrup Co., Jackson, Mich.:
Gentlemen—I am a traveling man here to-night and registered as agent for Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, and as he did not feel well enough to use his interest never before realized what a blessing it is to be well. I will say, I will tell you the story. For years I have been a sufferer from rheumatism. Grease would not relieve the pain and soreness of the joints at times I could not move without assistance, and was obliged to use of crutches. In addition to this, my stomach became so disordered that I could reign not in, which threatened to end my life. I was induced to try your Syrup, and gave quite a history of your Syrup, and the peculiarities of its combination, which, in

Not long ago this old gentleman was a sour, despondent, dyspeptic, invalid, with torpid liver, sallow complexion, irritable temper, and was inkarkably miserable, both mentally and physically. Now, as the result of taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, he leads the boys at the running jump, and makes himself a pleasant companion generally. For all Liver, Blood, and Lung Diseases, "Golden Medical Discovery" has no equal. It purifies the blood, infuses new life, spirits and vigor into the debilitated and despondent; banishes that "tired feeling" of which so many complain, and builds up both flesh and strength when reduced below the usual standard of health.

WARRANTED. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the only Liver, Blood and Lung Remedy guaranteed to benefit or cure all diseases for which it is recommended, or the money paid for it will be promptly returned. Sold by druggists, the world over.

SCROFULA.
Of all the ills that human flesh is heir to, Scrofula is most prevalent. Very few, indeed, are entirely free from some taint of Scrofula. Young people of delicate constitution are often afflicted by this disease, which manifests itself in various forms. The glands of the neck, groin, abdomen, etc., become enlarged, either persistently or with slight impairment of health.

Swellings in the Neck frequently become so engorged with scrofulous matter that abscesses are formed. Painful running sores may also appear on the arms, legs, and feet, sometimes continuous and sometimes of an intermittent character. Occasionally the disease attacks the bones, causing pain in about the eyes, causing deafness and blindness. Pimples, cancerous growths, swollen joints, etc., are other symptoms of the disease. It must be treated through the blood if a permanent cure is to be effected.

What is more beautiful than a rich, soft complexion in man or woman? This can be obtained only by the eradication of all scrofulous taints from the blood by the persistent use of

Wilson.

Still warm and pleasant.

Wagons and buggies are all the go at present.

Dugald and Johnnie McMillan Sundayed at their home in Echo.

Elder Tracy preached to a small congregation on Sunday last. We believe he has joined the M. E. denomination.

Everybody and his son went to East Jordan on Saturday last, at least the streets looked so to a casual observer, and worse to tell, some went home rather tight.

Mrs. Chas Campbell of East Jordan, went home today, after spending two weeks with her friend, Mrs. Hudkins.

The neighbors and friends of J. R. Vance surprised him on Monday night, it being his 30th birthday. A good time was enjoyed.

We rise to explain; On that cold Sunday it was 16° below zero on Sunday morn, instead of noon a printed. It isn't quite as cold here as it towns on the lake but they fail to register thermometer as cold as it is generally.

East Jordan.

From the Enterprise.

Chas. G. Lewis will leave here April 1st for Findlay, Ohio, where he will develop as a building speculator.

W. L. French left for Chicago Tuesday morning to make arrangements for the coming bark season.

Forty new voters registered on Saturday last, and 176 men went to the polls. The largest number of votes ever cast at a village election in East Jordan.

The atmosphere was made so sultry election day that the snow began to melt in the street, and is now nearly all gone.

The election of village officers on Monday last proved a complete victory for the anti-waterworks party. East Jordan.

fight was long and earnest, but the supporters of the council were swamped by the numbers their opponents got to the polls. This question has been a heated one for some time, and now the promoters are in the minority, the opposition will have a good opportunity of showing their constituents how things should be done.

Atwood.

MARCH 18.—Mr. and Mrs. Pankett and daughter, and Mrs. Hood made a short visit to Mr. Brown's of Mancelona, last week.

S. A. Brown has stopped shoveling snow and the sleighing has busted.

Township caucus is called for the 23d at 2 o'clock p. m., in the town hall.

There is an earnest inquiry among the farmers if this really is spring.

Henry Kanagy had a narrow escape in D. Flannigan's saw mill last week, caused by trying to poke back frozen sawdust from under the saw when it was in motion.

Some of the boys are getting the Western fever.

Egbert Vanderstreet and Harry Kooman leave for Jamestown this week for a short visit.

D. Flannigan moves his sawmill from Kewadin to Antrim City Wednesday.

E. Byers returned from East Jordan Sunday.

Barnard.

MARCH 19.—The snow is fast disappearing.

Most of the boys are home from the lumber woods.

Mrs. William Clark has taken Mr. Wilkinson's place as singing school teacher.

Elder Shapton had the misfortune to lose one of his horses last week while coming from the lumber woods.

Miss Cora Chew closes her winter term of school here next Friday.

There will be no church here Sunday on account of quarterly meeting at Norwood.

There was about thirty cords of wood cut at Mr. Gregory's bee on Tuesday.

A Narrow Escape.

Col. W. K. Nelson, of Brooklyn, came home one evening feeling a peculiar tightness in the chest. Before retiring, he tried to draw a long breath but found it almost impossible. He suffered four days from pneumonia, and the doctors gave him up. Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption saved him and he is well to-day. Sold by G. W. Beaman, druggist.

Ellsworth.

MARCH 11.—Sleighing is almost gone, but the logs still continue to come to the new mill.

W. A. Boss lost one of his horses Sunday night.

Miss Minnie Norton of Wilson visited old friends here last week.

Miss Annie Ogeltree is preparing her scholars to give an exhibition the last day of her school.

Louis Deline sprained his ankle last week which laid him up for a few days.

Rev. Ten Eyck of Central Lake, preached here twice last Sunday.

Echo.

Our two months sleighing is past.

Alfred Scofield is getting better.

Supervisor Bennett has the mumps.

Robbie McMillan has come home from Kalkaska.

H. B. Vance of East Jordan, bought Alfred Scofield's black horse on Saturday last.

Mrs. H. Vance took a ride to town to see her son William on Saturday last. Her health is the best for years.

We have the champion twins in this township; Morton and Alvin Freeman weighed 20½ lb. each, at five months old. Next.

Also In "Grateful."

"I saved the life of my little girl by a prompt use of Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption."—Mrs. Wm. V. Harriman, New York. Sold by G. W. Beaman, druggist.

Burgess.

MARCH 20.—Springlike weather, and everybody is satisfied.

Mrs. Sheldon and family of Alanson, are visiting at I. S. Webster's the past week.

It is getting about time for township caucuses, and candidates to be around.

Robins have put in an appearance and sugar making is in full blast.

The last dance of the season was not very well attended on account of the roads.

Mr. Mange, and Scotchee on horses, [illegible] in 45 minutes by Woodford's chronometer, last week.

There is no other preparation for diseases of the throat and lungs to be compared with this remedy.

"My wife had a distressing cough, with pain in the side and breast. We tried various medicines, but none did her any good until I got a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has cured her. A neighbor, Mrs. Glenn, had the measles, and a cough was relieved by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have no hesitation in recommending it."

Cough Medicine

—the best the world knows."—R. Horton, Foreman Herald-light, Morrilton, Ark.

"I have been afflicted with asthma for forty years, and last spring was taken with a violent cough which threatened to terminate my days. Every one pronounced me in consumption. I determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Its effect was magical. I was immediately relieved and continued to improve until entirely recovered."—Joel Bullard, Guilford, Conn.

"Six months ago I had a severe hemorrhage of the lungs, brought on by an incessant cough which deprived me of sleep and rest. I tried various remedies, but obtained no relief until I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A few bottles of this medicine cured me."—Mrs. E. Coburn, 39 Second st., Lowell, Mass.

"For children afflicted with colds, coughs, sore throat, or croup, I know of no remedy which will give such speedy relief and comfort as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have found it, also, invaluable in cases of Whooping Cough."—Ann Lovejoy, 1325 Washington st., Boston, Mass.

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the only cough medicine to be relied on in dangerous cases."—H. D. Hilton, Kittanning, Pa.

PROBATE ORDER.—State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the probate court for said county, held at the office in the village of Boyne City, in said county, on the 14th day of February, A. D. 1889. Present, C. L. Mayne, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Jane Ann Marin, deceased, on reading and filing the petition of Maria Jeanne and Loretta Hunting, duly verified, praying that administration of said estate be granted to Edward H. Green, or to some other person, thereupon it is ordered that Monday, the 25th day of March next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be held in the village of Boyne City, in said county, in the county of Charlevoix, state of Michigan, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioners should not be granted. And it is further ordered that said petitioners give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in THE CHARLEVOIX COUNTY JOURNAL, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to the day of hearing.

THE GOVERNOR'S SALARY.

Opinions of the Leading State Papers on the Proposed Increase.

From the Detroit Free Press.

The constitutional amendment increasing the Governor's salary from $1,000 to $4,000 per year, to be voted on at the coming election, is one which should appeal to the pride and sense of justice of every Michigan voter. The question is one entirely outside of political difference. Michigan is, to day seventh in rank of the states of the union in population and wealth, and has no equal in its natural resources, and yet it is the object of jeer by our sister states, because of the parsimony in the treatment of its chief executive.

The average salary paid to the Governors of all the states is $8,300 per annum, and many of them are provided with executive mansions in addition. The additional cost to the taxpayers of this state, should the amendment be adopted, would be so insignificant that no taxpayer would ever know the difference. The man who pays a tax on $2,500 valuation now pays but one less than one cent additional tax. The people of this state have long been asking for the submission of an amendment increasing the Governor's salary alone. The amount asked is far less than any of the states surrounding and bordering upon Michigan pay to their Governors. Pennsylvania pays $10,000 and provides a mansion; Ohio $8,000 and a mansion; Indiana, Minnesota, and Wisconsin, $5,000 each, and Illinois, $6,000, a mansion and $3,000 additional for cars of same.

The Governor of Michigan is required to and should give his whole time to the duties of the office, and the obligations imposed upon him cannot be delegated to others. By the Constitution and laws of the state he is prohibited from receiving any perquisites, although his office now brings a very nice revenue to the state in the way of notary fees, etc. There are additional duties imposed upon the office, and all moneys received are turned over into the State Treasury and credited to the state, as required by law.

From the Detroit Tribune.

The proposed amendment to the State Constitution increasing the salary of Governor from $1,000 to $4,000 a year certainly ought to be adopted and will be if proper effort be made to carry it through. If the State Central Committee and the various political parties will unite in an appeal to the people for its adoption, and the press of the State supplement the appeal with earnest effort in its behalf, we think it would be approved by a large majority vote. The amount fixed is certainly small enough. Four Thousand a year is not an extravagant salary to pay the Governor of Michigan. When the present salary of $1,000 was fixed Michigan was an infant compared to its present status and importance. Then the Governor was required to devote but a small portion of his time in the interest of State. Now practically his whole time is required and the responsibilities are immensurably greater. It is no sense a partisan question; men of political parties agree that the present salary is disgracefully inadequate.

Earnest, well directed effort, as we have suggested, by the State committees of the various political organizations and by the press will secure the adoption of the amendment, and make the people feel more proud of their State than ever. Let such effort be made by all means.

From the Lansing Republican.

We are glad to see the leading papers of all parties uniting in support of the proposed constitutional amendment to pay a fair salary to the Governor of this State. Neither the present salary has long been a reproach to the State, causing Michigan to be sneered at by other States. Besides its practical effect has been to make none but rich men eligible to run for Governor, because no poor man could afford it. The State now has a Governor who lives at the capital during his term, and is always on hand to attend to business. This, however, is more than the State has any right to ask under the present small salary; but, under the fair salary proposed, the State will have a right to ask it. Besides, the duties of the office are constantly growing, and are now much more than they were years ago, when the present salary was fixed. And they will continue to grow as the state grows. Further, wages for work have more than doubled. Now the janitor of the Capitol building receives a larger salary than the Governor. But, in 1850, when the Governor's salary was fixed at $1,000 per year, $500 would have been large wages for a janitor. Then $500 was good wages for a skilled mechanic, book-keeper, and in many other employments. Now it is most all such are paid larger wages than the Governor.

From the Lansing Journal.

It is to be hoped that the constitutional amendment increasing the Governor's salary from $1,000 to $4,000 will be carried at the coming spring election. The niggardliness of the State as exhibited in respect to the salaries of its chief officers has become a matter of reproach. The result of the April election will show whether the standard of intelligence in Michigan has been raised as some of our altruistic educators have been telling us.

The Steamer St. Ignace.

All winter the steamer St. Ignace has been diligently maintaining communication between the Upper and Lower peninsulas and apparently attracting very little attention. Occasionally a passenger would come down from upper peninsula and describe the performances of the steamer in glowing terms, but it soon became a rather old story and very little attention has recently been directed to her. She has, however, succeeded in attracting some attention abroad. A short time ago the London Graphic published a half page picture of her with a description and an account of her operations in the ice. This week Mr. Frank E. Kirby received a letter from a Canadian member of parliment inquiring about the steamer. The Canadian Government has for several years been engaged in a rather fruitless attempt to maintain communication with Prince Edward Island. The attention of those interested is now directed to the St. Ignace as the most likely solution of the difficulty. There is very little doubt as to her ability to go through almost any ice. When the Algoma was used as a ferry at the straits one of her greatest difficulties was with snow. She could keep a passage clear of ice without much trouble, but when snow filled her track up she was always forced to cut a new one, as the snow packed ahead of her and rendered it impossible for her to proceed. Capt. Boynton had some fears as to the effect snow might have on the new steamer, but the recent storm, during which her path was completely filled up, put an end to the anxiety. The forward propeller of the St. Ignace sucked the snow away from her bow and prevented any accumulation, and the steamer passed through it with the utmost ease. Capt. Boynton is now certain that no kind of ice or snow can stop his pet from making her regular trips.

The Talking Machine.

One of the most improved Edison phonograps, or talking machines, will be one of the novelties at the Detroit Floral Exhibition. It will sing songs, tell stories, describe the Floral booths, and will also contain and repeat the story of the Floral Exhibition, in the voice of W. H. Brearley, of the Detroit Journal, who is the manager of the enterprise. The machines are so constructed that five persons can listen through the little rubber tubes at the same time

Sundry Gleanings From Our State Exchanges.

Cheboygan will hold her first election under the city charter on Monday, April 1st.

The straits are open above Mackinaw City and boats can go through by the north passage.

The Herald says that Traverse City has more children to the square rod than any other town of its size in the state.

J. W. Arnold, one of the pioneers of Grand Traverse, died at his home in East Bay township, on Saturday last, aged 57 years.

The propeller Paxton has been thoroughly overhauled at Bay City this winter and new cabins put on. She will run on the north shore route.

The steamer Atlantic is advertised to leave Detroit on Saturday, March 30th, for Cheboygan, Mackinac, and St. Ignace, calling at all her regular lake ports.

The steamboat men are already busy fitting out, and the Cyclone, Friant and Barker will be ready for sea as soon as the ice moves, which with a continuation of present weather will be at no distant day.—Democrat.

The Saginaw Daily Courier has recently been moved into new quarters built expressly for it. The building now occupied by it is an imposing three-story stone front, of very beautiful design, and finished off in oak. It is the finest office occupied by any newspaper in Michigan, without a doubt.

The horticulturists in town to-day have their heads with an ominous look when anyone ventures to inquire. How do you like this kind of weather. There is a strong suspicion that such balmy days are too previous and may be followed by destructive frosts when the blossoms unfold.—Muskegon Chronicle.

The Lansing firm of Bement & Sons, manufacturers of stoves, farm machinery, bob sleds, etc., uses 1,000,000 feet of hardwood lumber per year, 3,000 tons of pig iron, 500 tons of bar iron, 1,000 tons of steel, employs 300 men, and pays $11,000 per month for wages exclusive of the salaries of managers, etc.

The Grand Rapids Democrat exposes some of the pretensions of "Dr. W. E. Reid," the "spirit postmaster," who professed to answer questions sealed in an envelope and addressed to persons who have passed to the spirit world. The "doctor's" principal success seemed, however, to be in duping the public and gathering in their shekels.

Louis Brown has quit work on the Press and went to Midland Thursday. He has gotten up the model for a new job press which will be a good thing if he succeeds in getting it together in proper shape. Being cheap and durable, it will be just the thing for a small country printing office. He is now having one made at the machine shop in Midland.—Clare Democrat.

The Manistee Advocate says that Manistee River lumber cut for this season is 94,775,000 feet, which does not include logs in South Branch, Bear Creek or south of Sherman. At the same time last year, there were only 78,890,000 feet, or 15,315,000 less than this year on the skids, in the woods or in the river. It would seem that instead of the supposed suspension of the Manistee Salt & Lumber Company's mills being a probable cause of lessening the log cut, it has only increased it.

Vetal Bourjoan, keeper of Skilagalas light, and his crew; George Marshall, keeper of Waugoshance light, and his crew, and Charles Marshall, keeper of St. Helena light, started over the ice for their stations Thursday. The weather turned them back and they started again to-day (Friday.) This is a month earlier than they went to their stations last spring, and they consider that the condition of the ice warrants an opening of the straits a month earlier than last spring. Walter Marshall, keeper of Detour light, and Charles Lonisgnan, keeper of Cheboygan Point light, have gone to their stations. Keeper L. O. Holden of Bois Blanc light will move down next week. Edward Chambers of Round Island light, Lake Superior, and Edward Chambers (Cheeseman) keeper of Point Iroquois light, Lake Superior, will go to their respective stations in a few days.—Mackinaw cor. St. Ignace Republican.

The line of boats between Manistee and the north commenced running Monday last, nearly a month earlier than last. They will extend their trips as far north as Edge Water, Arab, Empire and Glen Haven, going to these places twice a week. John Hansen will probably be captain of the life saving station in place of Capt. Finch, who resigned to take the same position at Michigan City Station.

While removing the old frame bridge at the upper dam at Big Rapids—temporarily in use while the new iron structure was building—Tuesday evening the body of a man floated to the surface, and before it could be recovered floated down the river and became lost among the thousands of logs passing through the city. A man was missing about the holiday season, and it is thought by some to be his body.

Mr. J. C. McDonald, agent of the London-Liverpool-New York and Chicago Land Development Co., and one of the best experts now living, has recently made examinations of the vein on the Grayling find adjoining the Gold and Silver Co. He made a number of assays and was astonished at the result. One of the assays of native rock yielded $8.25 in gold to the pound of rock. Mr. McDonald has visited the mines of Australia, California and Colorado, and pronounces the Michigan gold range the richest in the world.—Mining Journal.

The Big Rapids Common Council has made the Canton Bridge Company a tender of the balance of the money ($4,000) due on the new iron bridge at the upper dam, first deducting $2,200 forfeiture, according to agreement. The agent of the company declined to settle on that basis, and a special committee has been appointed to confer with the company. The bridge company agreed to forfeit $50 per day for every day that passed after the expiration of the contract and up to the completion of the structure, hence the trouble.

There is a plan on foot to introduce fox hunting in Michigan on a scale never before attempted in this country. While the New Yorkers are beguiling the anise bag the Michigan sportsman will be chasing the real fox with the hounds. It will be so real that the Anglo-maniac can easily imagine himself in old England. "Don't yer know," and give himself up to the full enjoyment of the occasion. The island of Mackinac is to be turned from time to time into a great hunting ground, and a fine string of horses will be kept there for hunting purposes. Little has been done in the way of perfecting the plans as yet, but before the season opens the whole scheme will be arranged in complete shape.—Detroit Journal.

AMERICAN PILGRIMS RECEIVED.

An Audience with the Pope—Gifts Exchanged.

The Pope of Rome gave audience to the American pilgrims in Rome. Bishop Keinmacher, Mgr. Seton, and the Very Rev. Charles A. Vissali presented a richly bound address to the Pope, who greeted each with a kind word and a benediction. His Holiness gave the priests full privileges and power to pronounce a special papal benediction upon their congregations on their return. In blessing the oriflamme carried by the pilgrims, the Pope, observing the eagle, said: "America never goes back from anything." He expressed the hope that America would soon be a national hospice in Palestine like other nations. The Pope presented to each pilgrim a silver medal inclosed in a handsome case, and in return received many gifts from his visitors.

Political Pointers.

The Postmaster General has appointed J. Lowrie Bell, formerly traffic manager of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, Superintendent of the railway mail service, vice Bancroft, resigned.

Secretary Windom has appointed T. E. Byrnes, of St. Paul, Minn., Chief of the appointment division of the Treasury Department.

J. N. Tyner, of Indiana, has been appointed Assistant Attorney General for the Post-office Department.

Subscribed $1,500,000 Each.

A Rome special says: Bishop Keane, President of the new Washington University, has presented to the Pope two gentlemen of Washington who contributed millionaire sums to the institution. It is said that each subscribed $1,500,000. The Pope thanked them warmly for their magnificent gifts.

Money Put to a Good Purpose.

A check for $20,000 has been paid to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to be invested, and the interest devoted to relieving the wants of the poor of Washington. The money was received from the inauguration, over and above all expenses.

A Disastrous Blaze.

The furniture store of Comstock & Avery, at Peoria, Ill., was destroyed by fire, causing an estimated loss of $250,000; insurance not known. Several employes narrowly escaped with their lives.

A Salt Trust.

It is reported that a salt trust is being formed at East Saginaw, Mich., by C. F. Burgess, representing the Eastern manufacturers. The capital is to be $25,000,000.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

Business Improving, But Collections Generally Slow.

R. G. Dun & Co., in their review of trade for last week, say:

The great fall in price of copper from about 23c to about 12c per lb., following upon that of tin, has caused much speculation and loud wailing and wonder. The monthly report of the production of copper, however, for last month, shows a slight increase in February, the output reaching 16,757 tons against 16,500 tons in January, 16,336 last year. The market for tar iron is very dull, and Pittsburg reports that the stock of tar iron in the hands of manufacturers of wheat in farmers' hands is reported by quarters as at a very low ebb, the visible supply being 32,000,000 bushels there and 15,000,000 bushels afloat, which is more than will be required for food and seed until July 1, and there is besides a large stock on the Pacific coast, in country elevators, and in the hands of traders not included in the visible supply, which will be ample to carry the whole stock of flour on hand, the winter having been open. When it is considered that the ordinary stock of flour would probably require 30,000,000 bushels of wheat, and that last year's exports were 150,000,000 bushels, and that only 30,000,000 bushels, the prospect of security seems remote. The exports of wheat and flour for the week, with equal of 23,000,000 bushels in New York City. Corn is one cent lower and oats a quarter. Pork products are unchanged. No change appears in coffee and sugar. Cotton is a shade lower. The iron market almost uniformly indicates some improvement in business, though the complaint of slow collections is almost as general as before. There is improvement in leather, liquors, groceries, and in fact in most branches of trade. In all the week the decline in average prices of commodities was nearly half of 1 per cent. The failures for the week were 214, as compared with a total of 201 the previous week and 231 the week before. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 189.

TANNER NOT CAUGHT YET.

An Eight Thousand Mile Chase After a Man Proves Fruitless.

A. J. Stone was the man who for three weeks scoured the Canadian dominion and a number of Western States and Territories in search of William J. Tanner, the slayer of James A. Smith, have returned home without their man. The chase for the party consisted of Mr. Stone, two detectives, and Frank Mills, an old schoolmate of Tanner, who went along to identify the man. Stone said of his trip:

Our departure was first from Minneapolis, Minn. We were certain from descriptions that the murderer was heading for Canada. We had no time in going to Winnipeg. Description of the man was telegraphed all along the route, and we followed in his track. We went to Calgary, close on Tanner's heels. I clustered a special train and we flew over the mountains to Kamloops to find Tanner. To our chagrin we found he had left there for the Coast two days before. We followed in his track to Vancouver, British Columbia, then through British Columbia, Oregon, Washington Territory, Vancouver, Victoria, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco, Sacramento, Ogden, Denver, Omaha, Chicago, Toronto, Buffalo, Detroit, Toledo, Chicago. Tanner is a young man, but it wasn't Tanner we was hunting, as subsequent events showed. Mills and his every action strangely indicated that he was guilty of some crime. We found a man who would have followed him to the end of the earth. He was a young man, about 22 years old, from Ohio. I would have followed Tanner to the ends of the earth, if he had been the man we were after. Mills claimed I was hoodwinked, and I left the detective at hand and followed him. We traveled 8,000 miles and I spent $1,000 of my money. I shall follow the young man as long as I live and I'll pay as long as I have with the money.

WEATHER AND CROP BULLETIN.

Seeding Conditions Favorable in Illinois, Missouri and Kansas.

The national weather crop bulletin for the week ending Saturday, March 16, 1889, says:

The conditions in Dakota and Minnesota have been unfavorable for farming. In Minnesota the work was interrupted in Dakota by blustering weather from the 13th to the 15th. The weather was favorable in Illinois, Missouri and Kansas. Seeding conditions are favorable in Illinois, Missouri and Kansas, and in Kansas and the favorable effects of fair weather are felt. In Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Tennessee, where the spring of 1888 was remarkably fine, the winter wheat is reported as looking very well throughout New York and Pennsylvania, fair in the east and west portions of Massachusetts, and very promising in Michigan. In Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Tennessee, the plowing is in progress, and the prospects are have been received the best for Atlantic and Gulf States, where the spring sowing has made excellent progress, the planting being nearly completed in Louisiana, and cotton being planted in Texas. Rains during the week, but their have resulted in no damage. No adverse reports have been received from any section, and the week has in general been favorable for farm work in most districts.

SEEKING OFFICE.

The Mad Rush for Office at the National Capital.

A special telegram from Washington, D. C., says: There are no public activities in the capital that are not connected with office brokerage. The Federal City has become a mart of public employments. From President down through Cabinet, Senate, House, clerks, politicians, and all the grades of relative importance, even to janitor, greatest office hunting prevails for office, or keeping office from somebody, is the single thought and the only cause of energy. Public policy, politics in its broad sense, usury policy, finance, immigration, elections, foreign relations, the new navy, everything is obscured by the business of office brokerage. For weeks, and even months, the President and his Cabinet will be able to think of little besides the distribution of spoils. The wheels of Government continue turning round and round in a perfunctory sort of way, but, with chiefs waiting the appointment of their successors, subordinates become lazy and struggle to kill time, and the scenes about the great departments has a lazy air and little is heard except office speculation.

POLITICAL POINTERS.

Interesting Happenings of More or Less Importance in the World of Politics.

The Catholic Total Abstinence News, issued at Philadelphia, Pa., comes out squarely against prohibition on the ground that it will open the flood-gates of illegal sale and take us back to the anti-high license period.

General J. B. Weaver and the Hon. E. H. Gillette it is announced will contribute to the Northwestern News, of Davenport, Iowa, and consolidate it with the Iowa Tribune, to be published at Des Moines as the organ of the third and fourth parties.

At Charleston, W. Va., on the 14th inst., the State Supreme Court decided against the claim of President Carr, of the Senate, to the Governorship. Wilson will continue to act until the Goff-Fleming contest is settled.

"OLD ABE," THE WAR EAGLE.

Reminiscences Brought Up by the Arrest of His Original Captor.

Famous all over the Northwest as the "Old Abe," the noble war eagle which for three years in the battles accompanied Company C, of the Eighth Wisconsin Volunteers, all through the war. The other day he died in the cellar of Mr. Ge Zek, who, while the bird was little more than a nestling, sold him to a white man for a bushel of corn, was taken to Madison, Wis., in charge of United States Marshal Joslin and lodged in jail. His arrest having been made for selling liquor to his fellow Indians, red men. In the museum of Wisconsin war relics are perched the stuffed remains of the old bird, for years the pride of the capital city and a quarter of a century ago was taken to see him and in broken English gave narrative of his capture.

SECRETARY BLAINE'S DEMAND.

Asking from Russia the Release of an Imprisoned American Citizen.

Attorney J. B. Klein, of Bridgeport, Conn., has sent a letter to the Secretary of State Blaine, and presented the case of Hermann Kempinski, the Bridgeport citizen who has been cast into prison at Rowen, Russia, while on a visit to his native place. Kempinski, although armed with passports and credentials of citizenship, has been sentenced to imprisonment for life, and, unless influenced by demands of Secretary Blaine, will be transported to Siberia. Twelve years at Washington tell Klein that he has the strongest document to prove Kempinski's citizenship, and he has complied with their suggestions. Mr. Blaine has cabled to the authorities at Rowen, demanding the prisoner's release.

IS LORD LONSDALE DEAD?

The English Tourist Believed to Have Met Death in Yellowstone Park.

Intelligence has just been received of the death of an English tourist in the park in the far North. The two were brothers and left Canon River settlement, about forty miles from Prince Albert, N. W. T., last August for Deer Lake. After getting settled they started for the Hudson Bay Company's post, 200 miles further north, and had not been heard from until a short time ago, when the Indians of Reindeer discovered their dead bodies about two miles from their camp. It is feared that Lord Lonsdale also met the same fate.

DEATH OF A. S. WELCH, OF IOWA.

The Well Known Educator Expires at Pasadena, Cal.

A. S. Welch, of Iowa, died at Pasadena, Cal.

He was late President of the Iowa Agricultural College at Ames, and had just returned home from Florida soon after the war, and has since been prominently identified with educational work. He was at one time President of the Michigan State Agricultural College, and was for a time Commissioner of Agriculture, and the agricultural College bill was drawn by him, and he was then spending his winter vacation in California when he died. The body was taken back to Iowa for burial.

Miss Anderson Very Sick.

A Philadelphia, Pa., telegram states that Miss Mary Anderson, the actress, is very sick at her residence here, and that her engagements for the season have been cancelled. The English company of eighty-six people disbanded. Orders have been given by her doctors to positively exclude all persons from Miss Anderson's room, with the exception of her maid and the professional nurse in attendance. As soon as able she will go to Europe to recuperate.

Opium Shipped as Sauerkraut.

The steamer Walla Walla, belonging to the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, was seized by the customs officials at Port Townsend for failure to make proper entries in her coastwise manifest. Recently opium to the value of $20,000 has been smuggled from Victoria, B. C., on the Walla Walla to Tacoma, W. T., by being placed in barrels marked sauerkraut. These barrels were not entered on the manifest.

AN OPEN QUESTION.

Is Harrison a Descendant of Pocahontas?

It is popularly believed that President Harrison is descended from that Pocahontas and from the Puritan Plantenagenet soldier regicide General Edward Harrison, who was executed in 1660.

Pocahontas, daughter of Powhatan, saved Captain Smith's life by early white settlers of Virginia when she ran to the stake and placed her head on the life of Captain John Smith, who had been condemned to death by Indian chiefs. The black legend, on several occasions, made her the subject of romance, and she married and settled well known to all students of the early history of America, and married regnant marriage with John Rolfe, an Englishman—Rolfe was born in England, was a son of Lord Rolfe, from whom sprung two wealthy families in Virginia, and descends in the male line to the opinion that President Harrison is one of his descendants.

Whether this be true or not, it is known to all well known that President Harrison is the descendant of a noted family, distinguished for its peace and its military ability. The family is already indelibly written upon the pages of American history by General William Henry Harrison—the grandfather of our President. Nobody questions his descent.

The election of another Harrison family to the Presidency is further proof of the prevailing disposition of the American people to perpetuate political families as characteristic of the early days of the Government, in which the family was manifested for a revival of early manners, which seemed to have vanished with the prevailing tendency to change. Families which seemed to have been so successfully employed in the government of Rhode Island and Massachusetts have frequented the early colonial history.

After much inquiry and research, a noted manufacturer has procured the ancestral records used in the genealogy of the family, and the name of Warner's Log Cabin Remedies, in the hands of thousands of these well-known preparations for the cure of Kidney, Liver, Stomach and Blood Disorders, catarrh, dropsy, debility, and general ill health, which have been used in very large amount of time, attention, and expense, in the preparation of Warner's Log Cabin Remedies, its well-known reputation as the best remedy for the prevention and cure of kidney diseases being world wide—the manufacturer is reaching back into the Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla to the first, original, and best, and, by the purest, most properties and great value as a household remedy, has put the remedy into a form which is unsurpassed for its wonderful curative qualities, and is ready for the whole world, and is rapidly introducing it into a position to take the place of the old-fashioned sarsaparilla, which has for years been so successfully used in the log-cabin days, and the successful methods employed by the Warner's Log Cabin Remedies, and in matters little whether the alleged relationship between the Harrisons and Pocahontas is true or not, for the name of Pocahontas is already immortal.

Better than the Average.

A Western editor has patented an adjustable chair for people who sit very lazily—not to say heady. He can make into a picture of a man, with or without a board, a man with a pair of spectacles, quite readily, and it will be found about as true a picture as any one ever sees in the paper.—Yankee Blade.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS.

EVENTS AND INCIDENTS THAT HAVE LATELY OCCURRED.

An Interesting Summary of the More Important Doings of Our Neighbors—Weddings and Deaths—Crimes, Casualties, and General News Items.

MICHIGAN CONSULS.

—Michigan has had many important positions in the consular service of the United States during the fifty-five years of statehood, says a Washington correspondent of the Detroit Free Press. The brilliant early Governor, Lewis Cass, was appointed Consul at Fernambuco, Brazil, by President Taylor in 1849, and died there in 1852. Author Bates was appointed by the General Government to prosecute certain business in the Sandwich Islands in 1855. He did not return after he had completed his work, but entered the Cabinet of the King as Attorney General and continued there. Bates was one of the most prominent public men of his time. Amos Pratt, of Marshall, was on the Supreme bench of Michigan in 1857, when the present court was formed. He was nominated by the Democratic party for re-election, but declined in order to accept an appointment from President Buchanan as Consul at Honolulu. Pratt was recalled from the Sandwich Islands in 1861. That same year Abel Pomeroy, a prominent member of the State House of Representatives and died while a member of that body. Nathaniel F. Jacob, of Detroit, was appointed Consul General at Calcutta in 1861, and continued to occupy that position for two years. Henry W. Lord, of Pontiac, was Consul at Manchester from 1861 to 1867; Edward S. Egleston, of Detroit, was Consul at Havana; Consul at Calcutta; Representative Mark S. Brewer was Consul General at Berlin from 1861 to 1865; Edward Cole, of Detroit, is ex-Consul at Stettin; W. R. Wells, of Ionia, at Dundee; Major Edward Pickett, of Ionia, at Tampico; Ad Scott, McGeorge Bundy, of Grand Rapids, at Havre; Captain Charles Fitzhugh, of Hillsdale, at Kingston, Jamaica; E. Lincoln, of Coldwater, at Hong Kong; E. H. Thomson, of Flint, was long Immigration Commissioner at Stuart, and Major W. W. Murphy, of Hillsdale, was for many years Consul at Frankfort-on-the-Main. Colonel James W. Romeyn, of Berry Gilman, of Detroit, are at present Consuls respectively at Valparaiso and Jamaica, where Dr. Gilman has been for more than four years. Consul General at Marseilles. Michigan has laid claim for many years to a number of Consulships in Canada, and many Michigan men have been commercial representatives of the United States in the Dominion. Among those who may be mentioned J. Wilkie Moore, George W. Swift, Charles Ewers and John Dennis, at Windsor; Digby V. Bell, at Goderich, John L. Near and several others at Port Sarnia. The following Michigan men have been appointed to Consular service in Canada: Jerome Eddy, Chatham; Isaac G. Worden, Walkerville; Joseph Tanner, Amherstburg; W. T. Mitchell, St. Hyacinthes, and Julius S. Farrar, at Port Sarnia.

—The Washtenaw County fair will be held Sept. 10, 11, 12 and 13. The date is set earlier than usual to avoid the cool days and to see if the fair cannot have pleasant weather for just once.

—John Hork, a brakeman on the Michigan Central Railroad, was quite seriously injured in West Bay City. He had stepped in front of two cars to make a coupling when the draw-bars passed each other, the woodwork catching him above the hips, separating his body in two.

—An infant child of Joseph Fortan, who lives on Woodside avenue, Bay City, was found dead in bed alongside its mother, living been smothered during the night. It was 3 months of age.

—Many new dwellings are going up a Alpena.

—Bay City needs a new and more commodious high-school building, and will probably have it.

—The Mount Clemens Sons of Veteran are raising money to purchase two cannon. They will cost $300, or about that.

—Barlow Wilson, who lived in Williamstown, fifteen miles from Lansing, fell under a freight train near that village and was killed.

—Among the curiosities brought from the Philippine Islands by Prof. Steere, and which have been mounted for the university museum, is a species of buffalo entirely new to the scientific world and not known to any scientist or ever taken from all Asia Arbor or described. Its body is similar to the American bison, but the legs are longer and the horns stop straight back from the top of the head. There is little hair on the body, and the hoofs are large and flat, enabling it to swim readily. In habits the animal, although of the buffalo tribe, is similar to the hippopotamus. It is found only on one island of the Philippines, Mindoro, and is very ferocious.

—At St. Ignace man sent twenty-five cents to a New-Yorker for a package of stuff warranted to make a mustache grow in two weeks, and by return mail received a bundle of summer savory.

—Maxwell M. Fisher, the Detroit millionaire, furnishes another interesting item to the public. His previous matrimonial experiences have terminated more or less abnormal. His litigation with Mrs. Nellie Goodwill, who sued him for breach of promise, alleged slander, and what not, is also fresh in mind. Mr. Fisher entered the County Clerk's office the other day and handed to the Clerk a slip of paper upon which was written: "A marriage license is requested for Maxwell M. Fisher, aged 63, and Mary A. Jones, aged 28. The official got the usual blank filled out the bridegroom's side as far as the request went, and then began to ask questions. Mr. Fisher acknowledged that he was a native of Michigan, New Jersey, occupation capitalist, and that he had previously been married three times. The clerk asked similar questions requiring the bride. Mr. Fisher knew that her age was 28, and her residence Detroit. There, however, he stuck. The blank application remained blank in regard to the other questions. Mr. Fisher hurried off to make inquiries about his bride's antecedents. He came back, filled out the blank, and it is believed they have been married. Miss Mary Adelaide Jenks was a school teacher.

—The ladies of the First Congregational Church at Saginaw decorated quite a sum each year toward both home and foreign missions. They have three mission circles among them and usually manage to raise $600 a year for the support of Miss Searles, who is engaged in missionary work in Japan, having charge of a mission school in that country, where she has been doing good work. The same ladies have also given $400 for the mission house, the latter investment being looked upon with more marked favor by the average practical business man.

—George L. Granger, of Isabella County, received a consignment of 12,000 Dwyer Mammoth Ross seeds, which he planted in the upper tributaries of the Chippewa.

—There is some talk of building an addition to the M. E. Church at Ionia.

—Hollister Brothers Lumber Company, limited, is the name of a lumber firm recently organized at Saginaw, with a capital stock of $140,000. The stockholders are the Hollister Brothers of Rochester, N. Y., and E. Hallbeck and W. H. Gates of Saginaw City. The latter gentleman is secretary of the company. The company will cut lumber in the Saginaw yard at Tonawanda, and will conduct a large business there, expecting to handle 50,000,000 feet of lumber annually, the bulk of which will be bought and shipped from Eastern Michigan. An office will be established at Saginaw as well as at Tonawanda.

—S. Craft planted 9,000 brook trout in Grange Pond, in the Lake Orion region, recently, which makes 21,000 planted in that county.

—Some of the farmers of this State are said to be selling maple at $1 a cake when they can get $5 a thousand for logs. In this way the work of handling and cutting the cordwood is thrown away.

—At the annual village election held at Holly a President, Clerk, Treasurer, three Trustees, Assessor, Street Commissioner and Constable were elected. It now appears to the citizens that the elected officers cannot legally fill the offices to which they were chosen. Two tickets were in the field, a Union and a Citizens' ticket. A Union caucus was held and the ticket was nominated in the usual manner, but the officer and inspectors were not sworn in as required by law. The Citizens' caucus was held and the inspectors were sworn, also the chairman, but the clerk was not immediately called upon to offer being sworn, and his place was filled by another who was not sworn. This leaves both tickets illegal. Only one of the four election inspectors were sworn, and instead of counting the votes as required by law they threw them in and votes were spread out before counting. There is music in the air, and it will resound in Holly before the village election over again. It is thought that if the officers elected are sworn in, any action they may take in the future will not be according to law, and ordinances, etc., cannot be enforced.

—The State crop report for March treats of the wheat prospect but gives no figures as to estimate of damage. In the southern counties, where 92 per cent. of the wheat crop is grown, 31 per cent. of the correspondents report damage to the plant and 43 per cent. report the ground poorly covered with snow during February, with an average in that section of 3.2-10 inches, March 1, which has since disappeared on account of higher temperature, which for the first ten days of March ranged from 18 to 19 to 24 to 25 degrees above the average. The total amount of wheat exported and marketed for seven months from August to February was 26,265 bushels; balance in farmers' hands for sale is estimated at 3,645,239 bushels.

—The Hotel Marquette, at Marquette, was robbed in broad daylight by a thief who pried the till open with a jimmy and stole $196. No arrests have been made.

—Day City is threatened with a box factory which will give employment to 200 men. There is much rejoicing in consequence.

AN AMERICAN DUCHESS.

GILL NYE'S WAIL FOR THE WOES OF AN UNLUCKY CREATURE.

The Treatment of the Duchess at Her New Home—Subjected to the Indignity of Walking Across the Hall Without the Drawbridge I. Tied Up.

Ever planted to receive later intelligence from Jewel Hill Bonsboro which leaves me no room to doubt that a cloud about the size of a Gatling gun has descended the honeymoon of the Duchess of Bonsboro and that the eminent but unwashed Duke, I is only a little while since they were married in the midst of all the pride and grandeur of Mayor Hewitt's office, surrounded by the Mayor himself and some of the judges of the building, mounted policemen, ladies in lace parasols, letter heads, corned beef, and bill heads. As the happy couple left their horse-car, driven by an eminent savant in a rubber overcoat, and moved proudly across City Hall Park, they were preceded by a beautiful woman 63 years of age, and followed by a black and tan terrier, who scattered flowers to the masses as they came a bunch. It was a very impressive sight. Men standing on the steps of the City Hall wept as the happy pair commenced as jurors for the evening term. Everything looked so bright and promising that I did not see how it could be marred. The minds would be thoroughly fitted for the new duties of juror, cooked up in a vacant way.

Mayor Hewitt looked out the window and saw them coming. Hastily upending his desk and ruffling his hair, he ran down to a distinguished and disheveled appearance, and entered the Grand Jury room just in time to play the wedding march.

The Duke then gave a loud knock on the door, and the Mayor hastily opened it and there stood the Duke. Motioning the Mayor aside, the Duke, with long locks flowing around behind the wood-box, where they would be entirely out of the way, said to Mayor Hewitt: "Abe, are you boyse?"

"Well, not so absolutely boyse, I guess, Duke."

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

For Justice of the Supreme Court—
THOMAS R. SHERWOOD.
For Regents of the University—
WILLIAM L. WEBER, of Ionia.
JOHN S. LAWRENCE.

CHICAGO society is all torn up over the elopement and marriage of one of the daughters of Chief Justice Fuller, with J. Matt Aubrey. She is 18 and he 21.

DEAR farmers how do you like this little sample of protection. The binding twine trust is tightening its coils about the farmers of the northwest. All the twine in Minneapolis has been bought in by the trust and the price has risen from 9 to 25 cents a pound.

AT an entertainment given by the mission band at Toronto Ont., recently one of the characters, Britannia, stood on the American flag while introducing the representatives of the various nations to the audience. Prof. Marshal of Queen's university, who acted as chairman, remarked that the flag was placed there to show Great Britain's relations to the United States. This declaration getting into the local journals, caused much indignation and protest, and the university authorities have been asked to reprimand the professor.

In a recent letter to a friend in this city Judge M. V. Montgomery pays the following tribute to the Democrat candidate for Supreme Justice; "I should like very much to see Judge Sherwood re-elected for many reasons First, he has made a most excellent Judge. He is kind, courteous, able, conservative and honest, and he has had experience. But above all, changes in judicial offices should never be made without good reason. When a Judge has been fairly tried and developed these qualities, it is a hazardous experiment to supplant him with a new man, no matter who he may be.—Lansing Journal

AFTER recounting to a Mining Journal reporter the history of the great land grant forfeiture fight at Washington, Tim Nester, of Marquette, says: "I wish to say that of all the men who had anything to do with this legislation the one who is entitled to credit and thanks by the settlers above and beyond all the rest is Don M. Dickinson. . . . Politics cut no figure with Don. To be a Michigan man was enough. Democrat or republican who was from Michigan was alike to him. And no time since the days of Senator Chandler did a Michigan man in Washington seem so much at home as since Don M. Dickinson went into Cleveland's cabinet, and he will be missed by them."

NEXT Monday will be held the regular spring elections, including as well as local officials, two regents of the university and one justice of the supreme court. The democracy everywhere should make vigorous efforts to get out a full vote and wherever possible secure the election of their local ticket. For justice of the supreme court the democracy has renominated Chief Justice Thomas R. Sherwood, whose eminent services on the bench are recognized by all classes of citizens without regard to party; while for regents John S Lawrence of Grand Rapids and Worthy L. Churchill of Alpena are the democratic nominees—both gentlemen in everyway fitted for the positions for which they have been named. The full opposition vote to the republican party should be polled at the coming election for Judge Sherwood and the rest of the ticket, and with earnest work and a full democratic vote the prospects for success are hopeful.

Trenton School Report.

The report as published last week gave the standing of Arthur Miller at 92.3, when it should have been 99.3. The same report should have included the whole number of days taught, 498; the average daily attendance, 36 4-19; and the average scholarship, 99.5.

Scribner's Magazine for April is notable for the variety of its contents which include popular articles on railroad affairs, shipbuilding, mountain climbing, and the anatomy of contortionists: literary reminiscences of Scott, De Quincy, Burns, and Da. J Brown; a paper on Ibsen, the great Norwegian dramatist, and one of the much praised series of End Papers, the writer for this month being Walter Pater, author of Marius the Epicurean. The illustrations show equal richness, variety, and interest. A paper which is sure to cause wide discussion is, The Prevention of Railroad Strikes, by Charles Francis Adams, President of the Union Pacific. The author has held this remarkable paper unpublished for more than two years, thinking that the time was not ripe for it. Events of the past year, especially the C. B. and Q. strike, have convinced him that a deep seated trouble exists in the relations of railroad employees to railroad companies and that his paper may be a timely contribution to an important discussion. He advocates the division of employees into a temporary and permanent service, the former being probationary and a step to promotion. The permanent service should have certain rights and privileges which would cause it to be eagerly sought, such as freedom from fear of unjust dismissal, a tribunal where the employee can be heard in his own defence; the posibility of rising to any position, insurance and pension fund: and an active voice in the management of the road through a representative system resulting in a council of employees who would act through a small executive committee. The paper is, all in all, one of the most important in the Railway series.

Two Half Fare Excursions to Detroit.

The railroads of Michigan have all agreed to run two half fare excursions to Detroit during the April 2, 3, 4, and 5 Floral Exhibition. The first will be upon April 3d, the tickets being good to return on the 4th. The second will be upon the 4th, to return the 5th of April. The tickets will contain a coupon for admission to the Floral Exhibition. The new exhibition at the Detroit Museum of Art, which opened March 18th, will also be open to visitors. Those desiring to keep posted as to the details of the Floral enterprise, will find daily installments of flower show gossip in the Detroit Journal, which public-spirited paper, we believe, originated this novel and beautiful enterprise, which promises such success full results.

Northern Michigan Line.

The following letter from Mr. Burke explains itself:

Chicago, March 26, 1889.

EDITOR JOURNAL—Dear Sir, The Northern Michigan Line will commence receiving freight at Chicago and Milwaukee Monday, April 1st, and the Lawrence, weather permitting, will leave Chicago Thursday evening, April 4th, taking freight and passengers for all points on our road. Their route and time will for the present be about the same as last season. Making as near schedule time as weather and the business will permit, until June 1st when excursion season timetable will take effect.

Yours truly,
S. S. BURKE, Agent.

Father Weikamp Dead.

PETOSKEY, March 20.—Father J. B. Weikamp, the founder and head of St. Francis' convent at Cross Village, died yesterday in the convent which he had founded in the wilderness 34 years ago. Father Weikamp came to Cross Village in 1855 and has done a great work in educating and caring for the Indians. He was as conspicuous a figure in the history of northern Michigan as the white walls, dome and spires of the convent are in the landscape viewed by the tourists who sail past Cross Village on the Lake.

Long-Standing

Blood Diseases are cured by the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine is an Alterative, and causes a radical change in the system. The process, in some cases, may not be quite so rapid as in others; but, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials:—

"For two years I suffered from a severe pain in my right side, and had other troubles caused by a torpid liver and dyspepsia After giving several medicines a fair trial without a cure, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was greatly benefited by the first bottle, and after taking five bottles I was completely cured."—John W. Benson, 70 Lawrence st., Lowell, Mass.

"Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect and I was confined to my bed for eight weeks. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than three bottles healed the sore. In all my experience with medicine, I never saw more

Wonderful Results.

Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my sight."—Mrs. Carrie Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I had a dry scaly humor for years, and suffered terribly; and, as my brother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume the malady is hereditary. Last winter, Dr. Tyron, (of Fernandina, Fla.) recommended me to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and assume it for a year. For five months I took it daily. I have not had a blemish upon my body for the last three months."—T. E. Wiley, 146 Chambers st., New York city.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a dull, heavy pain in my side. I did not notice it at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the stomach and liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared and I was completely cured."—Mrs. A. A. Firbush, Haverhill, Mass.

LOCAL NOTES AND NEWS.

Teachers' examination tomorrow.

Snow and freezing weather Wednesday.

A. Battars is in Kalamazoo this week.

To Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence, March 19th, a son.

Nicholls' saw mill will begin operations next Monday.

Clarence Burns is home from the north for a few days.

Pat O'Neill is expected home by the 15th of April.

Note the changes in our advertising columns this week.

To Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, March 18th, a daughter.

John O'Neill launched a new Mackinaw fish boat on Tuesday.

Miss Mary Scroggie arrived home from Battle Creek last Friday.

Anson Brown returned from his "swing round the circle," Tuesday.

Geo. Lynn expects to run the engine of Allen's pile driver this season.

Grand Master Crouter is in southern Michigan this week on lodge business.

Mrs. Frank McGibeny returned Tuesday from her trip to Malone, New York.

Swallow and Lamphear painted the Charlevoix Savings Bank building on Tuesday.

We should like returns from every township in the county, for the election next Monday.

Bring your copy for election tickets and slips to the JOURNAL office. Satisfaction guaranteed.

The JOURNAL has received many compliments on the school-house plans published last week.

The work of clearing off the school house site, to prepare for excavation, commenced this morning.

Twenty-five thousand brook trout were planted in Stover, Inwood, and and McGeagh creeks this week.

Swallow and Lamphear papered and decorated the interior of A. T. Washburne & Co.'s store this week.

When house-cleaning time arrives at your house, remember that we sell old papers at five cents a dozen.

Capt. O. E. Wilbur has bought a lot of Amos Fox on the north side, and will build a house in Charlevoix.

Wanted, by the village council, a pound master who will enforce the law and keep cows off the street at night.

But very little ice in Lake Michigan at this point. We are ready for boats at any moment.—Lelanaw Enterprise.

D. H. Francis has lumber on the ground for a new house on a lot south of Antrim street and west of the Norwood road.

Chas. E. See and C. Bodd are building an elegant new counter for Byron Sees's store. He finished in native hard wood, oiled, Isaac Mills has the job of building a new store for M. Kehoe on State street, south of the new Baptist church. It will be 20x45, one story high.

The plans adopted for the new school house were drawn originally by L. D. Bartholomew, and prepared for the use of the committee by J. T. Kirkpatrick.

A committee will hold a meeting on Friday evening to formulate plans for a proper observance of the centennial of Washington's inauguration, on April 30th.

Emrey Bros. are making extensive repairs to their dock and warehouse, and are getting ready for the North era Line boats which will continue to stop there.

☞All parties having unsettled accounts with A. J. McLeod are requested to pay up by April 1st, as the market will change hands on that date. A. J. McLEOD.

On Monday, March 18th, Alick Rosenthal moved his goods to the north room of the Lewis block, and tonight, the 28th, he begins to move back, and will be settled Friday. Dr. Lewis has had a large force of men at work, and has made things hum during the past ten days.

It will be safe to keep shy of Justice Kane now, since he has risen to the dignity of a father. Its a boy, and first saw the daylight on the morning of March 22d.

"The Building of an 'Ocean Greyhound,'" by William H. Rideing, in Scribner's Magazine for April, describes picturesquely and effectively the marvellous industry of the great Clyde ship yards, where the swiftest trans-Atlantic steamers are made. The illustrations show the City of New York and other vessels in various stages of the process of building.

Grand Master Crouter, assisted by a jolly party of Odd Fellows from Charlevoix, Boyne and Petoskey, instituted a lodge at Horton's Bay last Friday. There were eight charter members, and nine initiates. An interesting time was had. The elective officers are as follows: N. G., A. J. Stroud; V. G., Mr. Corwin; Sec., W. H. Oble; Treas., J. L. Dilworth.

The Pansy for March comes to our table, freighted with pictures and stories for young folks from eight to twelve. It is certainly a charming magazine, with not a line of reading that the most particular of parents can object to. The subscription price is $1.00 a year. The publishers, D. Lothrop Company, Boston, will send a sample back number on receipt of 5 cents.

The leading illustrated article in Scribners Magazine for April, is "Climbing Mount St. Elias," by William Williams, who describes the partial ascent, by himself and other members of the Alpine Club, of the highest mountain on this continent. The party reached an altitude of 11,460 feet—a higher point than has been attained before on this mountain. The stirring account of the expedition is richly illustrated from the author's sketches and photographs.

Babyland for April is here, overflowing with good things for the toddlers. With so many nice pictures and little stories and jingles suited to baby's eye and ear, the great popularity of this delightful magazine is not to be wondered at. A word to the fathers and mothers;—it would be difficult to suggest a way of investing fifty cents whereby an equal amount of pleasure can be given to the little ones. It is only fifty cents a year. Published by D. Lothrop Company, Boston.

Historical Society Resolutions.

The following preamble and resolutions were adopted by the Charlevoix Historical Society at their meeting held March 22d, 1889:

WHEREAS, On the seventh inst., God, in his infinite wisdom, chose to call home, while yet in the flower of her youth, one of the brightest members of the Charlevoix Historical Society, one of its most efficient and willing workers. Therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of Mrs. Jennie Matthews Washburne this society has sustained a severe and irreparable loss and each member a personal bereavement.

That we most sincerely tender to the afflicted husband, parents, and relatives, our heartfelt sympathy and condolence in this dark hour of affliction and sorrow.

That we believe, could we look through the dark valley and shadow of death, we should behold this loved one, in the mansion Christ has prepared for her, safe from the trials and troubles of this world.

Resolved, That this preamble and resolutions be transcribed in the records of this society, and that an engrossed copy be presented to the bereaved husband and parents of the deceased and published in the village papers.

PROCRASTINATION.

BY SQUIRE MOORE.

How prone we are to say forgive
And plight our faith to ere no more,
Then o'er again the error live
And perpetrate the wrong before.

'Tis said 'tis human thus to err
And leave undone some needed task;
And yet 'tis human to prefer
For wrong forgiveness thus to ask.

We fully think in earnest mood
To faithfully perform the trust,
But other cares soon intrude
And from our minds the duty thrust.

Mayhap a better long delayed
We scarce can endure waiting friend;
But blame we longer to then evade,
And want of time we cannot plead.

Vain hope! That very friend, in south,
Has pleaded oft the same excuse;
And, knowing well to want of truth,
He, smiling, labels it a ruse.

Full many a promise vainly made
Is faint now to be redeemed;
Full many a duty long delayed
Has lost to us a friend esteemed.

TARRYING WITH FLUIDS

BY JOHN STEPHENS.

James Drummond sat at the dining-table of the Grand Pacific Hotel. His neighbors, two gentlemen of strikingly manly appearance, made themselves particularly agreeable. A waiter brought a telegram addressed to James Drummond, the address on which he read in an audible voice. The two gentlemen exchanged significant glances.

One of them, Col. Lamont, a large portly man with a fuzz of moustache and an unctuous laugh, renewed his attentions to Mr. Drummond, at whose jokes he gave the ready complisment of the laugh.

The other guest at the table was Charles Burrows, tall, thin, and refined, with a pleasant smile, though into his eyes at times would come a hungry, keen look that was not altogether pleasant.

Both gentlemen were evidently old friends, and judging by their conversation were capitalists who had many dealings together in cattle and real estate.

Whenever Drummond asked a question or made a remark they listened with respectful attention. He came to the conclusion that they were by long odds the most pleasant and well-bred gentlemen he had met since his arrival in the West.

After a game in the office at game of cards to pass away the time was suggested by the Colonel, to which proposition Drummond readily consented.

It was a pleasant game, and after a few hours' amusement Mr. Burrows pulled out his watch and remarked:

"Colonel, business before pleasure. You know we are to be up early to-morrow to meet Williams on the stock yards and clove that deal."

"Yes, I had forgotten about that. Mr. Drummond, we shall be pleased to meet you some other evening, when we have no early engagement in the morning, but you will have to excuse us now, and give us our revenge at some other time."

Drummond retired with his winnings, which were not very extensive, and lo! his card-table companions cogitating evidently over some important matter of business.

"Colonel, I think, by the looks of things, that the game is working to perfection."

"Yes, Charlie, and that was a good move of yours to dismiss him early. Business before pleasure, you know."

At this recollection the Colonel gave a hearty laugh, and, lighting a cigar, proceeded to deal from the pack of cards.

"I have got it all my finger ends—can do it every time," he explained.

"Yes, was the response from his companion, "you are all right if you know notes; but you make a most bungling mess of it when you indulge in liquor."

The Colonel tilted his cigar and exclaimed, "Now, Charlie, give us a rest on lectoring. Didn't I tell you he was the man? You saw by the telegram that his name was James Drummond. He is the cattle-king of Montana and takes a pride in his prowess at the card table. Few of the men in the Rockies, I am told, can get away with him. But it's my opinion that with your and my dear charlie, we will show him the higher mathematics of poker and give him a college degree that will cost—well, considerable."

"There is one thing that struck me as unaccountable," said Burrows, "that when we got into a discussion on cattle, mentioned the stock-yards, and the deal we were having on hand, he took but little notice and conducted himself like a man who was in no wise interested."

"Here he showed his shrewdness," said the Colonel. "You don't think he was going to enter into any discussion with us when he supposed by our conversation that we were in the cattle trade. These cattlemen are not in the habit of giving their business away."

Here a tap was heard on the door, and in response to the cheerful "come in" of Mr. Burrows the door opened and a beautiful girl of about ten came bounding in and threw herself into his arms.

"Oh, papa!" she exclaimed, breathlessly, Mrs. Randolph has asked me to go to the theatre to-morrow afternoon. May I go?"

"Yes, you may, but don't let your foolish little tongue run away with your good sense, and you mustn't let lots hours and dissipation take the bloom off your cheek which you acquired on our ranch in Montana."

"Our ranch in Montana!" exclaimed the girl, in astonishment.

"Charlie," said the Colonel, in a disgusted tone, "that game won't work. There is too much truth in those eyes."

"You were too young, my dear, to remember," continued Burrows, taking no notice of the Colonel's remonstrance, "but you had many happy days in the far West on our ranch, where the cattle, like those of Scripture, were on a thousand hills. If Mrs. Randolph asks you any questions about me, say that your father is a large dealer in cattle, and what I tell you is so, because I say it so."

The girl looked incredulous, but kissing her papa good-night, said, archly:

"I don't recollect, papa, of being on a ranch, but I know I was there because dear, kind old papa knows best where I was long ago."

After she was gone the two men put on their overcoats and left the hotel by the Jackson street entrance.

Next evening at dinner Drummond found himself in the company of the interesting companions of the previous evening, and, after cigars, accompanied them to their rooms.

The game was a little more interesting to him, and about nine o'clock he found himself about $250 out of pocket, but fortunately a wire brought a telegram, which required his immediate presence at the Sherman House on a matter of business.

He arose, and explaining that he could not afford himself the pleasure of spending a longer time in such agreeable company, but promising to take his revenge next evening, bowed himself out.

"Deuced unlucky," growled the Colonel. "I was in the best possible shape and could deal out any hand to order. I could see he was in the best of luck, and I was on the point of proposing in a careless way to double the stakes."

"We have got him fast," responded Burrows, "and to-morrow night will open the game in good earnest. Funds are getting short, as I have some bills to meet, and we must replenish our bank account. Suppose you let me have $200?"

The Colonel consented, and Burrows, after placing it in the bureau drawer, put the key under a mat on the mantlepiece.

"Guess I'll go down to Clark, on Clark street," yawned the Colonel, "and try my luck."

"See that you let the fluid on the sidewalk alone and you will be sure to come out all right."

"There, you are lecturing again, pettishly responded the Colonel. "Don't you suppose that I'm man enough to do a thing when I say I'll do it?"

"Give me your hand on it and I'll go with you."

This the Colonel did, and after a lengthened period the two men reached with considerable wimbage, and to the $200 in the bureau over $700 as Burrows' share was added.

"Now," he soliloquized as he retired for the night, "I have enough to send Ada to school and pay her bills, she would have to live longer with her crabbed aunt with an distant frown, and hate the peculiar notion of my heart. Now I'm magnificent shape to tackle the game that will come night. I hope the Colonel will keep to his promise, and I didn't like the longing looks he cast on the sidboard this evening."

After transacting business Drummond returned to his hotel and turned into bed sincerely hoping that luck would favor him when next he played with his interesting friends.

The Colonel, who had all his life indulged in stimulants, fitful fever soon awoke about noon and after breakfast sat down to the game by the place where he had spent the previous evening.

The waiter had orders not to let him get lost heavily. The tempting sideboard was within his reach, and he kept on drinking and losing. His wan, haggard face, that one drink acted on him like a lighted match to a hay stack. Soon every cent was gone. After watching the other players glumly for some time he sprang up with a frown, as if he had formed a philosophic resolution, and left the hotel, passed Drummond, who was standing in the porch, with a hurried bow, went to Burrows' room, unlocked the bureau and took $200, leaving but all of the drawer.

Drummond stood watch at the Post-office in a complimentary mood, and in an absentmind way gazed at a gentleman crossing over. She looked up and waved her hand in greeting to some one in the hotel, and while so doing did not perceive the rapid approach of a team driven by a man evidently in an intoxicated state.

Drummond saw the danger and ran and, as King over, felt the hot breath of the horses in his face, but was just in time to seize the girl and drag her out of the way, but not before the muddy wheels had soiled her dress.

He bore the terrified child into the hotel, and at the ladies entrance encountered the pale face of Mr. Burrows, who, throwing up his hands, exclaimed:

"Thank God, my girl is safe!" turned to her rescuer and poured out his thanks.

Speaking to the clerk shortly afterward, he mentioned the occurrence, and asked if he would mind sending a man after to the reporters, stating in effect that James Drummond, the great Montana cattle king, had rescued the daughter of Charles Burrows, a prominent merchant of the same State, from being run over, and had both were guests of the hotel.

"James Drummond, of Montana," said the clerk, "left here two days ago. We have a James Drummond stopping here who is a commercial traveler who represents a New York iron firm. There he is coming out of the waiting-room."

Mr. Burrows was dumfounded at the information. The game of freezing a cattle king could not be played, and all he and his partner had conspired was to get $250 out of a drummer, who could ill afford such a loss, and who also had rescued his child from a horrible death.

"The strong hours conquer us," said Schiller. Injustice must be done, and he quickly devised a plan to accomplish his object. He had recovered $200 in the bureau, and the Colonel had almost as much. He had sufficient to pay his bills and send his daughter to school. He determined to invite Drummond up that evening and by methods at which he was an expert allow him to win back the $200 he had lost.

He noticed at dinner that the Colonel was very flushed and uneasy, and showed evident signs that he had been indulging.

"His condition chimes in excellently well with my plan. I shall now have no difficulty in carrying it out," he said to himself.

The Colonel took a hand and intimated that the time had come for business. Somehow his combination failed to work, and Drummond was soon a winner to an amount equivalent to his previous losses.

"I'm Colonel, with an oath, throw down the cards and staggered to his room.

"This broke up the game and Burrows, after again thanking Drummond for saving his child, bid him a kindly good night, remarking:

"My dear fellow, we must not play any more. The Colonel and I can afford such trifling losses, which only tend to make the game interesting, but you are not in a position to take such risks."

Drummond retired, feeling the force of the remark, and after his departure Burrows examined his bureau drawer and found that he had but little over $200 left. He rushed to the Colonel's room and demanded an explanation.

The Colonel confessed that he had fallen from grace, but tried to soothe the matter by informing Burrows that they would work Drummond next evening for a big stake.

"Look ha, a Colonel," said Burrows, in a hoarse voice, "all connection with us ceases from this time. You go your way and I'll go mine. That man is not a cattle king but a commercial traveler. This afternoon he saved my child. I saw you were intoxicated to-night, and worked your combination to his favor. My set and your breach of promise has left me but $200 to face the world on; but I would do precisely what I have done to-night if it left me penniless."

Will Give Him a Lift.

A tramp stopped the Rev. David Swing, who, with a meditative air, was walking along Michigan avenue, and said:

"My dear sir, you look like a benevolent man.

"I hope so," Mr. Swing replied.

"Ah, I feel that—and, I feel tried to make one leg shorter than the other, and then, after giving to his face that humoured look of suffering which is the tramp's greatest accomplishment, added:

"Would you mind helping me a lift, the—just a little. I am almost half lifted. I haven't had a bite to eat for four days.

"Well, come over to this restaurant," Mr. Swing replied. "and I will get you something to eat."

"My heart flutters with thanks, noble sir, but the truth is, I am a victim of dyspepsia, and know of but one dish the peculiar fancies of the dyspeptic, I can eat only at a certain place. The only place in this town where I can eat is a modest little restaurant away out on North Clark street, near Lincoln Park. Give me twenty-five cents, please, and let me lunch on it. There is be no harm in it.

"I am going out that way," said Mr. Swing, "and shall take pleasure in seeing that you get enough to eat.

The agony on the tramp's face deepened. It is a long way from here, sir," he mournfully answered.

"I know it, but I have business out there."

"How fortunate; how exceedingly fortunate. Let me see, now, I am a comparative stranger in this howling wilderness, and had many dealings with the two they will be put to—men who dwell within the Lincoln park district. Do you know them?"

"Know them! Why, I am now on my way to their office."

"Well, you get on one car and I will get on the one immediately following. Stop, you see, we shall be separated."

"Yes, and a capital idea, too, but in my heart—way down in my heart of hearts, I could not place such restriction on you."

"No restriction, I assure you."

"Oh, in your generosity you deem it, of course, but—oh, by the way, now that I have thought so much upon the subject, I remember a restaurant down at Dearborn boulevard."

"Oh, Dearborn! I have not, for many years, come upon so many cold coincidences. Come, I am now on my way to Dearborn boulevard. Come let us take a car.

The tramp sighed, and then the humiliated look of suffering faded from his face. "I cave," said he, "I simply throw up my hat and say, Let me know when you are to deliver your lecture on temperance sermon, and I will come around to Central Music Hall and give you a lift. So long."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Some Figures by a Reporter.

One of the problems with which a reporter on a morning paper has to deal is the probability of finding at home men whom he is assigned to interview after 8 o'clock in the evening. Long experience teaches him that the occupation, age, and social position of the person sought will enable him to estimate the chance very accurately. Assuming 100 to represent the certainty of finding his man, the probabilities will run about as follows: Clergymen on Monday and Saturday nights, 95; other nights, 50. Old bachelors, 75; young lawyers, unmarried, 25. Capitalists, 50. Doctors, 75. Politicians, between campaigns, 5. Clerks, living at home, 20. Clerks boarding, 10. Physicians, 50. Merchants, 50. Mechanics, 70. Young women, unmarried, 20; married women in society, 60; married women without special aspirations, 80. Old people, past 70 years, 50. After 10 o'clock at night the chances of finding middle-aged people at home are double the 8 o'clock chances, while the younger ones on the average usually come strolling in about 11 o'clock.—Buffalo Express.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Eveline.

MARCH 25.—Mrs. Jas. Reed is on the sick list.

Remember the hop and English supper at Bedwin's hall, Ironton, tomorrow (Friday) evening.

The report is circulated that two more stores will be opened up this spring at Ironton. Ironton is not so dead as it might be.

G. McDonald returned Friday from the upper peninsula, where he has been for nearly a year.

A. B. Noyes has traded the Pioneer House at Ironton, to Bert Burdick for his house and five acres of land adjoining the village. Mr. Noyes was one of the first to build at Ironton and the Pioneer House the first hotel built. We regret to see him leave it, but no doubt Mr. Burdick will make a good landlord and we wish him success.

The ice on the Arm is getting unsafe to cross; they have commenced to cut a channel on Friday, but as we write is not finished. Two teams and one man broke through one day last week.

We attended the entertainment at Advance on the evening of the 22d, and saw "Jumbo." The program was a success in every feature. We came within one of drawing that quilt.

Election next Monday; turn out and give a full vote.

Caucus was held Monday afternoon and was said by old settlers to be the largest and most exciting in the history of the township. After the caucus was called to order, a motion was made that a privilege should be given to anyone to talk upon the affairs of the township. The question of printing the township proceedings in the JOURNAL the past year was freely discussed, as well as other things in regard to the township books which were thought by some to have been kept in poor shape. The discussion took about one hour and a half, and resulted in the appointment of a committee of three, consisting of W. S. Stripp, David Lane, and Henry Purvis to examine the books. The nomination of officers then resulted as follows: For supervisor, David Lane; clerk, R. A. Miller; treasurer, S. B. Brown; highway commissioner, Swain Payton; justice of the peace, Dugal Galbraith; school inspector, Clinton Lane; constables, John Willis, Geo. Zimmerman, Edwin Tumoth, Edwin Jackson.

We understand that James Sanders, Sr., living two miles west of Ironton has lost his mind and will have to be taken to Traverse City for treatment. [Dr. Lewis and Carlstein yesterday pronounced him insane, and Judge Mayne issued an order to transfer him to the asylum, and he passed through Charlevoix last night in charge of R. A. Miller, one of the superintendents of the county poor. —ED. JOURNAL.]

Advance.

MARCH 26.—Godfrey VonPlaten has gone to Chicago on business.

Mr. Zimmerman and wife of East Jordan have been visiting friends here.

L. E. Phillips has been to Saginaw to see his son, who, it was reported was dangerously ill with typhoid pneumonia. Mr. Phillips returned last Saturday reporting his son as being convalescent and will be home soon.

Advance is still increasing in population. A young son has arrived at Otto Brooks', and one at Mr. King's. Mr. Brooks and Mr. King are both rendered happy thereby.

Our genial postmaster, A. B. Steele, has been to Saginaw as a delegate from the Boyne City Post of the G. A. R.

The Bazaar under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society, came off here last Friday night. Three large and beautiful bed quilts, two braille quilts, some fancy pin cushions, and numerous other things were sold. Two of the bed quilts were disposed of by lottery. Charles Graham and Harry Price being the holders of the lucky numbers. The entertainment, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, plays, charades, etc., was given by the Advance Amateur Dramatic Association, assisted by the tragedian C. Wellington Johnson, late of Toronto. All of the pieces were well rendered and, some of them elicited rounds of applause. The vocal music was excellent, and the band led by Frank Cutter of East Jordan, discoursed some fine music.

Taken all in all the entertainment was a decided success, netting the ladies about twenty dollars. We understand that the society intends giving another entertainment soon.

It was acknowledged by all that the four best looking people at the bazaar last Friday night, were the Wilson, Eveline, and Advance correspondents of the JOURNAL, and the Advance correspondent of the Enterprise.

Wilson.

Bad roads and pleasant weather.

Lumbering is over and clearing land has begun.

Mill has shut down for a few days for repairs.

May flowers were found this month.

Chas. Knuttel has bought seven acres of H. C. Scofield on the state road. Consideration, $1,000.

Charles Burch is in town until after election. Rumor says he will farm it this summer, and that he will not reside alone. Hope so, Charlie.

Olin Smith and Miss Prudie Scofield took tea with grandpa and ma Smith at Advance on Friday evening.

Caucus on Saturday last resulted as follows: For supervisor, Marion Hudkins; treasurer, Ashley Herron.

Several of the young people took in the exhibition and bazaar held by the M. E. L. A. S. at Advance, on Friday evening. They report a pleasant occasion.

Do Not Suffer any Longer.

Knowing that a cough can be checked in a day, and the first stages of consumption broken up in a week, we hereby guarantee Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption, and will refund the money to all who buy, take it as per directions, and do not find our statement correct. G. W. Beaman, druggist. 3

East Jordan.

From the Enterprise.

Capt. Guard and Ed. Gifford, of Charlevoix, were in town Saturday. We learned that the steamer Gordon has been fitted with a new 33-horse power engine, which will materially increase her speed. She has also a new shaft and wheel. We hope to see Capt and his family located here before long.

Joe Moore started to drive across the lake Saturday, but the ice was too soft, and the team went into ten feet of water at the first step. A large crowd quickly assembled, and after considerable trouble the horses were gotten out. An old oak wound on one of them was reopened, but no further damage was done. Wm. H. Vaughan was so interested in the proceedings, that he got into the soup up to his waist.

Ellsworth.

We are all busy making maple sugar.

Chas. Gotham and wife made a business trip to Charlevoix a few days ago.

S. A. Brown of Atwood, called here while on his way to East Jordan last Monday.

Wm. Crego has moved back to his farm.

Date Parks and Jerry Mobio are digging a well.

Robert Fulton went to Alba on business last Saturday.

David VanOrman moved his family to Norwood Tuesday.

Wm. Madell talks of going to California.

Ironton.

MARCH 21.—Mr. Thurston occupied the M. E. pulpit Sunday evening in the absence of the pastor, who is assisting Rev. Mr. Whitman in a revival at the Hilton schoolhouse.

Godfrey McDonald returned home last Friday from the upper peninsula where he has been working the past year.

Caucus was held last Monday, nominating a new set of officers all through except clerk.

Lots of talk about the postoffice these days. We would like to hear more about railroad and less about postoffice.

Mr. Saunders is still very bad off. Dr. Brown is attending him at present.

Burgess.

MARCH 27.—March is not going back on its former record but will go out like a gentle lion.

Miss Jackson has been visiting friends near the city for the past week.

E. H. Burgess broke his cable in the saw mill last Friday. Received a new one yesterday from Detroit. He expects to move in his new house the last of the week.

Frank Kane expects to be through with his logging job the last of this month.

John Brown has resumed work on his well and is down 160 feet.

Mrs. Gibson went to Charlevoix Tuesday.

CATARRAL—Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarral catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet containing full particulars, sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Echo.

Sugar making has begun.

Come up and get some warm sugar.

The McMillan boys are down from Wilson for a few days.

C. H. Morehouse is canvassing for a book.

Wesley Cole, whose former residence was in this township, and who has gone to Florida for his health, is reported very low and is not expected to recover.

At the township caucus held on Saturday last, the following nominations were made. For Supervisor, W. J. Bennett; clerk, James Barnes; treasurer, John Daly; treasurer, German Button.

A Safe Investment.

Is one which is guaranteed to bring you satisfactory results, or in case of failure, a return of purchase price. On this safe plan you can buy from our advertised druggist a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It is guaranteed to bring relief in every case, when used for any affection of throat, lungs or chest, such as Consumption, Inflammation of Lungs, bronchitis asthma, Whooping Cough, Croup etc., etc. It is pleasant and agreeable to taste, perfectly safe, and can always be depended upon. Trial bottles free at F. G. Hines & Co.'s drug store.

Barnard.

The roads are drying up fast.

Miss Aggie Kirkpatrick was a guest at Robert Trimble's over Sunday.

A fine young son arrived at the home of Robert Matchett last week.

Mr. Tom Shapton of Barnard and Miss Maggie Bennett of Eastport were married last Thursday at the home of the bride's parents. Thursday evening they took possession of their new home here. We join their many friends in wishing them much happiness.

Communication.

Hayes, March 25, 1889.

EDITOR JOURNAL:—I see the Hayes reporter to the Sentinel says, "the highway commissioner received $80 for services, and who knows what it is for." None so blind as those that won't see. First, there is $3 for time lost hunting up town clerk to make road warrants; $4.50 for making copies of the same; $3 for altering road warrants to please said reporter and making record of the same; $3 for want of clerk to settle with the township; $10 for making returns to roads laid for want of clerk to make the same. Total, $23.50. Taken from $80, leaves $56.50.

SPRING ELECTIONS.

A Light Vote Polled for Township Officers.

For some reason we cannot understand, the JOURNAL has not received full reports from all the townships in time for publication this week as in previous years. Only about half of our correspondents have responded. However we give below what we have been able to gather from all sources.

A comparison of the vote for justice of the supreme court with the vote for president last fall, shows that only about two-thirds of the total vote was cast, with no material change in political complexion. In Charlevoix the vote is surprisingly close, and there is reason to believe that with hard work and careful management the township may be redeemed.

The township officers elected are given below:

BAY.

Supervisor—A. J. Sheppard.
Clerk—John Ferris.
Treasurer—H. Rathka.
School inspector—J. L. Dilworth.
Highway commissioner—H. C. Meisnigle.
Justice (full term)—E. E. Boynton.

The Union Ticket.

As soon as the republican ticket was put in nomination last week there were murmurings of dissatisfaction,—not against the whole ticket, but against certain candidates,—and the question was numerously asked, "Will the democrats put up a straight ticket, or will there be a union ticket?" The latter was decided upon, and the caucus called for Saturday evening. A D. Cruickshank was made chairman, and John Burns secretary. The name of O. D. Wood was proposed for supervisor, and as no other name was presented, the nomination was made by acclamation. The same proceeding was adopted for H. S. Harsha for clerk, Geo. W. Miller for treasurer, O. S. Washburn for justice, L. E. Allen for school inspector, R. Mudge for highway commissioner, and James Martin, Geo. Pappin, John McCabe, and Thomas Boak, Sr., for constables, there being but one candidate for each office.

On election day there was considerable work done by both sides, resulting in the election of the entire union ticket, except highway commissioner. The vote in detail is as follows:

MICHIGAN MENTION.

Sundry Gleanings From Our State Exchanges.

The house of P. S. Brinkerhoff at Elk Rapids caught fire the other day. Damages not heavy.

The firm of Northrop & Williams, hardware and grocery dealers at Manton have made an assignment.

Stephen B. Davis of Central Lake, Antrim county, died recently aged 73. He took up the first homestead ever located in Central Lake township.

Moses W. Field, who recently died at Detroit, seems to have been playing the lover's act with a romantic married woman who now claims a rebate for her affections.

At Elk Rapids, Martin Henson, Jr., while hauling logs, was struck by the binder flying back and received a deep gash over his right eye about two inches long and to the skull.

A tramp went into the house of R. C. Hewett of Alanson, Emmet county recently, and asked for something to eat. While Mrs. Hewett went into an adjoining room, the tramp appropriated her pocket book and left.

The oldest inhabitant of Cheboygan bows his head in contrition and acknowledges himself best because the dust is flying on the street at this time of year. Usually on the 26th of March the dust is hiding under a foot of snow.

They say that J. Maurice Finn has sold his store at Grayling so that he can devote all his time to digging gold out of his upper peninsula gold mine. If J. Maurice makes a million up there the democratic party in Michigan will be in luck.

A long petition was sent from Cheboygan against the proposed bill now pending before the legislature for the inspection of all meat on the hoof, the object of which was to shut out Chicago dressed beef. Every butcher in town signed the remonstrance.—Democrat.

Edson Packard, postmaster at Bengonia, died very suddenly, March 20th, of congestion of the brain. He was attending a meeting of the library society, but feeling ill, went home at nine o'clock, and died at 10.30. He leaves many warm friends who mourn his loss.

P. A. Badour is now publisher of the Marinette County Argus, published at Marinette, Wis. Philip is an old Cheboygan boy and we are glad to see that he is succeeding, as the paper bears unmistakable evidence of prosperity though it is only three weeks old.—Democrat.

Joseph Macsauble, whose father was the chief of the Ottawa indians when the first whites settled in west Michigan, is a resident of Grand Haven. He was born near the present town of Allegan in 1817, and in 1850 removed to Grand Traverse county, where he remained several years. Macsauble's father fought under Tecumseh in the war of 1812.—DetroitJournal.

Christian Kableman, the fifteen year old son of Charles Kableman, who lives in the north-east corner of Pleasantview, was at work with his father last Monday felling a tree. The tree split and started to fall. The boy became excited and ran directly in the way of the falling tree. He was struck on the temple and instantly killed, although a fallen log prevented his body from being crushed. The funeral was held Wednesday.—Democrat.

Gov. Luce has pardoned Barney Ronsson, who was sent to state prison from Alpena May 17, 1884, for seven years for manslaughter. Ross sean returned from the lumber woods to find, as he believed, that a man named Savage had become unduly intimate with his wife. He was unable to induce the police to keep Savage away from his home, and therefore took the law into his own hands and stabbed the other. Many Alpena citizens petitioned for the pardon.

The State Elections.

The returns received at this writing, while not sufficiently full to indicate by what majority the state has been carried, show beyond a doubt that the republican state ticket has been elected. Judge Grant received, as was anticipated, a very heavy majority in the Upper Peninsula, and in the Lower Peninsula, while the plurality has probably fallen off from that of last fall, there has been no marked change of political sentiment. It is apparent that, with exceptions in a few special localities, men as a rule, voted for justice in accordance with their party predilections, and the party lines being rigidly drawn, Judge Sherwood suffered defeat.

There seems every reason to believe that the amendment to the constitution increasing the governor's salary from $1,000 to $4,000 per annum has been adopted by a large majority. The indications also point to the adoption of the amendment relative to the duration of corporations and to that relative to the judicial circuits, permitting the election of an additional judge in the Kent circuit. There was not as much popular interest shown in the two latter amendments as there was in that relating to the governor's salary, and in some localities a misapprehension of the amendment relative to corporations led to an adverse vote. The probability, however, is that all three amendments have been adopted.—Free Press.

Town Meeting.

At the town meeting on Monday Henry Moore was elected pathmaster for the south side, and D. M. Colby for the north side. John Bell was elected poundmaster for the south side, and Joseph Pappin for the north side. Cattle will run at large, and somebody will have a dandy time trying to enforce the resolution to remove the bells at night. An appropriation of $500 was made for the bridge fund; also $250 from the one-mill tax for library purposes. One-fourth of one per cent was voted for highway purposes outside the village corporation.

Burned Out.

Last Saturday noon, the house of W. P. Edson, in Marion, was entirely destroyed with all its contents, the family getting out with only the clothes on their back. Loss about $800 with no insurance. A contribution was taken Saturday night and Monday in Marion and Charlevoix for his benefit, and quite a sum was subscribed.

The First Boat.

On Sunday, March 31, Gelken's fish tug Anapach arrived from Manistee, and was the first boat to enter the harbor, although on Saturday, 30th, the Onekama came in sight, and C. C. Kehl, of Northport, walked ashore on the ice. On Monday Gelken went outside and set a gang of nets.

Constitutional Amendments.

By some misunderstanding on the part of the county clerk, ballots for the constitutional amendments were not furnished to all the townships and as a consequence no vote was cast in south of them and from others only a partial report is received.

Aid Society Election.

At the annual meeting of the Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church, the following officers were named for the ensuing year:

President, Mrs. C. J. Strang; first vice-president, Mrs. E. L. Page; second vice-president, Esther Butters; secretary, Mrs. G. W. Beaman; treasurer, Mrs. A. Cameron.

English Spavin Liniment

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.

The Reason of the Famous Authoress Said to Be Dethroned.

A special from Hartford, Conn., reports that Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe has recovered physically from the attack of sickness which last last summer threatened to cut short her life, but her mind is shattered and intellectually she is but a child. Her friends will not say that she is insane but that she is an imbecile, but her mind is almost completely gone. Her memory is that of a baby. When former dear friends visit her—people whom she has known for years—she greets them with a vacant stare, no indicative of a knowing look. She sits all day long in her chair, or walks about the house aimlessly, or plays with her dolls. She always wore a sunbonnet when she went out of doors, and she does so now, and she will sit by the hour with her sunbonnet on her lap, playing with her dolls. She is perfectly docile and gentle, and is in no sense a lunatic. She is simply a child, and her mind is shattered and intellectually she is but a child. Her friends will not say that she is insane for that she is an imbecile, but her mind is almost completely gone. Her memory is that of a baby. BUSINESS IMPROVING.

R. G. Dun & Co. Report a Generally Favorable Outlook.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s review of trade for last week is as follows:

The spirit of recovery in legitimate trade increases, and though in important branches the season has been exceptionally unfavorable, there is less dullness or depression than under the circumstances might be expected. Throughout the country the indirect influence reporting there come signs of some improvement in trade, though it is not yet where gain, or even gradual. The outlook is generally quite encouraging, though in some sections, especially the Northwest, where Dakota, Minnesota and Minnesota preparation for seeding is a full month ahead of last year. At Chicago and some other points business is considered better than last year, but there is a marked reaction at Pittsburg from the favorable tone of the last few weeks. At Philadelphia the situation is the same in the best and shoe and leather trades, but dry goods are in ordinary condition and collections slow, as also at Milwaukee. The Government report as to wheat in farmers' hands has had some effect, but the fact that Northwestern wheat is now moving shows the covering of stocks. Exports continue insignificant, and good prospects for the coming crop tend to weaken holders. Corn has declined 12 cents at New York and 10 cents at Chicago, and oats are substantially unchanged. No disturbance occurred in the money market. The business failures for the week are unusual 185.

PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATIONS.

Whitelaw Reid for Minister to France to Succeed Mr. McLane.

President Harrison sent the following nominations to the Senate on the 12th inst:

"HALSTEADIZED" is the latest substitute for rejected, since Murat Halstead was rejected by the senate.

The latest republican scheme for reducing the treasury surplus is to double the salaries of the senators and representatives. The senate has already seconded on this question, and is in favor of it, as might be expected.

ONCE more the national treasury surplus is piling up. Payments of liberal appropriations fail to keep it down. Bond purchases are equally unavailing. Our friends, the enemy, will have trouble with that surplus, the fruit of burdensome unnecessary taxation, yet.—Pittsburg Post.

WHEN Senator Hoar asked Senator Platt, of Connecticut, the other day if he was receiving many applications for office, Platt quietly replied: "If as many republicans had voted on election day in Connecticut as I have found from since the inauguration, the democrats would not have carried the state."

As effort is being made in Wisconsin to throw open by legislative enactment a large tract of timbered land in the northern part of the state which several years ago was set aside as a state park. The so-called park contains 578,000 acres of land and is said to have on it 600,000,000 feet of standing timber.

PRESIDENT HARRISON has fired all the colored help in the White House, and supplied its place with white servants. The nigger is an object of great solicitude on the part of the republicans until they come in contact with him, then they are more brutal and unchristian in their treatment of the colored brother than the southern whites.—Cheboygan Democrat.

President Edwin Willits of the Michigan Agricultural College, has been appointed assistant secretary of agriculture by President Harrison, and has accepted this important position. His salary will be $4,500 a year and his eminent fitness for the place is universally conceded. Mr. Willits succeeded to the presidency of the college in 1885, and under his admirable management it has taken a position second to none among the agricultural colleges of the country. His resignation is received with profound regret by all friends of the college.—Mason Democrat.

A TRADE-RESTRICTION journal, which has repeatedly backed Mr. Blaine in his denial that there are any trusts in the United States, or that the tariff tends to create them, in a late issue assures us that all the twine for grain binding purposes in the country has been bought up by a monopoly, and that twine which last year could be bought for 9 cents a pound will cost 25 cents this year.

Now, there is a duty on all the materials which enter into the manufacture of twine, ranging from 17 to 35 per cent. It is so prohibitory that in 1888 of thread and twine of all kinds but $638,551 worth was imported.

Of course the farmers and country dealers are kicking against the twine combine. But what's the use? The combine has 500,000 bales all bought up and packed away, awaiting the coming harvest demand. At the same time the tariff effectually excludes all foreign competition.

The combine is sane behind the lines of fortification in the shape of an excessive tariff, which the government has erected for its especial benefit. There is no possibility of its dislodgement or surrender until it has extracted the uttermost farthing from its totally disorganized prey.

Ice in the Straits.

From Grand Rapids Democrat, March 27.

Indications from Mackinaw yesterday were that the the ice in the straits would move out early this year, probably about April 1. The straits between Bois Blanc Island and Cheboygan were nearly free from ice yesterday afternoon, but opposite Wangoshance the ice was still solid. In Grand Traverse bay the ice was being driven into the bay by a strong north wind but it was stated that a good south wind would soon free the bay from ice. Toward night the thermometer went down, but if the present mild weather continues the ice at the straits will move earlier, with one exception, than for 35 years.

The following is a statement showing the exact date upon which the ice moved out of the straits of Mackinaw during the last 35 winters. In 1878 the ice moved March 14, earlier than any preceding year by several weeks:

1854, April 25; 1855, May 1; 1856, May 2; 1857, May 1; 1858, April 6; 1859, April 4; 1860, April 13; 1861, April 25; 1862, April 18; 1863, April 17; 1864, April 23; 1865, April 21; 1866, April 22; 1867, April 25; 1868, April 10; 1869, April 23; 1870, April 18; 1871, April 3; 1872, April 28; 1873, May 1; 1874, April 29; 1875, April 28; 1876, April 28; 1877, April 29; 1878, March 14; 1879, April 23; 1880, April 5; 1881, May 4; 1882, April 5; 1883, April 28; 1884, April 28; 1885, May 6; 1886, April 4; 1887, April 28; 1888, May 4.

East Jordan.

From the Enterprise.

Ass Loveday got back from Flint Wednesday.

The Catholic church lot has been stumped and fenced, making a great improvement. Services were held at the church last Sunday.

On Monday last Jack Egan plowed Mrs. Jeff Weikle's garden. This is the first plowing of the season in East Jordan.

Wm. Healey has sold out, and will leave about the middle of April for Portland, Oregon, where he will go into the building business. Mr. Healey is an old and valued inhabitant having resided here for 21 years.

Sam Hayden has bought the Healey house and lot on Second street. Orlando Blair has secured the dock property, and the Barber boys have purchased the farm and brick yard, so ares in all, and will work them both to the fullest extent.

W. Reilly, landlord of the Boyne Falls hotel, is languishing in the cooler unable to find bail. He was charged last Thursday, on the information of Sidney Joliffe, with selling whiskey without having a license and was held for circuit court.

Protection Triumphed, but Wages are Low.

The Fall River strike failed for want of funds, and the employees went back to work without getting the satisfying wages promised them by protectionist orators last fall. These operatives in many cases got lower wages than are paid in free trade England for like services. The tariff taxes on imported goods such as are produced at the Fall River mills are being exacted, however, and they are still putting extra profit into the mill owners pockets, but none of it evidently reaches the workmen. The latter will never get their share till tariff laws are so drawn as to require manufacturers to pay their employees the ordinary rate of wages and, in addition, the amount by which the price of their product is enhanced by the tariff. If the workingmen are the proper beneficiaries of protection, as campaign orators assert, why not amend the law in the direction suggested. Another amendment requiring the government to refund to the workingman out of employment the amount of the tariff tax on articles he buys with his small means ought to be popular with the protectionist friends of labor. Evidently the tariff tax cannot benefit the man who receives no wages, and he ought not to be made to carry a burden that kills him financially.—Baltimore Sun.

Robbing the Workers.

Keep it before the people that no import duties can by any possibility increase wages. A tariff can only rob the workers for while it can't increase their wages, it can and does rob them of nearly half they get by increasing the cost of necessaries of life, compelling them to subsidize the rich.—Cheboygan Democrat.

Cough medicines, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is in greater demand than ever. No other preparation for Throat and Lung Troubles is so prompt in its effects, so agreeable to the taste, and so widely known as this. It is the family medicine in thousands of households.

"I have suffered for years from a bronchial trouble that, whenever I take cold or am exposed to inclement weather, manifests itself by a very severe hoarseness, pain in the throat and by difficulty in breathing. I have tried a great many remedies, but none does as well as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which always gives prompt relief in returns of my old complaint."—Ernest A. Hepler, Inspector of Public Roads, Parish Terre Bonne, La.

"I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a most important remedy

For Home Use.

I have tested its curative power, in my family many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults."—Mrs. E. G. Edgerly, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

"Twenty years ago I was troubled with a dry cough like hoop. Doctors afforded me no relief and considered my case hopeless. My lungs became so sore that I could not lie down, and, before I had finished one bottle, found relief. I continued to take this medicine until a cure was effected. I believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—Samuel Griggs, Washington, Ill.

"Six years ago I contracted a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and soon developed all the alarming symptoms of consumption. I had a cough, night sweats, bleeding of the lungs, pains in the chest and sides, and was so prostrated as to be confined to my bed most of the time. After trying various prescriptions, without benefit, my physician finally determined to give me Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took it, and the effect was magical. I seemed to rally from the first dose of this medicine, and after using only three bottles, am as well and sound as ever."—Rodney Johnson, Springfield, Ill.

Seventeen large boxes filled with the latest styles of hats and caps, constituted a wagon load dropped at Geo. Miller's clothing store one day this week. And George says there are more to follow.

The Odd Fellows of Charlevoix will observe the 68th anniversary of Odd Fellowship in America, with a ball at Bertholomew's opera house, on April 26th. Invitations will be issued in a few days, and preparations made for a social success.

Alick Rosenthal starts on Thursday for the markets to buy new goods. He promises to put on sale the finest stock of dry goods ever displayed in Charlevoix, and in his new store he can show up the beauties of a very large stock.

☞ If your cough keeps you awake and restless by night, take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and obtain immediate relief. This remedy allays inflammation, heals the pulmonary organs, induces sleep, and restores health. The sooner you begin the better.

☞ "When the spring time comes," we usually find ourselves drowsy and exhausted, owing to the impure and sluggish state of the blood. To remedy this trouble, take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the most powerful, yet safe and economical, blood-purifier in existence.

On Monday, April 1st, Sam Lobdell took charge of the McLeod meat market, and proposes to run it in first-class style, while "Mac" takes a much needed rest. A. E. Troester will remain in the market, and our people can depend that everything will be right. Being free from the market, Mr. McLeod will buy live stock for this and other markets.

The Charlevoix cornet band are preparing to give their first semi annual band concert at the opera hall tomorrow (Friday) evening. April 5th. A choice program is promised. Admission 25 cents, reserved seats 35 cents, at Cochran's drug store. The people should give the boys a benefit, as they have been, and are, under considerable expense to maintain their organization and to secure instruction.

Mrs. Thompson was much worried the other day by the absence of her daughter Alfreda, altogether forgetting that she had playfully consented a while before for her to walk over to Charlevoix to see some friends. Miss Alf had an idea that 18 miles was only a step, so walked over, spent the night with friends, and walked back every step of the way. She thinks now that 18 miles and back make several steps, or rather more.—Record.

The following from an exchange has the right ring: "A kind word, a pleasant smile, a cheerful greeting, a genial pressure of the hand, or a familiar nod as you pass on the street—thats all; but, perhaps, you have sent a ray of sunshine into some sorrowful heart, and touched that invisible cord of human sympathy which trembles in sadness and causes it to vibrate with joy. Let us be social; it costs but little and carries with it so many blessings, the value of which we have no means of estimating."

A Narrow Escape.

Col. W. R. Nelson, of Brooklyn, came home one evening feeling a peculiar tightness in the chest. Before retiring, he tried to draw a long breath but found it almost impossible. He suffered four days from pneumonia, and the doctors gave him up. Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption saved him and he is well to-day. Sold by G. W. Beaman, druggist.

Special School Meeting.

A special school meeting is called for Friday, April 12th, to vote the necessary bonds for building the new school house.

BRIDGET'S DECISION.

A tiny message by the cable.
How would make my heart so glad.

Tim, the postman, wants to wed me.
Says he loves me more than life.
Should I marry him I wonder
He would take me for his wife.

Nothing but a note from mother;
Indeed, I'll no longer wait;
I'll accept the faithful postman.
And for Bridget to be too late.

GROPING IN DARKNESS.

BY JESSIE ETHEL.

A BEAUTIFUL girl of eighteen sat writing a delicately scented note at a table near the bay window of the tower room of an antiquated but pretentious mansion, located on the lake shore a few miles from the city of Chicago, and hidden by heavy vines in the garden below a dark-eyed man of sinister face was watching her.

His surveillance was apparently unsuspected, for the maiden seemed absorbed in her task, and her rich color came and went as she read the few lines she had written in a low, sly tone, sweet and mellow as golden beads dropped into a crystal dish.

"My love," it read simply, "our dream is ended! For the last time meet me at the trysting place—Raven Cliff."

It was directed "Victor," and it was signed "Adrienne." She folded the note over and over, until it was small and compact as a lozenge. Then she took up a piece of narrow silk ribbon, secured it round and round the missive, leaving the long ends free, and went to a wicker cage in which, peeking at the bars as if pining and fretting for liberty, was a snow-white dove of perfect plumage.

It fluttered, yet lingered in her grasp as she gently drew it from the cage and attached the note to its neck by severing the ribbon about it. Then she caressed it and set it free, with the sighing words:

"Take a kiss to my own, swift messenger—the last mission of a hopeless love!"

She saw the carrier dove pierce the ether, straight wing ng its flight into the face of the dazzling sun, watched a speck beyond thicket and dale, and then, leaning her fair head on the table, wept as if her heart would break.

"Confusion!" A fierce, hissing anathema, ground out by the lurking spy in the shrubbery below. The word seemed to express the pent-up hatred and rage of a baffled, charged plotter.

"So this is her means of communicating with the man I hate!" went on the harsh, grinding voice. "Locks and bribed servants do not avail—love laughs at obstacles! Shall I tell her father of this? No, no! I will wait! I will watch! I will learn all! To-night ends all. With another day, doves, lover, and mansion will be many leagues from Adrienne—and he—revenged! ere my plans are consummated."

An hour went by. The girl had not changed her position. Suddenly there was a rustling sound at the window, a soft, cooing note, and a second dove, sky-blue in color, fluttered to her bosom, and her trembling hands unloosed the return message secured at its wing.

With swimming eyes the girl kissed the few brief words that told her that her lover would meet her as desired. Then she placed the dove in its cage and left the room.

The man in the garden smiled a sinister, cruel smile, as he lit a cigar, wandered from the house, crossed a lawn, threaded a narrow, daisy-starred path that led to a bluff overlooking the lake, and, secreting himself amid some bushes, wait d, and waited, as might a fowler, sure of his prey and his snare alike.

Dusk came down with slow, trailing garments of gray, sweepiny the red from the sky and the gold from the forest aisles. A second firn, that of a man graceful as an Apollo, reached the summit of Raven Cliff and lingered there.

Then a quivering form, in light, pretty muslin, came to meet him. The soft caresses were fearful, the tones that spoke tremulous. The cruel eyes of the watcher glowed like lurid flame, as he heard the held, cheering words of the lover, the desponding accents of the girl.

"No, no, Victor!" she quavered; "better let love die in sadness, grief, hopelessness, than add to it some dreaded token of revenge; that will break my heart. It is useless to appeal to my father; this man Despard has him completely under his influence. He has promised him that I shall wed him, and Despard has induced him to leave here. Should they go to-night—"

"To-night!" echoed Victor, with a gasp of dismay. "I must know if they do. They shall not bear you away, and I never know to what misery they have condemned you. Promise, if they seek to leave, you will send a message—the carrier-dove!"

"I promise, but of what avail? Would you follow me? Then Despard will do you some deadly injury. As it is, he thirsts for revenge on the man I can never cease to love. Leave Chicago! my heart will break!"

Sighs, kisses, tears, a last "Promise! you will send me the message?" and then the lovers parted, and Despard clenched his teeth venomously.

"Torture!" he groaned out. "Ah, my lady, you shall have tonight, and you, Victor Dane—look your last on the love you stole from me, for my revenge is very near!"

One hour later, a broken, helpless creature, Adrienne Dare, stole to the tower room. Her face was a pall of despair. She knew the worst.

By specious promises, baneful influence, Despard had induced her father to leave at midnight for his own home in the far West, where troublesome rivals would no longer annoy, and Adrienne would, amid new scenes, forget the "romantic folly" that opened a bar to a favorable union.

Adrienne appealed to her father vainly. He seemed completely in Despard's power, and carelessly averred that time would bring her another and a wealthy lover far more preferable than one who has had a fortune and a name yet to earn.

Outside, a revolver in his clasp, just beyond the garden wall, stood Despard, his basilisk glance fixed on the lighted tower-room.

"If she seeks to send a message to Dane I will prevent it!" he hissed. "I would bring him here, and Dare's whim to remain or treat with him would be fatal to my plans. Ha! she dares."

Yes, the casement opened. A dove, love-winged, missive-freighted, flew out into the night.

The cruel marksman steadied his wrist. A quick report n gled in echo with a despairing wail at the window; the dove circled, reeled, and, limp and disabled, disappeared amid the foliage of a great tree.

"I am revenged!"

The speaker was Despard, and his dark face was only with brutal triumph, as he glared down on his secret and helpless victim of the night.

Two miles across the country he had gone straight from the Dacre mansion, to the small villa where Victor Dane made his summer home.

Dane was a chemist, high in esteem among scientists, and he had filled up his spacious, and costly laboratory, where he worked and experimented, where he sought and found, and secreted, poisons. Here he had received his messages from Adrienne, two small windows looking north just showing the turrets of the Dacre mansion.

Lost in a reverie, he had not heard stealthy footsteps on the carpet. The door had opened, and his rival Despard, dealing him a heavy blow, had forced him senseless to the floor. When he awoke to consciousness, Victor found himself in an iron cage, tied to it with strong cords, hand and foot, and Despard glowering wickedly down upon him.

"I said look your last on your love!" he hissed, venomously. "Victor Dane, this night I carry away wife and fortune and you. Ah! I have a slow, pleasant death for you! Gagged, secure, count the minutes as they tick away, and close your eyes to wake no more. I am revenged!"

In mute horror Victor saw the preparations made for his murder. Near by was a large retort that held a deadly, noxious gas. His rival knew of its death-dealing qualities, for he had shut the two windows closely, turned on the nozzle, and the air of the room became poisonous.

"Half an hour—an hour!" hissed Despard, his face like that of a demon, "and I return to find you dead. I release you, remove your bonds, and when you are disco-ered people will say that you fell a victim—ha! ha!—to your love for science!"

He left the room as he spoke. Victor Dane, pale as death, tried to force his bonds. They loosened, but, alas! the insidious gas robbed mind and body of strength. His senses reeled, his brain seemed bursting.

Tap! tap! tap!

At the window a fluttering sound greeted his dull hearing. Oh! would help not come!—the bane assassin relent! "Adrienne, my love!" and then—

Tap! tap! tap! Crash!—but the limp, palsied form was motionless.

"Saved!"

With a gasp Victor Dane opened his eyes. That horrible throbbing and choking was gone. The air was still rank and dense, but mingled with it was a current of cool air, pure as crystal, as it sought the vapor with which it mingled.

With a prodigious effort Victor loosened his hands, and freed his instant later. He stared at a shattered pane of glass. He picked up a warm, soft object lying beneath the window. He staggered, it in his hand, to the starway, to the lighted study, below.

The dove—wounded, it had fallen from the shot of the cruel Despard. Then, winging its flight painfully homeward, it had tapped at its accustomed window, shattered the glass in its frantic efforts to enter, and had saved the life of its master.

"Faithful dove! the message brought at the cost of love!" murmured Victor, kissing the bird, would-be assassin, the law shall prevent you now!"

He ran hatless from the place. He stopped at the first house. The sheriff in the county seated there. When Victor Dane again came forth it was with a companion, commissioned to arrest Despard for attempted murder.

At the Dacre mansion they found its owner, crazed, shrieking, impatient; Adrienne, veiled and in tears; the trunks packed, the carriage waiting for Despard.

But no Despard! Dacre stared in stupid amazement at the story of the sheriff. He believed that Despard, affrighted at his crime, had fled, and looked as if he was glad of it. He only scowled when Victor, leaving with the sheriff said to Adrienne in fervent tones:

"Courage! I do not be prevailed on to leave here under circumstances Despard's plans shall fail, believe me!"

They sought Despard everywhere. At morn, wearied and unsuccessful, Victor and the sheriff returned to his home. They entered the laboratory.

"Look!" cried the sheriff in a startled tone, pointing to the floor.

"Despard!"

"Yes, and dead!"

Dead, and horribly disfigured! Beside him lay an iron cage, recognized by Victor as having contained a dove.

Despard had evidently returned the preceding night to remove all traces of murder from his victim. He, had stumbled in the darkness. The fall had probably stunned him, and in face falling in the liquid, he had inhaled its noxious poison and been suffocated.

Dacre confessed that he had been drugged and drifted, and not with, hold his consent to the happy marriage that took place a month later.

And, treasured among relics, lowtokens and bijouterie more than anything else by happy Adrienne and Victor is the dove, rendered almost lifelike by the taxidermist, and the silver carrier dove that saved Victor Dane's life.

Sugar-Making a Chinese Invention.

The Chinese, who invented almost everything of value known anybody heard of it, claim to be the original discoverers of the process of sugar-making, and it is said that sugar was made in China as long ago as 5,000 years. This is mighty hard for the rest of the world to swallow, but the fact is well established that it was manufactured in China long before the Christian era began. India has put forward a claim for priority of invention, but the probability is that the Hindoos learned the art of sugar-making from the Chinese, and that through them the knowledge finally spread to the Western nations. Nearchus, when sent by Alexander on an exploring voyage on the Indus, brought back reports of "honey which was made by the Asiatics from cane growing in India, and which, it was then neither the Greeks nor the Jews nor the Babylonians had any knowledge of sugar, but later the art of making the artificial "honey" became known and spread, though its progress and development was exceedingly slow. It was prescribed as a medicine by Galen in the year 100, and in the seventeenth century it had become nothing more than a costly luxury, to be used only on special occasions. Even as late as the beginning of the eighteenth century the annual consumption of sugar in Great Britain had reached only 20,000,000 pounds, while it is now more than 2,000,000,000 pounds. Refined sugar was not made in England till 1650. The art of refining was learned by a Venetian merchant from the Saracens, who sold the secret to him for 100,000 crowns.—Good Housekeeping.

Never Tired.

When this country was first settled, there was an impression among the colonists that the Indians had no intelligence or craft in their relations with the white men. The latter soon found, however, that this was not the case.

Some of the farmers attempted to barter goods with the Indians, but found that they had a propensity to "get tired" so soon after they began to trade that their services were of little value. One day a farmer was visited by a student Indian, who said: "Me want work."

"No," said the farmer, "you will get tired."

"No, no," said the Indian, "me never get tired."

The farmer, taking his word for it, set the Indian at work and went away about some other business. Toward noon he returned to the place and found the Indian sound asleep under a tree.

"Look here, look here," shouted the farmer, shaking the Indian violently, "you told me that you never got tired, and yet here you are stretched out on the ground!"

"Ugh!" said the Indian, rubbing his eyes and slowly clambering to his feet, "if me not lie down, me get tired like the rest."—Exchange.

Unclaim Man.

Man is an unguinly creature at the best. His head is an irregular spheroid; his eyes are not alike or of equal efficiency; his whiskers won't grow uniformly. One shoulder is higher than the other, one hand or foot larger than the other—and this on opposite sides—his hips (if he has any) are unequal in shape. The calves of his legs are not anything but age, and without the help of invention, but the probability is that the Hindoos learned the art of sugar-making from the Chinese, and that through them the knowledge finally spread to the Western nations. Nearchus, when sent by Alexander on an exploring voyage on the Indus, brought back reports of "honey which was made by the Asiatics from cane growing in India, and which, it was then neither the Greeks nor the Jews nor the Babylonians had any knowledge of sugar, but later the art of making the artificial "honey" became known and spread, though its progress and development was exceedingly slow. LINCOLN'S ASSASSIN.

FACTS NEVER BEFORE PUBLISHED CONCERNING J. WILKES BOOTH.

A Graphic Description of the Pursuit and Capture—Dangerous Journey with the Corpse—Disposition of the Remains.

Booth at once went to the office of the Surgeon-General, where Dr. Barnes, who commanded the beautiful of cavalry that accompanied the fugitive, was waiting for him in the old Virginia barn, heard the last words he ever uttered, and lowered the body into its place.

Booth's face was pallid, but still straight as an arrow, and a more soul-hatred and gaze boarding. In the museum of the State Agricultural College, three miles from here, is the spire of the war-horse he rode during the pursuit. Lieutenant Dana, who was in charge of the Lincoln children for one year, and who is now recently full of years the college faculty requested permission to have the skin mounted and placed in the museum.

The Lieutenant tells the story of Booth's capture modestly, and as he was with the murderer during the last hours of his life, his narrative is taken a great deal of valuable matter that has never before been published.

At the time of the assassination Lieut. Baker was in the employ of the War Department's secret service, and was ordered to Washington, to report to L. C. Baker. He was in the saddle when word was wired from lower Maryland that the fugitive crazed assassin had been found—a negro stating that two men answering the description of Booth and the man Herrold had crossed the Potomac the Saturday night before. Baker was ordered to Port Tobacco, and with a squad of cavalry was hurried along in his rear. Both cavalry and infantry were in the chase, and Baker was ordered to "take no prisoners" in the party, and to "follow the Lieutenant's orders," and he was ordered to "shoot to kill." Baker was a man whose nerves were of steel, and he was a man who was a man who was a man who Charlevoix, Mich., Apr 4, 1889.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Eveline.

APRIL 2—David Jarman, of Petoskey, was in town last week visiting his uncle and cousins, the family of E. G. Jarman.

Another flurry of snow Saturday.

Supervisor, Ava Smith, let the job of cutting a channel across the arm at the ferry to M. J. Staley last week, and Mr. Staley finished the work Saturday. Travelers are still crossing on the ice.

A little son of Ava Smith is very sick with lung fever.

James Graham returned home Friday from Canada, and expects to remain for a while.

Married.—On Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Robert Bedwin, at Ironton, by justice A. B. Noyes, of Ironton, Mr. George W. Jarman, of this place, to Miss Amily B. Allen, of Charlevoix. Geo. is a son of E. G. Jarman of this place, and is well and favorably known throughout this section. Miss Allen is a sister of Mrs. John Hayden of this place, and formerly resided in Eveline and is therefore well known here. Mr. Jarman and bride commenced housekeeping on Thursday at a home prepared for them in this place. The many friends of the happy couple will join us in wishing them a long and prosperious journey through life, and may their life be a happy one.

Say Bro. Advance, we understand that "Jumbo" broke his chain and has wandered away? If the report is true, we will be on the lookout for him.

Mr. Shoefelt and family, of Maneelona, moved to Ironton on Monday and are now occupying the Eber Burdick residence.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Harris were at Ironton Saturday, Mr. Harris was on business. Mrs. H. will remain for a few days with her parents.

The Pleasant Valley correspondent of the Citizen says: "The Pleasant Valley Educational Club, were surprised with a pleasant call from Mr. Fred. Miller, of Evoline Saturday. He made encouraging remarks upon our work and expressed a wish that other neighborhoods would form such Clubs." Mr. Miller is a well educated man, and takes great interest in all educational work. Why not organize an Educational Club at Ironton. We see no reason why one could not be organized.

We feel proud to think we were classed among the four handsomest persons attending the bazaar at Advance on the 22d.

☞We notice a new departure in the treatment of disease that promises to revolutionize the medicine business. It consists in the collection of the specifics used by noted specialists of Europe and America and bringing them within the reach of all. For instance, the treatment pursued by special physicians who treat indigestion, stomach and liver troubles only, was obtained and preferred. The treatments of other physicians, celebrated for curing catarrh, were procured, and so on till these incomparable cures cure female disease of the lungs, kidneys, female weakness, rheumatism, nervous debility and piles. Originated and used by specialists, being a positive cure for each disease, these preparations are the best remedies procurable. We advise all to send two cent stamps to the Chase Medical Specialty Co., 178 West Adams St., Chicago, Ill. and receive by return mail their interesting hand book. 1Tedw

Boyne City.

APRIL 2—Town meeting is over; an exciting election and a full vote polled.

Mr. White has just placed in his saw mill (the old Sheboygan) a new steam feed,—twin cylinder,—weighing nearly six tons, and thereby greatly increasing the mill's capacity.

E. F. Allen, of Grand Ledge, is spending a few days in Boyne.

James R. Follows, a former resident, but absent now for two years, has returned to Boyne. Thus do the truants repent.

Mr. Cox, who has been teaching a class in vocal music, held a concert in the M. E. church on Saturday evening. The program was good and the audience were pleased.

An infant daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Vine Crane arrived on Friday last.

F. M. Abraham has kept G. W. Jones busy for some days repairing and repairing the H. S. hotel, preparatory to its receiving a new landlord. The house will be opened again in a few days.

Advance.

APRIL 2—Godfrey VonPlatten has returned from Chicago.

Dan Mavill's family moved to Petoskey last week.

John Heller now carries the mail between Boyne City and East Jordan.

Ed. Phillips who has been seriously ill at Saginaw, arrived home last Friday night.

Farmers are now busy getting their summer's supply of wood, and some of them have commenced plowing.

Mr. Platen's saw mill shut down for a few days last week on account of the "head pusher" getting a small portion of the emery wheel in his eye.

Mr. Cox of Petoskey closed a term of singing school last Thursday night, at this place, and will probably commence another term here soon.

The winter term of school at this place closed last Friday, Miss Addie Lewis, teacher. Freddy Heller received the silver dollar given as a prize by P. B. Newton to the best behaved scholar during the term. After one week vacation the spring term commences.

Red-handed war has broken out between John Healey and Alex Lewis, enstoe, caused by Mr. H. corraling one of Mr. B.'s "critters" which had been trespassing on Mr. H.'s wheat.

There will be skirmishing all along the line shortly.

Atwood.

APRIL 1.—Will Knight sold a pair of colts and harness to Seymour Bennett last week. Price $350.

S. A. Brown was in East Jordan the first part of last week.

D. Flanigan is setting his boiler. S. A. Brown is building the arch.

Geo. Hull of Eastport moves to Antrim today. He will run Mr. Flanigan's mill.

Capt. Bedford has gone to Port Huron to sell his vessel.

Mr. Stigar is getting out the keel of his boat. It is 45 feet long.

There will be an oyster supper at the town hall on Wednesday, the 10th of April, for the benefit of Mr. B. H. Whitman. Come one and all.

Mr. Nash has finished his cut of logs here. A day or two's custom work and he will pull up stakes.

It is snowing hard to-night.

Election passed off quietly. The cattle question came up as usual and cattle are shut up.

CATARRH. Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in three weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet containing this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

Sufferers from catarrhal troubles should read the above carefully. 1sow1

Wilson.

A little sugar snow occasionally.

The "drive" has closed until after a rain.

The mill started up again on Wednesday last.

Eld. Tracy preached his farewell sermon to a small congregation on Sunday last.

Charley Kuntzel has gone to Saginaw for an indefinite period. It was one hundred dollars instead of one thousand which he paid for his land.

John Isaman requests no callers—not even his creditors—for the next month for he expects to eat leaks.

Allow us to correct one of the occasional mistakes of the Advance correspondent. We have no doubt but we would have taken the cake for good looks if we had been present at the bazaar, but unfortunately we were not there. Guess again A. C.

We hear that Wm Preble will soon move to Charley Birch's place to remain during the summer season.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. H. Stell, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies, I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of rheumatism of 8 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony to the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the liver, kidneys or bowels. Only a bottle a dollar a bottle at F. G. Hines & Co.'s drug store. 2

Echo.

Good sugar weather.

Alfred Goodfield is able to be out on crutches, but is not able to work yet.

Eld. Wakely closed his meeting in Marsh district. Several were reclaimed. Some new ones came out as a result of the meetings.

A. E. Scofield had an auction sale recently and sold his personal property except his team.

There will be a donation party held at the Marsh school house, for the benefit of Eld. Wakely, on Thursday evening April 11th. Come all.

We hear that Dorcas McMillan one of our Echo boys (but now living at South Arm) was recently presented by Mrs. McMillan with a 7½ pound heiress. Congratulations are now in order, also sympathy in the "midnight hour."

Eld. Wakely preached in the morning and Eld. Messenger in the evening on Sabbath last.

Ironton.

APRIL 3.—Election came on the right day this year. Quite a number of the candidates were badly April fooled.

P. B. Newton of Advance was in town yesterday.

Mrs. D. N. Gregory is taking music lessons of Mrs. Foot of Ironton.

Charlie Jackson moved into J. M. Harris' house one day last week.

Noyes and Burdick are moving today. Mr. Noyes has sent in his resignation as postmaster, but will continue in the same place until his successor is appointed.

John Munro is driving piles for the P. L. I. Co.

R. Miller is running the ferry, and will continue to do so until one is appointed for the season.

J. D. Parish is at Boyne Falls after a load of goods.

Burgess.

APRIL 2—Henry Ward has gone to the south part of the state on a visit to old friends and relatives. He is expected back the last of the week.

Good sugar weather, and it promises fair to be a good season for those who commenced in time.

Nice time at our town meeting in the friendly exchange of courtesy to township officers.

Mrs. T. W. Dake intends to make quite a long visit to her brother who lives in Milwaukee.

Alex Ross, of section 22, advertises his place for sent, and intends to sail the coming season.

A Women's Discovery.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night, and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." This write W. C. Hamrick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Get a free trial bottle at F. G. Hines & Co.'s drug store. 2

The lumbering operations at Charlevoix, says the Cheboygan Democrat are confined to hardwood, hemlock and cedar. It is thought the output will be nearly equal to previous winters. The hemlock will exceed that of last year owing to several government contracts for pier work which have been taken by mills in this vicinity. The output of cedar will be very much less than usual. This is largely caused by the flat nose of the tie market. There seems to be a good demand for cedar shingles.

MICHIGAN MENTION.

Sundry Gleanings From Our State Exchanges.

Bellaire is to have a new brick school house.

The Lon A. Cummings arrived at Traverse City April 5th, on her first trip.

The Bellaire Breeze of last week says that Ira Adams, who was shot by a burglar, a few days since, is improving, and his ultimate recovery is confidently expected. We are glad to hear it.

A fly wheel weighing 3,000 pounds burst in Anderson & Foster's mill at West Troy, Newaygo Co., recently, wrecking the mill $2,000 worth and knocking the middle finger plum off from John McGrew's hand.

The water in the harbor is about as low as it was ever known to be. The streams in the country are in the same condition, and flooding will have to be resorted to in some of them to bring out the log drives.—Cheboygan Tribune.

The big ocean tug Sea Gull, drawing 13 feet, was taken into the Bay City dry dock last Saturday afternoon for a new wale strake, plushing and general overhaling. Her engines are being steeple compound. She has two 26x36, and will have two 20x36, which will make her the most powerful boat on fresh water. With her double engine last season she parted a 13-inch hawser.

The new C. P. R. steamer Keewatin, now building at Owen Sound, to replace the Algoma, lost on Isle Royale five years ago, will be the first steel steamer ever built in Canada. She will be 305 ft. long, 38 ft beam, and 14 ft. 3 inches hold. She will be elegantly fited up, with 64 state rooms, electric light, steam stearing gear, etc, and will cost $250,000. Her plates will be ½ of an inch thick.

Our good people had so many promises of another railroad and none have materialized, that they look upon the old chestnut as a back number. One of our best merchants informs us that in a recent talk with Mr. Buckley, one of the owners of the new road, that he, Mr. Buckley promised to give him a ride over the road by the 4th of July or 1st of August sure, into the town of Grant. The road is known by the name of Manistee & North Eastern, and is now running trains within sixteen miles of Grant township.—Traverse Eagle.

In the row between the scrip-holders and homesteaders, and among the homesteaders over the land recently abandoned by the Marquette, Houghton and Ontonagon railroad company, and restored to the public domain by the secretary of the interior, the Marquette lawyers will have no end of a picnic. The cases now on for hearing before the land court will be appealed to Washington and thence to the secretary of the interior for final adjudication. It will take a year to clear the land office in Marquette of the land cases now in dispute. The lands are valued at over $2,000,000.

The Band Concert.

Every seat was filled before the hour for raising the curtain, for the band concert at the opera house last Friday evening, and this large audience was surprised and delighted with the program as each number was presented. This first public appearance shows the remarkable progress made during the past winter, and is an indication of what may be expected of them in the future. The full program is given below:

PART FIRST.

Overture, "Crown of Victory," ..... Band
Vocal Duet, ... Mrs. Florence Smith
Frank McGibeny and Miss Florence Smith
Euphonium Solo, ... Ed. Brown and Band
Overture, "Bridal Rose," ..... Band

Cornet Duet, Mrs. McGibeny and Mills Kanagy
Clarinet Solo, ... Bert Pew
Cornet Solo, ... Mrs. McGibeny and Band
Band Finale, ... Full Band

The concert will be repeated on May 17th, and those who failed to get seats for the last should apply early.

The First Boat From Chicago.

The Lawrence of the Northern Michigan line arrived at six oclock Monday morning with freight from Chicago and Milwaukee. Capt. Finucan reports no ice until he reached this place. At 10 oclock he started for St. Ignace and Cheboygan. The City of Charlevoix will follow next week.

From the files of the JOURNAL we give the following dates of first arrivals of Northern Michigan Line boats in the years named;

1884—Lawrence, April 18th.
1885—Lawrence, May 7th.
1886—Champlain, April 21st.
1887—Lawrence, April 22nd.
1888—Lawrence, April 27th.
1889—Lawrence, April 8th.

A Correction.

Some accident in compiling the reports of the Charlevoix public schools for the winter term, caused the roll of honor for the fourth department, as published last week, to be erroneous to such an extent that another publication of the entire list should be made. The following are the names of pupils of the 6th, 7th and 8th grades, neither absent nor tardy for the entire term:

Eva Sweet, Florence Phelps, Lena Gross, Lillie Wood, Ernest Penalee, Carrie Brown, Mary Tulback, Wallace Sherman, Antoine Sharrow, Harvey Lawrence, Charles Russell, Bertie Stripp, Ethel Herson, Clara Kaiser, Lillie Newman, Bernie Taylor, Hiram Ross, Joseph Hyland, Eddie McNeill, Jennie Lamphere, Cora Strang, Jessie Brown.—23

Total for school 80, instead of 75, as reported last week.

The First Boat.

The following are the dates and names of the first boat to arrive at Charlevoix from other ports, in the years named, as gleaned from the files of the JOURNAL:

1884—Tug Kittie Smoke, April 15th.
1885—Str. Thos. Friant, May 6th.
1886—Schr. Evening Star, April 18th.
1887—Schr. G. A. Marsh, April 22d.
1888—Str. Lawrence, April 27th.
1889—Tug Anspach, March 31st.

Victims of Whiskey.

MANISTEE, April 6.—At 4:30 o'clock this morning a logging train of 12 cars on the M. & N. E. railroad, about three miles south of Onekama while running backwards, ran over and instantly killed Dennis Charbenau and Mike Downey, who were lying side by side across the track. The two had been at a dance at Onekama and were seen there about 3 o'clock greatly intoxicated. Both their heads were cut and the bodies dreadfully mangled. Charbenau was 20 years old and Downey 26 years of age.

Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at F. G. Hines and Co.'s drug store as their giving away to their customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, all throat and lung diseases quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size $1. Every bottle warranted. 3

Petoskey Notes.

From the Record.

The G. R. & I. folks expect a large increase of summer travel next summer.

F. VanAmburg of Horton's Bay intends to move into Petoskey pretty soon.

Hankey & Rigg have ordered a car load of seed wheat from Minneapolis, and farmers wanting seed would do well to place their orders with them at once.

On Tuesday Marshal Pratt arrested Henry Fotchman for selling liquor on election day and being arraigned before Squire Hill, he pleaded guilty and was fined $20.00 and costs. Messrs. Pratt and Hill will have the thanks of the community.

Henry Rollins informs us that the Petoskey will leave Chicago for Petoskey between the 8th and 10th. It is hoped that a lively east wind will clear the bay by that time. It's a little odd that the straits should be open and navigation from Chicago to Buffalo be unobstructed while we are yet ice bound.

Barr Lee has been compelled to resign his place in the post office on account of his health, and seek more active out door employment, but as yet has not determined what to do. Barr has been very steady and faithful, and as far as we know has pleased the patrons of the office by his good nature, and readiness to oblige.

The next Camp meeting at Bay View will commence Tuesday July 16th, and will close Monday 22d. The Assembly will commence July 23d, and will continue three weeks. The summer school will also commence July 16th. The trustees of the Michigan Camp Ground Association, will meet at Bay View Tuesday evening, April 16th. At the present date there are 261 cottages on the Bay View grounds, and a large number are to be built this spring.

Steal a Whole Mill.

SAULT STE. MARIE, April 4.—Deputy Sheriff Jones, of Detour, arrived in the city last night and stated positively that the MoiseBrothers, of that place who are largely engaged in lumbering in this vicinity, have packed up their goods to leave for Canada. Hard & Hornsteen, of Buffalo, held a mortgage of $45,000 on the mill of the firm, and it was due in a few days Monday about 3 o'clock the tug Dowling, towing two vessels from Saginaw ,landed at Detour after a five days rough trip, presumably for a cargo of lumber, but at night 100 men concealed in the boats came ashore and began removing all the machinery of their mill and putting the movable property on board.

At noon to day, all was loaded except the boiler, and the workmen began tearing down the mill. The sheriff received a notice to stop the operations but there was no authority was sent on which he could act. The telephone and telegraph wires are cut in three places, and there is no communication with Detour. All will be loaded by mid-night and the tugs and vessels will be on their way to Spanish River Canada, where the firm has lately purchased a site. The firm failed some years ago and is not indebted to any one here. Moises Bros. are well known in the Saginaw valley and in northern Michigan.

Telegraph Business.

Charlevoix can down us on telegraph business. Having direct connection with Grand Rapids over a Western Union wire they can get out night messages at half the cost from Petoskey, and at about 33 per cent less on day telegrams.—Record.

Speaking of the item in the Record relative to telegraph rates, station agent Quaintance says that for prompt and reliable service Charlevoix people invariably telephone to Petoskey their messages for Grand Rapids and many other Western Union points and that the Record's insinuation that G. R. & I. rates are higher for similar service is entirely unwarranted.—Democrat.

ELECTION ECHOES.

Notes and News of the April Contest.

Mrs. Augusta Harris was elected school inspector in Kalkaska.

Maneelona will hold her first village election on Monday, April 15th.

Democrats have a majority of the Kent county board of supervisors.

The democrats of Grand Rapids, elected mayor by only three plurality.

Lake Odessa elected a democrat supervisor the first time in four years.

The democrats of Maneelona elected their entire ticket except school inspector.

Democrats of Cheboygan elected mayor by 180 majority treasurer by 113, aldermen and five supervisors by good safe majorities.

L. J. Law was elected mayor of Capillac by over one hundred majority Mr. Law is a democrat, one of the aggressive sort who stays by his party at all times.

Maneelona township gave only 22 majority for Judge Grant against Judge Sherwood. Last fall it gave 88 majority for Harrison. The whole union township ticket was elected by from 2 to 107 majority, except one school inspector, a young man whom the republicans elected.

Colored Servants Discharged.

"The colored troops fought nobly,' but this fact does not help the colored servants at the white house. Mrs. Harrison is making a 'clean sweep' of all the negro servants who have for many years performed the domestic service of the white house, filling their places with white servants. "Massa Cleveland" applied civil service reform to his own household and retained the colored help. Neither can we endanger their brethren at the south, as they were made to believe he would. This little object lesson will help the colored man to learn the lesson, so important to their welfare, that the only use the republican party, from Harrison down, has for them is to get their votes.

The Bible Leads Them All.

The phenomenal sale of "Robert Elsmere," "Mr. Barns of New York," and "Little Lord Fauntleroy" have attracted attention, yet there is one book issued from one publishing house the sales of which quadruple all these taken together. This book is the Bible. In the last year the Bible society has sent out 1,326,672 copies, and in the 72 years of its existence it has issued nearly 50,000,000 Bibles, or, to be more specific, 49,829,753 copies. At present their presses print 4,000 copies a day, and the increasing immigration indicates that still larger demands will be made.

Spring Work.

The time has arrived when our farmers should begin to make preparations for spring crops. Tools should be got in order, the ground put in good shape to receive the grain, fences repaired, etc. Farming requires proper management to make it pay. A farmer must know his business just the same as a merchant, or banker, or railroader must know his to be successful. The crops must be properly planted, cultivated with proper implements and at the proper time. There may be manner sight than broad acres of grain putting forth in springtime, but we have never seen it.—Ex.

Test of Death.

Many tests have been suggested to decide whether or not life is extinct. A death has appeared to occur, of the most recent, and held to be of the most reliable, is called the cocaine hypodermic test. In using this test the operator injects one hypodermic syringeful of strong solution of cocaine under the skin of the arm or some other convenient portion of the body. If the body be not dead—if life be the faintest circulation—the cocaine will produce on the skin, at the point where it was injected, a pin red patch, on the surface of which raised red spots will appear; but if there be absolute death, there will be produced a brown dark blotch, which is certainly conclusive against any possible vitality.—Boston Herald.

Polluted Ice.

Users of ice must read up on the results of investigations of Koch, Peugret and Poulsden, showing that ice taken in polluted streams is not purified by freezing. Kedzie tells us that if ice from streams containing putrefactable matter or sewage it will induce diarrhœa. In 1873, at Rye beach, an epidemic broke out in a large hotel, and was traced at last to ice taken from an adjacent pond. The water of this pond in summer was foul at sinking with putrescent matter, organic matter, as well as bacteria, not eliminated by any ordinary device of cold. Too many of our readers are the recipients of sewage, this is the ice age of civilization, and we must have it plain.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In Honor of Burns.

A Burns masquerade to celebrate the birthday of the poet is an annual custom in Leslie, Fifeshire. At the late celebration twenty-four plowmen, merchants and farmers, mounted and dressed to represent the principal characters in Burns' works, paraded the street headed by a volunteer band and accompanied by a crowd of people. Burns himself appeared in blue coat, buff waistcoat and knee breeches, while other characters were Tam O'Shanter, Souter Johnnie, Auld Nick, Tam O'Shanter's mare, Meg Dods, Jenny Geddes, Jenny Dean, Holy Willie, Holy Fair, Jenny Dean, Holy Willie, Holy Fair, Jenny Dean, Holy Willie, Holy Fair

DEATH OF JOHN BRIGHT.

The Great English Statesman and Philanthropist Succumbs to Long Illness.

John Bright, the great English philanthropist and statesman, is dead, his demise occurring in London after a long illness. The remains were interred in the Quakers' burying ground at Rochedale.

John Bright, the son of a Quaker, Jacob Bright, was born at Rochedale, Lancashire, England, in 1811. He was educated at Quaker schools, and gained distinction as a leader of the Anti-Corn Law League. In 1843 he entered the House of Commons as a member for Durham, and was returned in 1847 for Manchester. In 1857 he was elected the same year by the Rochedale men, and held that seat ever since. During the Crimean war he was unseated in 1857, but was elected the same year by the Rochedale men, and held that seat ever since. During the Civil war in the United States he sided with the Union cause. In 1867, after a decade of great work in that cause, he refused office, but accepted the office of President of the Board of Trade, but resigned his office in 1868 to oppose the Disraeli-Gladstone returned to power in 1880 Bright became member for the Borough of Lancaster, but resigned in 1882 when the Government began war in Egypt. He was a leader in the movement for the extension of Irish rights, and paid Irish turbulence and disorder in view of the disturbances from the land. He opposed until the franchise bill brought eighty-six Irish members into the House of Commons, and strongly advocated the election of Parnell, one of the most powerful opponents to Gladstone's schemes of home rule. Mr. Bright was married in 1839 to Elizabeth Priestman, of Newcastle, who died in 1878, leaving two sons and one daughter, Mr. Bright married Lewiston, daughter of a banker of Wakefield. He leaves four sons and one daughter.

R. G. DUN & CO.'S WEEKLY REVIEW.

Decrease in the Average Prices of All Commodities.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s review of trade for last week says:

The general tendency of reports indicates that business is both improving and hopeful. At Omaha business is reported much better than for months past, and the jobbing trade has done fair though profits are smaller. Rapid growth in manufacturing interest appears in Southern and far Western points. All the interior money markets are easier, and the Western demand for currency is much less. Two considerable failures at Milwaukee are due to speculations in collections, and it is hoped that there is some increase in demand and price for wheat. Wheat has fallen 2 cents, and corn 1 cent, with the termination of the great Fall River strike. The coal market is dull for two years. At Pittsburgh closing of mills and furnaces is reported, and the trade has been and still grows worse. At Philadelphia the coal trade is very dull, and at Boston it is dull

He Get Away With.

A short old man in with a long gray beard yesterday afternoon exhibited an armful of Christmas trees through Fulton market, noon and stopped at a stall of grapes were displayed. "Here you are!" yelled the proprietor to the peddler. Concords, Catawbas and Malagas. The small man stopped, fumbled so as to free his right hand, furtively pulled out a fat bunch in a basket of Concords, ate them, and, when he tried a Catawba, adjusted his spectacles and began on them.

The fruit vendor, with a customer, now in a short man's actions with "How much for grapes?" lacoinically, eating a Concord. "Why, one is a dollar!" "Too much," said the old man, throwing the bunch away two more Concords. "Are you a wholesale dealer."

"No."

"Own a vineyard, wise?"

"No."

"Where did you learn "Over's Jersey."

"Well, see here, old man, I eat about a pound and a half of grapes, and I'll tell you how to eat them. Now, you don't want no pipes around here."—New York Sun.

The Cane's Fall.

No Fears for a Panic.

It is claimed that a wave of panic went over the western horse corncobs this week, but the report is discouraging to drought Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin. Nothing but cobs threw for a break, where the cobs were in bags, we contemplate the remarkable degree of calmness with which the festive corncob received the news. Of course, if the Eastern strikers may be expected to hit the pipes and smoke it.—New York Sun.

Gov. Luce has appointed Saturday, May 4th, as Arbor Day, for northern Michigan.

The President has appointed Cornelius Van Cott, of New York, to be post master at New York.

Chicago elected a Democratic mayor by a 12,000 majority. Last year a republican was chosen by 20,000.

It has been figured out that there are only about 10,000 homestead claims of 160 acres each, available for settlers in the Oklahoma territory. There are over 40,000 "boomers" ready to enter the territory as soon as it is open for settlement, and a lively time is expected from the thousands of conflicting claims which are sure to ensue.

WILLIAM REID, owner of the bitterest "rat" sheet in America, which has opposed labor ever since he got it from Greeley, goes as minister to France; John C. New, of Indianapolis who also ran a rat paper that would never employ a union printer goes as consul general to London; salary and fees from $12,000 to $20,000. Murat Halstead, another "rat" journalist, was nominated for foreign minister, but was choked off by the senate for comments on that snob body. Thorndike Rice of the North America Review, another "rat" editor is minister to Russia. Oh, Lord! how these republicans love labor and suffer for the sake of protecting them.—Cheboygan Democrat.

Suggestive Figures.

In the treasury, interior and post office departments at Washington President Harrison finds on the payrolls 3,352 appointees of former republican administrations who retained their places and draw $4,435,000 per annum throughout Cleveland's four years. In the same three departments President Harrison finds of Cleveland's appointees only 1,089, drawing $1,093,340 per annum. The "holdovers" outnumbered the new appointees more than three to one. Of 131 officers having salaries of $1,900 and upwards, sixty-five are "holdovers," and only sixty-six were appointed by Mr. Cleveland's secretaries, and sixteen of those were appointed to vacancies made by the promotion of "holdovers" to presidential offices, to which they were appointed by President Cleveland himself. The civil service reformers show a disposition to keep these figures dangling before the eyes of the new President all the time, to the great disgust of the large army of place hunters.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Whom the Gods Would Destroy."

The old and well-worn saying of the ancients—"Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad"—appears to be as applicable as ever to mundane affairs.

Here we have this French copper trust in the agonies of a frightful collapse, dragging down financial institutions with it and spreading industrial and commercial ruin throughout two hemispheres. At the same moment we have presented to us in this enlightened portion of the globe the spectacle of the creation of two similar combinations on precisely similar ideas, principles, and practices.

The copper trust was created in order to increase the price of copper to consumers for the benefit of a comparatively few producers and traders. The steel rail and salt trusts are being created for precisely similar purposes. To perfect these organizations a capital of $50,000,000 will be required, all of which is said to be already provided.

The copper trust is now authoritatively pronounced to have been an immoral and illegal combination. Yet, knowing it to be such, the Bank of France was compelled to advance over 140,000,000 francs to the banking institution which, backed said combination, in the interest of public safety, in order to prevent a general financial panic. To secure them selves, the directors of this great national institution swept into its bills all the stocks and securities of the Comptoir d'Escompte, leaving the innocent shareholders of the latter to wail over losses which will bring thousands to beggary.

But it is said: "These copper-trust fellows might have known that they could not "buck against" the competition of the world. In the case of the steel rail and salt trusts the government's high tariff constitutes a rampart so built up to resist the natural laws of competition that they can defy defeat in their efforts to wring artificial and unearthed profits out of the consuming public."

Grant that our tariff is such a more or less certain safeguard against disaster to the stockholders in these salt and rail trusts, nevertheless this simply constitutes them still more immoral combinations than their defunct copper predecessor. At the same time the organization of such vicious and heartless combinations against the public, under the perverted aegis of legislation, renders the government purblind criminals in an unholy crusade in which the many are plundered for the behoof of the few.

In the case of the French trust the gods, in the public interest, have inflicted the inevitable madness. In the cases of the American trusts it will be interesting to see whether they will be able to avert their predicted punishment by thus involving the government in the vortex of their immoral operations.—Chicago News.

The Democratic Outlook.

New York World: The word of courage and of hope which the World spoke to the Democratic party after the loss of the election in November can be repeated with even more reason now.

The Republican policy as outlined by President Harrison will make for Democratic success in the future.

The Democratic party is right in asserting that unnecessary taxation is unjust taxation. It is right in demanding that the surplus revenue be stopped, not spent. It is right in holding that the taxes to be first reduced are those which bear hardest upon the greatest number of people—namely, the war taxes upon the necessaries of life. Every word of the Republican President and every act of a republican Congress which antagonizes these everlastingly right and truly Democratic principles will hasten the day of the second overthrow of their party.

The plutocratic tendencies and monopolistic affiliations of the Republican party will inevitably weaken it with the people. The Democrats have only to be true to their principles, united in action and wise in the selection of leaders to pluck a final victory out of the present reverse.

The Twine Trust.

N. Y. World: An agent of the Dakota Farmer's Alliance is in quest after a supply of twine to be used for binding grain at the coming harvest has made the discovery that a trust has secured control of substantially all of that commodity in the country. The output of all the eastern factories is reported bought up, and the price is already materially increased. It is interesting to note that the tariff on flax twine is forty per cent, and also high on other varieties. A good deal of home industry, it can be seen, will be fostered on the part of the farmers in earning the money to pay the increase in the price of what they bind their sheaves with. This is a fine illustration of a trust built up under the wall of a protective duty.

Harrison's Modest Brother.

John Scott Harrison has for fifteen or twenty years past, an active and respectable business man in Kansas City, and a staunch democrat all the time, but so unobtrusive in political affairs that the democrats of that vicinity never discovered any qualifications for office in him till his brother was elected President of the United States. They would like to make him their candidate for mayor now, but will find it difficult to overcome his strong predilection for attending quietly to his own private business.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Epoch.

The transition from long lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a memorable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is gratefully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the great alterative and tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of stomach, liver or bowels, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at F. G. Hines & Co.'s drug store. 3

How Doctors Conquer eth.

Doctor Walter K. Hammond says: "After a long experience I have come to the conclusion that two-thirds of all deaths from coughs, colds, throat and consumption, might be avoided if Dr. Ayer's English Remedy for consumption, were early carefully used in time." This wonderfull remedy is sold under a positive guarantee by G. W. Beaman, druggist.

Liability of Firms.

The importance of publishing a dissolution notice in the event of a change of firm is shown by a case recently decided. A note of $2,500 was given by a former member of the firm and the firm's name signed to it. It was discounted at the bank and the maker of the note appropriated the proceeds to his own use. Being unable to collect it when due, the bank brought suit against the firm for the amount. They showed that his connection with the firm had ceased before he made the note, but as they had not published the dissolution notice previous to that time as required by law, judgment was rendered against the old firm.

Reduced Rates to the North.

At the meeting of the Chicago committee of the Central Traffic Associa held yesterday a 10 per cent reduction was made in freight rates to Traverse City, Petoskey, Harbor Springs, and Mackinaw, to take effect April 22. This reduction is to meet the competition of the lake routes.—Chicago News.

Ask for Ayer's

Sarsaparilla, and be sure you get it, when you want the best blood-purifier. With forty years of unexampled success in the cure of Blood Diseases, you can make no mistake in preferring Ayer's to any other. The forerunner of modern blood medicines, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is still the most popular, owing in greater demand than all other combined. It is highly concentrated—the only $1 Sarsaparilla worth $5 a bottle.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is selling faster than ever before. I never hesitate to recommend it.—George W. Whitman, Druggist, Albany, Ind.

"I am safe in saying that my sales of Ayer's Sarsaparilla far exceed those of any other, and it gives thorough satisfaction." —L. H. Bush, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills are the best selling medicines in my store. I can recommend them conscientiously."—C. Bickham, Plattsburg, Rossland, Ill.

"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla here for over thirty years and always recommend it when asked to name the best blood-purifier."—W. J. Jackson, Druggist, Augusta, Ohio.

"I have sold your medicines for the last seventeen years, and always keep them in stock, as they are stripes. There is nothing so good for the youthful blood' as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Robt. L. Parker, Fox Lake, Wis.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla gives the best satisfaction of any medicine I have in stock. I recommend it, as the Doctors say, 'I prescribe it over the counter.' It never fails to meet the cases for which I recommend it, even where the doctors' prescriptions have been of no avail."—C. F. Calhoun, Monticello, Kansas.

Miss Esther Buttars returned home last Friday.

M. J. Bartlett has a new house on the north side.

"Pigs in clover" is the latest puzzle. Buy one and try it.

Capt. Geo. Madison went to Milwaukee on the Lawrence.

Wanted—a good scavenger and correspondent at East Jordan.

L. E. Allen returned home from the "Soo" last Saturday.

Alfred Taylor has a situation as wheelsman on the Lawrence.

The tug Martin is finished and will be launched on Saturday.

The main stairway to the Lewis opera house was erected this week.

Mrs. H. Litney and Miss Grace went to Northport on the Lawrence.

The historical society meet with Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Washburn this week.

The Rifenburg Milling Co. received a large lot of grain on the Lawrence.

The str. Gazelle was launched from Washburn's shipyard Wednesday morning.

Mike Litney expects to go to Chicago on the next trip of the Lawrence, to buy horses.

Dr. Lewis expects to begin brick laying on the walls of the opera house next Tuesday.

Part of Rosenthal's spring stock of hats arrived on the Lawrence, and more will arrive next week.

Capt. Guard is putting more power into the Jos. Gordon, and will be ready for business in a few days.

The second of Byron See's new hardwood counters built by C. Budd and C. E. See, was put in last week. They are fine.

Smith Campbell and M. J. Bartlett were wrestling one day last week, and Bartlett was thrown down and cracked a rib.

A. T. Washburn arrived home yesterday. He reports a pleasant trip to the east. His new goods have already begun to arrive.

Engineer Beardslee and members of the school house committee established the lines for the new school house and set the stakes on Tuesday.

H. Dennelly has a new fish house and dock, ice house filled, and two new cottages built on the lot adjoining Campbell's shipyard, and is well fixed for the season's business.

R. C. Duryea inspector at Grand Haven and F. W. Forbes recently appointed inspector of Charlevoix gov ernment work, arrived on Monday, and are preparing to get the work here started a month.

Dr. Lewis invites correspondence from dramatic people concerning the opening of his new opera house about May 15th. He wants a good company numbering from 10 to 15 people, to play a week's engagement.

On the afternoon of the 23d of this month the ladies of the Baptist church expect to give a "coffee" at the home of Miss Esther Buttars. This entertainment is planned as a social treat for all our friends. Hours from three to six.

W. H. Downer has brought a fast horse from Wisconsin, and now the dirt will fly on the streets of Charlevoix in the speed contests of the various flyers owned here. What fun we would have if we only had a good race track. "If."

☞ In purchasing medicine, don't try experiments; the first and only consideration should be genuiness. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has stood the test of forty years, and to-day it is the greater demand than ever—a triumphant proof of popular approval.

☞ "Ayer's Hair Vigor is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is a sure cure for dandruff."—J. W. Bowen, Editor Enquirer, McArther, Ohio.

The Rifenburg Milling Co. have again been added to the telephone exchange, and L. D. Bartlett, one of the hardware store will be as soon as the instruments come. The Charlevoix exchange is said to be the largest in the state in proportion to the population.

Fox & Miller come in for a share of special attention this week. In another column will be found an elaborate announcement of a portion of their stock. This firm carries the largest and best stock of boots and shoes in Charlevoix, and no person should buy without first giving them a call.

Ionia Evening Express: F. W. Forbes received a notice yesterday afternoon of his appointment as inspector of government works at Charlevoix. He canceled his engagement in Canada, and started for Charlevoix last night, not forgetting to call at our sanctum and order the Express sent to him there.

"Paint." This is the legend stuck in front of the delivery windows in Lobdell's meat market last Saturday. It is a reminder that A. E. Troester is never so happy as when he is brightening things around the market. The walls, ceiling and furniture all show his work, and he declares his intention of having the cleanest, brightest, and most inviting market in this part of the country.

The request from the school officers to copy the rules of classification from this week's Sentinel came too late for compliance this week. In this connection, and for the benefit of others who desire to copy them at a time after the publication of the Sentinel for us to copy for the JOURNAL any long article, and parties having articles for publication in both papers must furnish copy to this office before the Sentinel is issued. If copy is furnished the Sentinel early in the week, a proof-sheet from that office can be used for copy in the JOURNAL if it be brought to this office at the earliest possible time, and before Wednesday morning. Otherwise we cannot comply with such request.

The steamer Lou Rey, Cummings will leave Traverse City every Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning, for the following points: Old Mission, Elk Rapids, Torch Lake, Northport, Norwood, Charlevoix and East Jordan; returning, will leave East Jordan every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday morning, over same route. She will make a trip over the route next Saturday, returning Sunday, and will commence regular trips next Monday.

Members of the school house committee have letters from reliable parties, showing the weak points of the Ruttan system of warming and ventilating school buildings. Direct reference is made to the Smead system of dry closets, and the claim is made that on those days when the atmosphere prevents a draft in the chimneys, it is impossible to prevent (even by the use of heaters in the ventilating shaft) the poison from the closets poisoning to the school rooms. While those days are not of frequent occurrence in this climate, yet they do occur, and this trouble must be guarded against. Since the Ruttan system was examined, circulars and diagrams have been received from the manufacturers of the Hess system, which employs direct and independent flues for warming and ventilating each room, and contemplate an independent ventilation and warming of closets. A letter from the city clerk of Madison, Wis., states that the Hess system warms one of their buildings at a saving of twenty five per cent. over the Ruttan system. We understand the matter is to be thoroughly investigated, and if thought desirable the former action of the district will be reconsidered before the work begins.

WIDE AWAKE.

An interesting portrait of John Burrows at twenty opens the April Wide Awake, as frontispiece; this engraving accompanies Mr. Burroughs' own story of his boyhood, "The Boy John Burroughs: a Glance Backward," telling how he had to struggle for his "schooling." Another excellent piece of biographical and historical work is by an English writer—Mrs. Blatchwayt, entitled "Raleigh and the Potato;" this given by courtesy of the National Gallery Dublin, Ireland, a portrait of Lady Raleigh, Sir Walter's wife, also engravings from photographs made especially for Wide Awake, of Hayes Dorton farmhouse (Sir Walter's birthplace), a Raleigh place of worship, the church at Budleigh Salterton, also Sir Walter's residence at Youghal, Ire and, a most picturesque spot, and the garden where the first potatoes were planted in Ireland, and many other interesting illustrations. "A Posh for a Flag" by E. M. Backus, is a spirited story of the Civil War. "The Little Girl of the Omnibus," by Mrs. Clara Doty Bates is the tale of a great Western river-trestler. "The Concerned Dancer," beautifully illustrated by Garrett, gives instructions for a joyous Easter game for children. Mrs. Claflin's behavior series, "Daisy's Letters to Pattie," has a letter that ought to interest the parents of all school girls. The Public School Cookery articles has helpful diagrams for "marketing." The romantic story of the famous Bragansa diamond is told by Mrs. Goddard Orpen. "Men and Things," the new department, is full to overflowing with bright, original anecdotes, sconcets and "short talks." The poems of the number are particularly good. The serials, "Five Little Peppers Midway," by Margaret Sidney, and "David Vane and David Crane," by Trowbridge are jolly reading.

Wide Awake is $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston.

THE PANSY

For April brightens our table with its pretty cover. The contents are even more interesting than usual. Pansy (who is undoubtedly the most popular writer today of the best class of Sunday-school literature) edits the magazine, and several of the stories this month are from her pen. Margaret Sidney's serial is delightful reading. Altogether there are thirty-two pages of reading matter and pictures, besides several pages devoted to the Pansy Society, letters from the children, etc. The price is ten cents a number, $1.00 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Boston will send a sample (back number) at half price.

OKLAHOMA IS THEIRS.

THE PRESIDENT ISSUES HIS LONG-HOPED-FOR PROCLAMATION.

Certain Portions of Indian Territory Thrown Open to Settlement—Two New Land Offices—A Map Showing the Ceded Lands, Etc.

(Washington (D. C.) special.)

The President has issued the following proclamation, opening the Oklahoma lands:

By the President of the United States of America—A proclamation:

WHEREAS, Pursuant to Section 8 of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1885, entitled "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes," certain articles of cession and agreement were made and concluded at the city of Washington on the 19th day of January, in the year of Our Lord 1889, by and between the United States of America and the Muscogee (or Creek) Nation of Indians, whereby the said Muscogee (or Creek) Nation of Indians for the consideration therein mentioned ceded and granted to the United States, without reservation or conditions, full and complete title to the entire western half of the said Muscogee (or Creek) Nation, in the Indian Territory, lying west of the division line surveyed and established under the treaty with said Nation, dated June 14, 1866, and also granted and released to the United States all and every claim, estate, right or interest of any and every description in and to any and all land and territory whatever, except so much of the former domain of said Muscogee (or Creek) Nation as lies west of said line of division surveyed and established as aforesaid, and then used and occupied as the home of said nation, and which articles of cession and agreement were duly accepted, ratified and confirmed by said Muscogee (or Creek) Nation of Indians by act of its Council, approved on Jan. 31, 1889, and by the United States, by act of Congress approved March 1, 1889, and

WHEREAS, By Section 12 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes," approved March 1, 1889, a sum of money was appropriated to pay in full the Seminole Nation of Indians for all the right, title, interest, and claim which said nation of Indians might have in and to certain lands ceded by Article 3 of the treaty between the United States and said nation of Indians, concluded June 14, 1866, and proclaimed Aug. 16, 1866, and it appears to be in some operative upon the execution, by the duly appointed delegates of said nation specially empowered to do so, of a release conveyance to the United States of all right, title, interest, and claim of said nation of Indians in and to said lands in manner and form satisfactory to the President of the United States; and,

WHEREAS, Said release and conveyance, bearing date the 16th of March, 1889, has been duly and fully executed, approved and delivered; and,

WHEREAS, Section 17 of the act last aforesaid relating to said lands provides as follows:

"Section 13. That the lands acquired by the United States under said agreement shall be a part of the public domain, to be disposed of only as herein provided, and sections 16 and 36 of each township, whether surveyed or unsurveyed, are hereby reserved for the use and benefit of the public schools to be established within the limits of said lands, under such conditions and regulations as may be hereafter enacted by Congress.

"That the lands acquired by conveyance from the Seminole Indians hereunder, except the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections, shall be disposed of to actual settlers, under the homestead laws, only except as herein otherwise as provided, except that section 2291 of the Revised Statutes shall not apply; and provided, further, That any person who having attempted to, but from any cause failed to, acquire a title in fee to a homestead under existing law, or who made entry under what is known as the commuted provision of the homestead law, shall be qualified to make a homestead entry upon said lands; and provided, further, That the rights of honorably discharged Union soldiers and sailors in the civil war, as defined and described in sections 2304 and 2305 of the Revised Statutes, shall not be abridged, and provided, further, that each entry shall be in square form as nearly as practicable, and no person to be permitted to enter more than one-quarter section thereof, but until said lands are proved for settlement by proclamation of the President, no person shall be permitted to enter upon and occupy the same, and no person violating this provision shall ever be permitted to enter any of said lands or acquire any right therein;

"The Secretary of the Interior may after said proclamation and not before, permit entry of said lands for town sites, under sections 2387 and 2389 of the Revised Statutes, but no such entry shall embrace more than one-half section of land.

"That all the foregoing provisions with reference to lands to be acquired from the Seminole Indians, including the provisions pertaining to forfeiture, shall apply to and regulate the disposal of the lands acquired from the Muscogee (or Creek) Indians by articles of cession and agreement made and concluded at the city of Washington on the 19th day of January, in the year of our Lord, 1889.

"Now, therefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States, by virtue of the power in me vested by the act of Congress approved March 2, 1889, aforesaid, do hereby declare and make known, that so much of the lands as aforesaid acquired from or conveyed by the Muscogee (or Creek) Nation of Indians, and from or by the Seminole Nation of Indians, respectively, as is contained within the following described limits, viz.: Beginning at a point where the division line surveyed and established under the treaty with said Nation, dated June 14, 1866, and proclaimed Aug. 16, 1866, and appropriate to be some operative upon the execution, by the duly appointed delegates of said nation specially empowered to do so, of a release conveyance to the United States of all right, title, interest, and claim of said nation of Indians in and to said lands in manner and form satisfactory to the President of the United States; and,

WHEREAS, Said release and conveyance, bearing date the 16th of March, 1889, has been duly and fully executed, approved and delivered; and,

WHEREAS, Section 17 of the act last aforesaid relating to said lands provides as follows:

"Section 13. That the lands acquired by the United States under said agreement shall be a part of the public domain, to be disposed of only as herein provided, and sections 16 and 36 of each township, whether surveyed or unsurveyed, are hereby reserved for the use and benefit of the public schools to be established within the limits of said lands, under such conditions and regulations as may be hereafter enacted by Congress.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Advance.

The spring term of school commenced last Monday.

John Hayden has rented the Dennis farm, which he will work this year in connection with his own.

Willet Zimmerman has taken a job of logging ten acres of land on Sam Hayden's farm.

Asmon Beers has been building some wire fence and is making other improvements on his farm too numerous to mention.

Mr. King says if he does not get a government appointment to some foreign country he shall sell out and go south.

Mrs. Bettes, wife of James Bettes, died Monday, April 1st, after a sickness of over six weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Bettes have been married nearly fifty years. During five weeks of the sickness of Mr. and Mrs. Bettes, Mr. B.'s brother and wife from Lisbon, Kent county, were here taking care of them. Mr. B. has recovered sufficiently to be able to go home with his brother, where he will stop for the present.

Now as to the mistake that was made in regard to the Wilson correspondent at the bazaar. The mistake was a very natural one, and happened thusly: We were personally acquainted with the other two correspondents and knew that as a trio we were hard to beat for good looks, and were congratulating ourselves accordingly, when a vision of loveliness skipped into the hall, far outshining all others that were there, with such an air of candor, etc., which all correspondents have, that we said, "it must be the W. C. It would be impossible for two persons to be so near alike." We don't have to guess again. We saved a piece of the "cake" for you.

☞We notice a new departure in the treatment of disease that promises to revolutionize the medicine business. It consists in the collection of the specifics used by noted specialists of Europe and America and bringing them within the reach of all. For instance, the treatment pursued by special physicians who treat indigestion, stomach and liver troubles only, was obtained and preferred. The treatments of other physicians, celebrated for curing catarrh, were procured, and so on till these incomparable cures now include disease of the lungs, kidneys, female weaknesses, rheumatism, nervous debility and piles. Originated and used by specialists, being a positive cure for each disease, these preparations are the best remedies procurable. We advise all to send a two cent stamp to the Chase Medical Specialty Co., 179 West Adams St., Chicago, Ill. and receive by return mail their interesting hand book. Herald

Beautiful weather.

Leeks are abundant.

Eld. Scofield preached at the school house on Sabbath last.

Duncan McMillan Jr., of South Arm was a guest at J. R. Vance's on Saturday last.

Mr. Benham of Jordan township passed through here on his way to J. M. Dave's on Monday evening.

Geo. Dyer, of South Arm called at the mill on business on Saturday.

Isaac Vance of Echo, visited relatives here on Saturday and Sunday.

Olin Smith visited Advance last week for two days.

No less then six young men who answer to the name of Will, also three Johns, are working at the mill.

Sunday school was organized at Afton, on Sabbath last with the following officers. Rev. H. C. Scofield superintendent, Richard Lewis assistant superintendent, Mable Scofield secretary and treasurer, Olin Smith librarian.

Atwood.

April 9.—John F. Jolliffe started last week for Washington territory.

D. Flanigan will start his shingle mill in a few days.

Joe Seymour has traded his horses for a yoke of oxen.

A crowded house at the exhibition in the hall Saturday night. The music was good and the pieces well executed, but owing to an accident to one of the principal actors the day previous a large hole was cut in the program.

The farmers are beginning their spring work.

Ironton.

April 10.—Mr. Galbraith has his store nearly completed and will commence business soon.

G. McDonald purchased a team of horses one day last week.

Miss Geneva Box is visiting friends in Ironton this week.

The young people met at the residence of Mr. Allen last evening and reorganized a Helping Hand society.

R. Miller was at Boyne City yesterday.

It is reported that the furnace will start Monday.

The ice begins to look rather sick and we expect to go for a boat ride before long.

The farmers in this vicinity have begun plowing and gardening.

We feel bad to think what a chance we lost of being classed among the handsome ones at the Advance bazaar. Hereafter we shall endeavor to take in all the bazaars. We don't believe that brother Eveline would have stood much chance if we had been there.

Echo.

Spring at last.

Martin Bartholomew has recently purchased a stump puller.

Miss Sarah Jones closed her school in the Button district on Friday last.

Mrs. Calvin Bennett is convalescent but Mr. B is quite poorly.

I. O. O. T. District Lodge meets at good templars hall, in Jordan township on Wednesday next.

We have failed to mention the blacksmith smith shop near Mr. Bennett's, run by Mr. B.'s nephew. It had a good run of business all winter.

Isaac Vance Sundayed with his brother J. R. in Wilson, who formerly lived in this township.

Miss Nancy Kinney has been engaged to teach the school near the mill this summer.

At the recent township election Wm. J. Benatt was elected supervisor, James W. Barnes clerk, German Button treasurer, Wm. Washburn commissioner.

Inwood.

April 10.—G. D. Hilton is building three-fourths of a mile of board and wire fence.

Mrs. Albert Wells, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. McGeagh, returned home yesterday.

Weekly prayer meetings are held at the school house on Wednesday evenings.

Mr. Tom Cummings has taken a business trip up to the "Soo."

The funds derived from the social at Hilton's school house last Friday evening, amounted to $8.00. A pleasant time was enjoyed by all present.

O. D. Hilton is intending to set out 150 apple, and 100 plum trees this spring. The trees were purchased of I. D. Cartright, of Toledo, Ohio.

CATARRH—Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B. For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

Sufferers from catarrhal troubles should read the above carefully. Herald

Burgess.

April 10.—Mr. Newson has moved his store from Young Chicago down to Burgess and occupies the Hansen house with it.

Mrs. Morell Long of Bay, is visiting friends and relatives in Hayes this week.

Mrs. Drake who made a short visit here from Milwaukee returned last week taking her sister, Mrs. Dake, with her.

Rev. D. H. Pierce preached last Sunday at the Burgess school house and Rev. Mr. Stitts of Horton's Bay, preaches there next Sunday at three o'clock.

We have all the accompaniments of spring except wild geese.

Things That Do Happen—A Complete Record of Interesting Events the World Over—Shocking Accidents, Startling Crimes, Other Topics.

BALL-BATTERS BANQUETED.

A Testimonial Tendered the Chicago and All-America Teams at New York.

The base-ball nines of New York City tendered a testimonial banquet at Delmonico's to the base-ball tourists who have returned from a trip around the world. They had a warm welcome from the 225 guests assembled. Among the notables at the table were: Mayor Chapin of Brooklyn, Mayor Cleveland of Jersey City, the Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, Daniel Dougherty, Judge Henry E. Howland, Erastus Wiman, Connie Mack, Griffith of Melbourne, Australia, and Leigh Lynch. Others present were: Joseph J. O'Donohoe, A. J. Reach of Philadelphia, Herman Ostrom, Theodore Roosevelt, Paul Dana, and Col. John McCaun. In his speech, among other things, Daniel Dougherty said:

In all your wanderings you have been distinctly Americans, and in such have taken the line of peace with distant peoples; here, you have taken the line of peace with your brothers. Wherever the tourists have been they have given pleasurable sustinement to surprise, and proved in the presence of amazed humanity that your nines, your men, princes and kings that you have met, that we, the people of America have captured the prizes and won the native crown in the games of England.

LATTER-DAY SAINTS IN CONVENTION.

The World's Conference at St. Joseph, Mo., Hears the Reports of Missionaries.

One day's session of the world's conference of Latter-Day Saints at St. Joseph was given up to the hearing of reports of missionaries showing the prosperity and growth of the church throughout the country. The report of the Church Recorder shows that there are over 26,000 members of the church, a gain of 1,485 in the last year. There were 1,105 removals and expulsions. Elder G. T. Griffin reported that missionaries in Virginia had met vigorous opposition and been threatened with personal violence on account of the erroneous belief that the Latter-Day Saints were polygamists.

TO BOYCOTT TWINE-BINDING.

Determined Opposition to the Trust by the Farmers of Indiana.

A large meeting of farmers was held at Anderson, Ind., and pledges made to pay no more than 15 cents per pound for twist binding twine, and not in any manner to patronize any merchant offering such twine for sale at a greater price. It was also resolved to boycott twine-binding reapers so long as the trust exists. The farmers appear to be in earnest, and declare they will allow their crops to rot the wheat in the fields before submitting to the Twine Trust.

A WHOLE TOWN DESTROYED.

Smithfield, N. C., in Ashes—The Loss Will Reach Fully $100,000.

Almost the entire town of Smithfield, in Johnston County, N. C., has been consumed by fire. The only buildings which remain standing are the county court house and jail and a few dwellings. The wind was raging at a terrific rate and the flames swept over the town like a hurricane. There was no fire department to fight the flames, and the people were powerless to resist the devouring sweep. The total loss is estimated at upward of $100,000. Much of the property was insured.

DEATH OF MRS. THEODORE THOMAS.

The Noted Musician's Wife Passes Away After a Long Illness.

Mrs. Theodore Thomas, wife of the musician, died at New York, after a lingering and painful illness. She had been confined to her bed since last autumn with a form of nervous prostration which from the first puzzled medical skill, though it was not until a few weeks of the end that hope of successful coping with it was abandoned. Mrs. Thomas was a woman of fine intellectual attainments and unusual force of character.

A Female Swindler Arrested.

Ella C. White, an Elmira, N. Y., music teacher, was arrested at Susquehanna, Pa., by Chief Little, of Elmira, for defrauding various people in that city out of sums aggregating $45,000 on fictitious mining and silk-mills stocks and other pretenses. She confessed that she lost the money in an Elmira bucket-shop. Her father is a superannuated employe of the Erie shops at Susquehanna, and has transferred his property amounting to $2,000. The woman was arrested on four warrants charging her with forgery in the second degree.

Hoosiers Will Have Fruit.

A number of the largest fruit-growers near New Albany, Ind., agree that the fruit has not been injured by the cold weather. Peaches and plums that are in full bloom have escaped. So have strawberries in bloom and grapes, cherries, raspberries, and currants. The prospect for an immense fruit crop was never better in southern Indiana at this season of the year.

Trials of an Old Lady.

Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, aged 89, arrived from Wheeling, W. Va., at Bridgeport, Conn., en route for Worcester, Mass., where her sons live. She walked most of the way, sleeping at farm houses and police stations.

A Disastrous Blaze.

At Baldwinville, N. Y., fire burned the Upson House, in which seven firms were located. The loss will aggregate $45,000, fully covered by insurance.

COMMERCIAL CONDITIONS.

Average Prices Still Receding—Money Easy to Obtain.

In their review of trade for last week R. G. Dun & Co. said:

Railroad earnings show an increase of about 10 per cent over last year for March. Trade at interior points is fairly active, but in some cases, though not in most, it is less satisfactory; at Atlanta it is satisfactory, with spring business well anticipated, at Omaha it is considered good; at Kansas City improving, and at Denver it is reported much better than last year. There is improvement in Minnesota, particularly in ship-building, and lumber is active. The money markets are easy, and stocks have improved somewhat at Kansas City and Denver, but are lower at Boston, where it is generally declined for new all qualities except New Mexicans and Texas. Money is easier also for a good demand when the new city appears. Depressing influences are felt in the iron trade, and the prices of many goods and clothing fabrics are lower, being the accumulation of stocks which the late cold weather left. The coal market is in movement upward. The sales of copper abroad were at about £41 per ton, and 14c has been asked here, but at present Pennsylvania Lake copper is offered at 13½c. Petroleum has still moved and four of the principal refineries have advanced their prices. The average price of all commodities have again declined from the level of last week, but not much. The most important change is the fall of pig iron, which is now 75c per ton lower than last week, the production being at present a large yield this year, and stocks at furnaces, though better than since spring, are still not large enough to promise a clearing of the crude product, and Coke has moved downward with pig iron, and continuing, and quite a fraction. The iron trade is generally reported in certain the conditions of Clear who look for improvement in all branches of legitimate business. The stockists about April 1 has now passed, and the general opinion is that the consumption of iron and steel cannot yet be such as to warrant of foreign capital as has been feared. The business of the country is in a healthy condition, and total of all the previous week.

THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION.

Setting Apart an Hour for Prayer on Washington's Centennial.

The President has issued the following proclamation:

Whereas, years have passed since the foundation of our Republic, and it is fitting that we should at this time, the 30th day of April, 1789, in the city of New York, and in the presence of the representatives of the people, pay reverent homage to the devotion had led the colonies to victory and to the establishment of the government of which Washington was the first President, and to the wisdom of the founders of the city by prayer for God's guidance in the work of government, and, whereas, the 30th day of April is a day of such illustrious event in our history as to deserve to be remembered by all who are of Congress, to the end that the people of the whole country may, in the spirit of patriotic thanksgiving, pay reverent homage to God that the joy of this occasion may be accompanied by the fervent prayer that the blessings showered on our fathers in the past and a devout supplication for the continuance of the Divine favor may be bestowed upon the descendants of the religious exodus, both Christian and Jew, and, whereas, it is meet that we should be reminded of our dependence upon prayer and thanksgiving on that day, Now, therefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States of America, in response to this, pious and patriotic feeling, do hereby appoint and set apart the 30th day of April, being the 30th day of April, in the morning, the people of the country to meet in their respective places of worship or other places suitable for the favor of God that our Government may be continued in the spirit of its founders, for the benefit of the people, and that His blessing may lead us in the future to the same righteousness and good success.

A MISSING CASHIER.

P. F. Pratt Runs Away with $100,000 and Disappears.

The doors of the First National Bank at Rock Island, Ill., were closed. The cashier, P. F. Pratt, is in Canada, having stolen about $100,000. A woman as handsome as she is wicked is in the case. The cashier went to Minneapolis recently and the authorities of that place have received notice from the St. Paul Merchants' Bank that their account of $2,000 was overdrawn $20,000. Investigation showed that Pratt had drawn out the money the bank and twice as much more on his cashier's check. The bank examiner was called in and found that Pratt owes a third to the amount of nearly $100,000. The directors are close mouthed, and a receiver was appointed. It is impossible to tell the extent of Pratt's villainy, as the bank's correspondents in New York and Chicago allowed him to overdraw $15,000. In addition to this $60,000 on his personal note, indorsed by an aged widow, whose affairs he managed. The woman with whom Pratt skipped was a Mrs. Jacobson, a gamester. Mrs. Pratt never suspected her husband until an anonymous note told her of his doings. She then left him and went her home in Boston, Mass.

AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.

The Anniversary Meeting at Washington Attended by Mr. Windom and Others.

The anniversary of the American Tract Society was celebrated in the church of the Covenant at Washington, D. C. The attendance was large, including Secretary Windom and other prominent officials. Justice Strong presided. Dr Sheaver, the Secretary, read an abstract of the year's operations showing total receipts (one agency being estimated) at $290,000; expenditures a little short of that sum. About 150 new publications have been added. Printing is done in New York in thirty languages, abroad in 150 languages or dialects. Donations and legacies amount to $75,000. Over 42,000,000 pages of tracts were distributed gratuitously, about 200 colporteurs employed, and over $10,000 was sent abroad in cash and publications.

LIGHT PUNISHMENT FOR MURDER.

Bem Scott Sentenced to Five Years' Imprisonment by an Indiana Jury.

The trial of Bem Scott, the Texan who killed Cole Crowley, a young business man of Elkhart, Ind., on the 6th of last August, ended by the jury sentencing him to five years' imprisonment. On the date of the murder Scott, who had had considerable trouble with Crowley over some property that Crowley rented from him, approached the latter and stated that he understood Crowley desired to whip him. Crowley responded that he had not said so. Scott stabbed Crowley four times. George Newell, a bystander, once, and Forest Sage, a colored man, once, before he was captured. Crowley died in a few days.

IT WAS LIKE THE CHICAGO FIRE.

Work of 1884 Recent Prairie Fires in Dakota.

The stories of the Dakota farmers who suffered by the flames show that it was no ordinary prairie fire. It licked up everything combustible, and grass and stubble and wood broke into flame seemingly without coming in contact with fire. The combustion was almost spontaneous in the dry and heated condition of the atmosphere, and in motion to the terrible gale. The conditions seemed similar to those existing at the time of the great Chicago fire and the fire in the Wisconsin woods, when the atmosphere was almost ready to ignite and burn. Many pens burned in the flames. The pecuniary loss will reach upward of $2,000,000. Hundreds of families are left homeless and destitute. Appeals for aid have been made.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

Judge Hawkins Overruled in the Ammerman Pension Case.

Assistant Secretary Bussey, of the Interior Department, at Washington, D. C., has rendered a decision in what is known as the Ammerman pension case, in which he overrules that of his predecessor, Judge Hawkins. Ammerman was a soldier in an Ohio regiment and was injured by his comrades, who were indulging in horse-play while in camp. The claim was rejected on the ground that the injury was not received while the soldier was in the line of his duty. Bussey reverses the ruling of the office in this case and ordered the claim of Ammerman admitted. His position was that the claimant's injury was a result of his military service, in that the service placed him in a position where a serious fault on his part, he received his hurt.

A MAIL CLERK IN TROUBLE.

Herbert G. Stout, of St. Paul, Charged with Robbing the Mails.

Herbert G. Stout, railway mail clerk on the route between St. Paul, St. Marie, and Council Bluffs, Iowa, has been arrested by Postoffice Inspector G. M. Fleming and Marshal Daggett. Stout is charged with robbing the mails between St. Paul and Council Bluffs, and it is supposed has been very successful in his operations, which covered a year. He was arrested in the act of making off with two whole packages of letters and has been seen to take letters from other mail carriers. Stout's brother is a Methodist minister in St. Paul, and his family are well connected, and he is connected with the most prominent people in that city.

CROPS IN CALIFORNIA.

Greatly Benefited by the Late Rain and Prospects Generally Good.

Telegraphic reports from all parts of California show that the crops of fruit and grain promise a greater yield than has ever been seen before, notwithstanding the fact that the increase in acreage is not half in some sections as one-third, especially in grain, amounting to a half-million. The late rains were quite general, and especially beneficial in parts where rainfall is usually the lightest. A very large number of young fruit trees have been set out in southern and northern portions of the State, and many thousand grapevines in the Fresno district, all of which have been benefited by the late rain.

ANXIOUS FOR STATEHOOD.

Citizens of Idaho Pleased Over the Call for a Constitutional Convention.

Gov. Stevenson's call for a constitutional convention at Boise City, Idaho, July 4, on assurances from Delegate Dubois in Washington that Idaho will be made a State next winter, caused much rejoicing throughout that Territory. Members of the constitutional convention, several of two in number, will be elected Monday, June 3. The call is issued to adopt a constitution and elect a full State ticket to be voted on in fall. The Mormons oppose statehood and will attempt to defeat it.

COL. CLAYTON'S MURDERERS.

Congressman Breckinridge Furnishes Funds to Assist the Investigation.

The Gazette, of Little Rock, Ark., says:

C. R. Breckinridge, Congressman-elect from the Second District, was in the city lately, and it is learned that the object of his visit was to confer with Governor Fort in regard to the steps taken to catch the Clayton murderers. Mr. Breckinridge, it is said, has given his word to Governor with the Governor on this score, and finding him in possession of information, and being a relation of the unfortunate Clayton, at the time he also supplied the Governor with the necessary funds and promised to procure more.

Bids for Government Work.

Bids were opened at the United States Treasury Department lately for approaches to the public buildings at Fort Smith, Ark. Bids were received from Fort Smith, was the lowest bidder, at $19,238, $17,605, and $16,204 for the work under three different plans. Bids were also opened for completing the roof of the Pittsburg Postoffice. The lowest bid was that of the Pennsylvania Construction Company, of Pittsburg, at $42,265.

Suicide of Gen. H. M. McConnell.

Gen. H. M. McConnell, a prominent attorney of Chicago, Ill., was found dead in a sensational shooting affair with James Williams, a wealthy contractor, some two months ago, committed suicide at the Fifth Avenue Hotel at Topeka. Kan. McConnell was a general in the Army of the Potomac, was well known throughout the West, and was prominent in Grand Army circles. He left no reason for the rash act.

Press Foreign Lands.

Emperor Francis Joseph's visit to Berlin has been fixed for August 4.

The correctional tribunal at Paris has acquitted Senator Naquet and Deputies Laisnerre, Laisant, and Turquet and M. Paul Deroulede, leaders of the League of Patriots, and three other members of that organization of the charge of belonging to a secret society, but imposed a fine of 100 francs each upon them for belonging to a society not authorized by law.

The Belgian Government is preparing a circular convoking an international conference to be held in Brussels on the slave trade.

Don't Want Foreign Musicians.

The British Musicians' Union has undertook to prevent the landing of 400 musicians, who arrived there recently, claiming that they came within the provisions of the foreign contract labor act, and can possibly be held under the pauper act. It is alleged that these men are in the habit of coming to America in the spring, and returning in the fall with the money they have earned.

Losses by Fire.

The Standard Iron Works at West Superior, Wis., have been destroyed by fire. Loss, $45,000; no insurance.

The foundry and machine shops of Sheriff & Sons, at Pittsburg, Pa., have been totally destroyed by fire, together with a large number of valuable patterns. The loss will reach $60,000.

Infected with Fire-Bugs.

Reports from Des Moines, Iowa, are to the effect that the city is infected with firebugs, who make the hotels to the rear and police departments. A fire which started in the rear of the Methodist Church destroyed the parsonage, doing damage to the extent of $10,000.

A Michigan Blaze.

The Dowagiac Manufacturing Company's building at Dowagiac, Mich., was consumed by fire. The loss will be about $40,000. The fire was stuck barns on the fair grounds, and the building adjoining to Fred Bowling were also destroyed.

Political Pointers.

President Harrison has nominated Joel B. Erhardt to be Collector of the Port of New York and Cornelius B. Van Cott to be Postmaster of New York.

THE SENATE ADJOURNS.

Final Disposition of a Number of Presidential Harrison's Nominations.

The Senate adjourned sine die the 31 inst. The proceedings were mainly devoted to a discussion of Mr. Sherman's resolution expressing the profound sorrow of the Senate at the death of Mr. John Sherman. It was understood that the resolution should be referred to the Senate, and that the Senate should, on the adoption, stands establish a precedent that hereafter, when a member of the House dies, the Senate will be notified of the fact. Mr. Sherman's resolution was adopted, and the Senate adjourned. The following nominations were confirmed: George H. Shields, Marshal of the United States for the Southern District of Illinois; Marshal of Kentucky; Thomas Jefferson Jackson See, of Kentucky, to be Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, Navy Department; Commissioner of New Mexico; William F. Wharton, of Massachusetts, to be Assistant Secretary of State; Thomas H. "Sweet Home."

"There is no place like home" runs the old song, and we believe it is true in the overwhelming majority of instances, except in that a fellow can go home and be sure of his welcome, and that he will immediately secure a good supper. He will even try to favor in their views.

The impressions made in the home are lasting. A mother's words have long been in the mind. A father's counsel remains as long as life lasts. The last words of parental advice are treasured sacredly in memory, and are the most of all else that goes.

How important, therefore, that the home be maintained intact, as long as possible, in favor of loving and helpful influences, against the growing children, those who are to be the invaders, when the family shall be broken up by death from kinship, through fear of what the children lose by being scattered. What the children lose by being scattered, they never can recover. They have grown up with that love and advice which is the best thing in life.

No doubt many of the good men who have found premature graves, if they had lived beyond the meridian of life, had their errors, which they had not known what to do, or how to do, which sent them to the premature grave.

There are tens of thousands of parents, to-day in agony of mind because of the death from kinship, through fear of what they are doing, or they do not know what they are doing, or they do not know what to do, or how to do, and leaving one day and an all-wise God, who knows the end from the beginning, omnipotent, fickle appetites, and the real to the ideal, and who gives the right to the weak, and who cannot purchase Warner's Safe Cure that will cure them quickly but surely with arsenic.

If you are suffering or languishing, without any idea of what ails you, or unless you get relief right quick you will die, whether you believe it or not.

Doctors publicly admit that the recent adversely adverse report of the committee appointed to use Warner's Safe Cure because it contained arsenic, which they claim is poison, and use your own good judgment, and, which, if you have proved itself in tens of thousands of cases, and which, if you have not been brought to your death will be broken up, and your loved ones will be robbed, which you will cannot purchase of friends supply.

Against too many loving parents, wife, kind, and true, have gone down to premature graves, because the physicians, in consultation and the bigotry of physicians, in the light of the nineteenth century, has forbidden the use of a cure bear your home and the loved ones, especially in the home and the loved ones, and carefully and conscientious consideration.

The rabbit pest is again making trouble in Texas.

STATE AGRICULTURAL BOARD.

—When the annual meeting of the State Agricultural Board was held in Detroit on January 14 last, Senator Thomas W. Palmer, the newly elected President, was not in Washington, and it was decided to defer the appointment of the necessary committees and the transaction of considerable additional business until such time as he could meet with them in his official capacity. The meeting of the sixteen of the society, together with the business and transportation committees, met in Detroit. President Palmer occupied the chair. Other members of the board present were: Secretary J. C. Sterling, of Monroe; Treasurer A. J. Dean, of Adrian; ex-officio members of the board, A. O. Hyde of Marshall, and Governor M. Phillips, of Romeo; members of business Committee, Franklin Wells of Constantine, John C. Sharp of Jackson, and H. Butterfield of Lapeer; Transportation Committee, E. Fifield of Bay City, William Ball of Hamburg, and John Lessiter of Owosso. The following committees were appointed: To receive propositions for a permanent location for the State Fair and report to the Executive Board at Jackson, April 20—Messrs. A. J. Dean, A. O. Hyde, John C. Sharp, F. H. Butterfield, William Ball, and W. L. Webber. Committee on Legislation—Messrs. James M. Turner and William Ball. On Business—Franklin Wells, John C. Sharp, and H. Butterfield. Transportation—James M. Turner, J. C. Sterling, Eugene Fifield, Inspection—William Ball, Franklin Wells, John C. Sharp, H. Butterfield, and John Lessiter. Premiums—George Jerome, of Jackson, and Cornelius B. Van Cott to be Postmaster of New York.

THE SENATE ADJOURNS.

Final Disposition of a Number of Presidential Harrison's Nominations.

The Senate adjourned sine die the 31 inst. The proceedings were mainly devoted to a discussion of Mr. Sherman's resolution expressing the profound sorrow of the Senate at the death of Mr. John Sherman. It was understood that the resolution should be referred to the Senate, and that the Senate, on the adoption, stands establish a precedent that hereafter, when a member of the House dies, the Senate will be notified of the fact. Mr. Sherman's resolution was adopted, and the Senate adjourned. The following nominations were confirmed: George H. Shields, Marshal of the United States for the Southern District of Illinois; Marshal of Kentucky; Thomas Jefferson Jackson See, of Kentucky, to be Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, Navy Department; Commissioner of New Mexico; William F. Wharton, of Massachusetts, to be Assistant Secretary of State; Thomas H. Carter, of Montana, to be Senator in Congress, with the rank of Major; Second Lieutenant Ninth Cavalry, R. A. Darrell, Adjutant-General, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel; Secretary of Legation at Brussels, N. Biles, of New York; William Pinkney White, of Maryland, Commissioner of Navigation; Jeffersonian Coolidge, of Massachusetts; William Lindsay, of Kentucky, to be Second Comptroller; Joseph C. Pegues, of Illinois; John R. Lynch, of Louisiana; Morris M. Estee, of California, to be Second Assistant Postmaster-General; Commissioner of Accounts Nations to be held in Brussels; Charles H. Tweed, of New York, to be Minister to Belgium. The Senate by the President were also confirmed: Marshals for various districts; Commissioners to remove the inspection of secrecy from the Senate; Commissioners to examine the records of Mississippi; to be Ministers to France, and of Mount Hallowell, of Pa., to be Minister to Portugal. The Senate then proceeded to consideration of the extradition treaty with Mexico, which was postponed until next session. The calendar of nominations was also disposed of. The following were confirmed: Joel I. Blanchard to be United States Marshal for the Eastern District of Louisiana, and of William H. Pendleton to be an Associate Justice of the United States Court in New Mexico were postponed until next session. The Senate then adjourned sine die.

He Got Away With It.

A short old man in a long gray beard yesterday afternoon was an armful of Christmas through Fulton market. A noon and stopped at a wagon of grapes were displayed. "Here you are!" yelled the man, pointing to open baskets of Concords, Catawbas and Delawares, for half the price. This small man stopped a minute so as to free his beard, carefully pulled off a bunch in a basket of Concords, ate them, declared they were sour, but he tried a bunch of Catawbas, and began on them.

The fruit vendor, who had watched the customer, gave the short man's actions with a look. "How much for grapes?" he asked laconically, onting a Delaware. "Forty cents a basket," "Too much," said the man, and walked away two more Concords. "Are you a wholesale dealer?" "No." "Own a vineyard, mister?" "No." "Where did you learn your trade?" "Over's Jersey." "Well, see here, old man, I eat about a pound and a half of grapes every day in the year, and I'll tell you how I know, and then you can go back to your vineyard." "How?" "Why, you don't know what they are around here."—New York World.

Boyne City.

APRIL 15.—The ice on Pine Lake disappeared around the point this afternoon and the first vessel of the season was towed into the Sheboygan dock a little before six o'clock.

Mrs. S. P. Jones opened her millinery rooms on Friday last. The ladies report a nice selection of goods and satisfactory prices.

The Presbyterian church having lately been repaired and resented, was re-dedicated on Thursday evening last. Rev. Stout of Petoskey, preaching the sermon.

The young people of the M. E. Sunday school propose to give an Easter social on the evening of Saturday, April 24th, at the McIntyre building. A substantial supper will be given, also a short literary programme.

Mrs. F. M. Chase is, we are glad to say, somewhat improved in health.

William White has today moved from his house on Lake street to the Gregier house corner of Spencer and Park street, that he may be nearer his business.

Miss Edith Cole of East Jordan was the guest of Mrs. A. E. Martin, a few days last week.

Samuel B. Thatcher has become "mine host" in the United States hotel. Surely the honors will now be divided. Do not be surprised if the battle of the Kilkenny Cats is repeated.

The steamer Clara Belle which has been largely repaired and improved, will be launched tomorrow.

Burgess.

APRIL 17.—The Rev. Stitts delivered a discourse at the Burgess school house last Sunday, and then organized a Sunday school, with superintendent, Alex Ross; assistant superintendent, Willie Chew; treasurer, George Sunsby; secretary, Mrs. Jenny Sunsby. He will preach again in two weeks.

George Blythe moved the first of the week down to the lake shore. He occupies the Flave Smith house.

Peter Kane had a gang of men logging last week.

Miss Nettie Hawks commenced a term of school in the Burgess school house last Monday.

Miss Mittie Ward was taken ill one day last week and medical attendance was summoned.

The school officers of district No. 4, have engaged Miss Ella Adams for the summer term of school, commencing the first Monday in May.

East Jordan.

From the Enterprise.

John Munroe, jr., has gone to Manistee, to look up his land there.

Floyd Green has put in a pool table at the Central House.

James Shear has given up his interest in the Renard saloon, and gone west to Oklahoma, Indian Territory, to prospect.

A. E. Pickard, proprietor of the Astor hotel, has greatly improved the building by putting new doors and windows in the dining room, and otherwise adding to it.

Too much firewater caused a man to fall through a $5 sheet of glass in T. L. Burdick's store front one day last week.

John and Hugh Brown, the "Brown Bros." have left for Tacoma, W. T., to locate timber land with a view of starting a camp. Its things turn out favorably.

School Bonds Voted.

At the school meeting last Friday evening, there was a unanimous vote in favor of issuing the bonds for the district to build the new school house.

New Postmaster for Charlevoix.

The daily papers announce the appointment of Harrison Berdan postmaster for Charlevoix, vice Chas. J. Strang removed. No cause for removal has yet been assigned, and we can only presume that it was for "offensive partisanship?" If so it is the best endorsement of the politics of the JOURNAL we have had in many months. Mr. Congressman Cutchen promised last fall to lift our official scalp as soon as possible and he has it.

Mr. Berdan will undoubtedly make a satisfactory postmaster. He has no other business to occupy a portion of his time and attention, and he will therefore be able to give the service his best efforts.

Enpepsy.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are wearing for it daily, and mourning because time tied it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually for our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you good digestion and cast the demon dyspepsia and its vital instead cypepsy. We recommend Electric Bitters for dyspepsia and all diseases of liver, stomach and kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle, by F. G. Hines and Co., druggists.

Foreign Sugar Knocked Out.

The American Sugar Reinery has advanced the prices of sugar one-fourth cent a pound. Long live the sugar trust! Foreign sugar is knocking at our doors, but we keep it out by a protective tariff of eighty-two per cent. Every man having independence enough to consult his own common sense instead of his party leaders knows that if we take down the barriers and let in foreign sugar free, both the sugar trust and the price of sugar would fall immediately. In England, where not a stalk of sugar cane grows, the best can be bought at from four to four and one-half cents a pound. In the United States, where sugar cane is a staple product of some sections, we have the supreme advantage over the down-trodden Englishman of paying eight and eight and one half cents a pound for sugar, or double what it costs in England. Great is the trust! Great is its parent, the protective tariff! Great is the benefit of living in a "protected" country, where sugar is a natural product. The latest quotations on sugar at wholesale is eight cents per pound.

How Doctors Conquer Death.

Doctor Walter S. Hammond says: "After a long experience I have come to the conclusion that two-thirds of all deaths from coughs, pneumonia and consumption, might be avoided if Dr. Acker's English Remedy for consumption were only carefully used in time." This wonderfull remedy is sold under a positive guarantee by G. W. Beaman, druggist.

"Pigs in Clover."

"Isn't that man a dandy?"

"He's a bigger man than the president."

"Wonder how he can do that?"

These remarks came from a group of men standing on the city hall steps the other day.

The man, who was looked upon as a wonder, held in his hands a round box, in which were contained four marbles. He gave the box a turn this way and the small spheres rolled around from one compartment to another. In the center of the box was a sort of pill box-shaped piece of paste board, with a hole in one side. With a dextrous twirl and shake the four marbles flew inside and staid there.

Time, fifteen seconds.

This man, whom everybody envied, had mastered the "Pigs in Clover" puzzle. He could do it every time, and no wonder he was a big man in everybody's estimation.

Congressmen Want More Pay.

Some of the eastern papers declare that the proposition to increase the pay of congressmen from $5,000 to $10,000 per year has been favorably received, and that the fifty-first congress may safely pass a law providing for such an increase to take effect with the beginning of the fifty second congress. It is doubtful if members of the house will share this feeling, however thoroughly the lordly senators may deceive themselves into the belief that the people are just aching to give them more pay. Congressmen who vote to increase the pay from $5,000 to $10,000 for ten months work will hear something drop when they appear for re election.

Do Not Suffer any Longer

Knowing that a cough can be checked in a day, and the first stages of consumption broken in a week, we hereby guarantee Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption, and will refund the money to all who buy, take it as per directions, and do not find our statement correct. G. W. Beaman, druggist. 2

Mr. Halstead Rejected.

The famous field marshal, Murat, has been stopped short on his march to Berlin. Seven republican senators joined with the democratic senators Thursday in defeating Halstead's nomination as minister to Germany. This first break between Harrison and the senate came because as a newspaper writer he has offended several of the senators of his own party. The republican senators who assisted Senator Payne in the contest made against his taking a seat in the senate, and who were criticised by Editor Halstead for his action, are the men who did the deadly work. Some of the most intense partisans in the senate voted against the confirmation of the most rabid republican editor in the country. The list includes Ingalls, Chilcott, Farwell, Plumb and Evarts. One of the Michigan senators voted to confirm and the other refrained from voting. It is, however, stated that they are hostile to Halstead because he sailed in so several of their colleagues so unmercifully years ago, and will not vote for him when the matter comes up again under Sherman's formal motion to reconsider. It is believed that this motion was simply made to give the president a chance to withdraw the nomination, as there is no prospect of confirmation. The rejection has been the sensation of the day. It is said that some democratic senators were inclined to vote for Halstead, but were kept firm in opposition by Payne's threat to resign from the senate and permit a republican to be appointed in his place if Halstead was confirmed.—Free Press.

Another Swindle.

Twenty dollars a rod is the price the sharks are charging the farmer to put lightning arresters on his buildings. The farmer believes the shark says what he means, but finds when the rod is up that he only thinks what he says, and that the price is $20 per lightning rod, or that $20 per linear rod. Result, another farmer robbed, and no legal redress.

A year ago potatoes were almost a luxury, but this spring a man of very moderate means can eat them three times a day without a fear of bankruptcy. This state of affairs tickles the consumer, but is a little hard on the producer.

Constipation

Demands prompt treatment. The results of neglect may be serious. Instead of harsh and drastic purgatives, the tendency of which is to weaken the bowels. The best remedy is Ayer's Pills. Being purely vegetable, their action is prompt and their effect always beneficial. They are an admirable Liver and After-dinner pill, and everywhere endorsed by the profession.

"Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice." —Dr. L. P. Fowler, Bridgeport, Conn.

"I can recommend Ayer's Pills above all others, having long proved their value as a cathartic for myself and family." —J. T. Hess, Lentisville, Pa.

"For several years Ayer's Pills have been used in my family. We find them an for constipation and indigestion, and are never without them in the house."—Moses Pressley, Lowell, Mass.

"Four boxes of Ayer's Pills cured me of liver complaint."—E. L. Fulton, Hanover, N. H.

"I have used Ayer's Pills, for liver troubles and indigestion, during many years, and always found them prompt and efficient in their action."—L. N. Smith, Utica, N. Y.

"I suffered from constipation which assumed such an obstinate form that I feared it would cause a stoppage of the bowels. Two doses of Ayer's Pills effected a complete cure."—D. Burke, Saco, Me.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years, and consider them an invaluable family medicine. I know of no better remedy for liver troubles, and have always found them a prompt cure for dyspepsia."—Jos. Quinn, 56 Middle st., Hartford, Conn.

"Having been troubled with constipation, which seems inevitable with persons of sedentary habits, I have tried Ayer's Pills, hoping for relief. I am glad to say that they have served me better than any other medicine. I attribute at this time my recollection only after a faithful trial of their virtues."—Samuel T. Jones, Oak st., Boston, Mass.

☞ Scrofula is transmitted from parent to child, and thus becomes a family inheritance for generations. It is, therefore, the duty of every scrofulous person to cleanse his blood by a thorough and persistent course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Last Tuesday morning the young son of Wm. Wilds was tied in a high chair near the kitchen stove while the mother was at work about the house. Being quite strong and heavy he threw himself over against the stove, and before the mother could reach him his face was terribly burned, and one eye is believed to be completely destroyed. He did not recover consciousness for several hours, and is still in a very critical condition, with the chances against recovery.

The str. L. A. Cummings arrived Monday afternoon, and her managers made arrangements for their regular business. She will make tri-weekly trips from Traverse City to East Jordan, on a schedule substantially as announced last week, arriving at Charlevoix from Traverse City at 4.00 p. m. every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and leaving Charlevoix at 9.00 a. m. on alternate days. There is no reason why this should not become a popular route with our people.

There may be some disappointment that tickets for reserved seats at the school entertainment can not be obtained. The reason is that holders of reserved seat tickets are more likely to enter the hall after the exercises begin, and in a school entertainment it is highly essential that any interruptions of this kind be avoided; justice to those already seated, and to the children demand it. It is intended that the curtain shall rise promptly, and so save those who are there early any annoying delay.

Every child in Charlevoix ought to have the privilege of reading P. T. Barnum's latest book, "The Wild Beasts, Birds and Reptiles of the World." Mr. Barnum has spent a long life in an intimate acquaintance with almost every kind of animal, bird, and reptile known in the world, and is entirely competent to relate their principal habits and characteristics. The book is profusely illustrated and handsomely printed and bound, and can be obtained only of D. H. Pierce, agent for Charlevoix.

A Lansing special says that Senator Grosfield's small milk bill has passed the senate. The bill adds six new sections to the existing law and is aimed chiefly at the vendors who offer skimmed milk for sale as pure milk. It requires dealers who sell milk from which the cream has been removed, to have painted on the cans the words "skimmed milk," in letters not less than one inch in length. If the bill is to do this they may be punished by a fine of not more than $100 or by imprisonment not exceeding three months.

❧SEE EXTRAORDINARY CAREER OF A FEMALE OUTLAW.

Belle Starr, the Southwestern Woman Desperado—First Winning Notoriety as Cole Younger's Wife. After His Life Terms Begins She Marries a Cherokee Indian—Wild Life of Crime.

BELLE STARR, who met a violent death in the Indian Territory not long ago, was the more remarkable woman who ever figured in the history of border outlawry. Her life reads like a page from a work of fiction. Wedded in girlhood to a dashing Captain of Quantrell's outfit, throat hand, and associated all her life with murderers, train robbers, and horse thieves, she became a dangerous and governing power on the border that made her a terror to officers and well-doing people. She was naturally handsome and graceful, a daring horsewoman, a crack shot with a revolver and rifle, and as bold and fearless as a tigress. For a dozen years her home at Younger's Bend, near Eufala, was the rendezvous and hiding-place of the worst desperadoes of the West. Jesse James spent six weeks there once while officers were searching the country for him.

But Belle did not owe her fame to mere association with thieves. She herself planned and led daring raids, and it was supposed that she knew more about the cruel murders that were of such frequent occurrence near her home than anybody else.

Belle always dressed plainly, but wherever she went her dashing appearance in the saddle attracted so much attention that she was a marked woman. A broad-brimmed white hat, such as is commonly worn by cowboys, surmounted by a wide, black plush band, with feathers and ornaments, gave her an appearance of saucy independence, which was heightened by the brilliant display of guns and revolvers that always swung from the saddle or shoulder. She was of medium height, with a good form, and bright, intelligent black eyes.

She disliked newspaper notoriety, and but few reporters were ever successful in learning the history of her eventful career from her own lips. She claimed that newspapers had done her a gross injustice once.

Belle was born in Carthage, Mo., thirty-four years ago. In 1863 her father, who was a Confederate, moved with his family to Texas, where they continued to live after the close of the war. After the surrender Quantrell's men flocked down to the vicinity of Bellville's home, and they were always welcome guests at her father's home as he loved to listen to their stories of murder and pillage. She fell in love with Cole Younger, who was one of the most daring of all the guerrillas, and though her father objected to the courtship, she ran away with her lover and was married to him on horseback. John Fisher, a famous Texas stage robber, held her horse while the ceremony was being performed.

Less than six weeks after the marriage Younger became involved in a gun fight, which ended in four men losing their lives, and he had to run away to Missouri, leaving his wife behind in Texas. She prepared to follow him, but her father sent her a message to the effect that her mother was dangerously ill, and she returned home instead. She found that her mother was as well as she ever was in horse from a young man at the school house, then mounted it and rode away to join Younger and several companions, who were waiting to escort her out of Texas. In the party were Jesse James, Frank James, and Bob Younger.

Cole Younger purchased a farm in Missouri and tried to lead an upright life. He loved his girl wife as passionately as a man of his nature could love anybody, and he was really ambitious to make a good home for her and surround her with such rough luxuries as she desired. But his past proved defeated his ambition. He had enemies every where, and they were swarming in their persecutions. One day a party of men killed his brother, a lad about seventeen years old, while he was returning to his father's farm from Sedalia. Cole Younger was soon as the news of the tragedy reached him, abandoned his farm and set out to wreak vengeance on the assassins. He killed four of them in as many weeks, and wounded five or six others. He went to Los Angeles, Cal., where he remained for some time, and then returned to Texas. From Texas he returned to Missouri, where he joined his fortunes with those of the James gang, and he participated in all their daring raids, down to the one at the Northfield, Minn., Bank, when he was shot and captured. He is now serving a life sentence in the Minnesota penitentiary at Stillwater. His wife was true to him to the moment the iron gates of the prison closed behind her husband. She sent large sum of money in his defense, and accompanied him to Stillwater, heavily armed, in the vain hope that she might effect his release, and failing in that she returned to the border to resume the career which her husband had tried in vain to shun. She spent the most of her time among the Indians, frequently joining wild tribes that were on the war path.

She subsequently married Jim Starr, a son of Tom Starr, a noted Cherokee Indian, and with her daughter settled on a farm on the Canadian River, but she did not get along well with her neighbors, whom she would not allow to hunt on her premises. She and Jim Starr, who was shot down by her side two years ago, once served a term of a year in the prison at Detroit for horse stealing.

Bell Starr was known throughout the Southwest as the "Bandit Queen," and her extraordinary career of crime fully entitled her to wear the title. The following extracts from a journal kept by her after some hesitation the Judge appeared and, approaching his late fellow, inquired for Belle Read.

"Come out to the gate," said the young woman, but I will show her to you. Turning suddenly as she had one hand on her saddle, she said, "Feel, look right into my face and you will see Belle."

The Judge was dumfounded.

"Go home," said she, "and tell the folks that you have had the honor of sleeping with Bob Dalton, the bandit queen." With these words the ducky woman leaped into her saddle and struck westward like a blue streak.

Among the many amusing incidents of Belle's career the following contains more laughable than the following: A friend of hers, a prominent member of the Methodist Church, residing at a small village in Dallas County, Texas, was ill one Sunday and unable to attend to his congregation. Belle, who was as much interested in religious as well as a consummate amount of cheek, undertook to take his place in the pulpit, which she did in such a manner as to deceive everybody, both as to her sex and personal identity. She was not even recognized by her own relatives, several of whom were present during the service. After her sermon she went around with the box and collected $25. One of the church members who was known to be both wealthy and stingy, handed her a dime contribution, saying that he had no other change less than $10. I will change it for you," said she, and she did so. Pocketing him back the five cents and retaining the $10. In like manner she collected quite a respectable sum for the old parsonage, and leaving the church by the back door left the money with a friend and changed her clothes so rapidly that she was enabled to meet the congregation on their way homeward.

Belle's fight with a gambler on "San Ilia" Creek, in the Choctaw Nation, is not the least interesting feature of the journal. As she was preaching on the above-mentioned water course, in company with her daughter Pearl, and panning out small particles of gold, a little after sunsown, a panther leaped on the back of her horse, which was tied to a tree close by. Drawing her pistol, she immediately advanced to the rescue. After wounding the animal and rendering it furious, her pistol failed to perform its duty, and she was left at the mercy of the brute. She did not, however, lose her presence of mind. Thrusting her pistol into the animal's mouth, she drew her dagger and buried the blade in his heart.

Of the many killings attributed to Belle Starr, or Belle Read, her journal accounts for four—that of Sheriff Nicols of Dallas, Joe Lunt of Tarrant County, the slayer of her brother, and John Morris, her husband's (Jim Read's) murderer, and lastly, a man named Jones, whom she disposed of near San Diego, Cal., for running a young orphan girl who had been placed in her charge by the deceased's parents. Of these killings none of the victims seem to be fairly entitled to a sympathy, and, as she was a consummate shot, and was not prone to make use of her pistol, the inference is that the killings were all fair ones. Of the three named only one has been identified in Texas, a female, whose home is in Baltimore. The injured parties were Conger, A. L. Scott, mail agent, and Joseph Jackson. None of the injuries are serious.

GOING TO GETTYSBURG.

TO ASSIST IN DEDICATING MICHIGAN'S MONUMENTS.

The Formalities Will Occur June 12—Also the Interesting Report of the Doings of the Monument Commission—Michigan's Heroes Will Be Honored.

Lansing special dispatch:

Gov. Luce presided at a meeting held in this city to perfect arrangements for the dedication of the Michigan monuments at Gettysburg. In addition to the members of the commission, appointed in accordance with the act creating the commission, there were present: Gen. Geo. G. Briggs of this city, Maj. Gen. Geo. W. Crawford of Big Rapids, and Capt. Peter Lennon of Lansing, the Michigan present included Gen. Trowbridge, Maj. F. S. Block, Quartermaster-Gen. Dalbol, Adjt. Gen. Ainger, Gen. Partridge, Col. S. S. Matthews, Capt. Pierce, Gen. Pierce, Capt. Moore, Gen. Fitzford, Secretary of State Osgood, State Treasurer Maltz, Auditor General Alpin, and Representatives D. S. Swan and Curtis. Several of these commanded Michigan regiments during the battles at Gettysburg. Col. Briggs, as Chairman of the Commission, presented the following report:

"This commission is the successor of a similar one, appointed by the Legislature, and the Supreme Court and two Regents of the State University. The commission appointed by the Legislature were also submitted, one increasing the number of the commission from five to seven, and the other enabling corporations to assume their obligations without requiring the end of thirty years, as is now the law. The act of 1887 provides for a commission of seven, to be appointed by the Governor, and the act of 1888 provides for the dedication of the three days nearly 230,000 men were looked to, and the 'Michigan Boys' were there in the thickest of the fight, and wounded or captured. The interest then, and the pride felt by the people of Michigan, in the action of the field as a National Cemetery—the address that Lincoln made—the battle—the great soldiers' orator, this author is immortal.

To Massachusetts belongs the honor of the first dedication of a State monument, the position of the troops in this battle, being on the ground, the Massachusetts troops were the first that fired the Government right line. Other States in the Union have dedicated their monuments, and we have followed in the best tracked and therefore the most interesting footsteps.

Michigan, by reason of her costly sacrifice in the battle, and the number of her sons who are buried, is one of the two States suffered most, and in proportion she suffered in the number of her dead.

If by gallant deeds and heroic deaths upon the battlefield, Michigan has earned the right to dedicate a monument, she deserves, and wealth in return has generously given, the opportunity to dedicate a monument. Upon the improvement of the National Cemetery of Gettysburg, Michigan has expended the sum of $1,000, and, keeping step with other loyal States, has made appropriation for the dedication of monuments for troops that were therein engaged. The act making the appropriation for the dedication of the monument provides for three commissioners to carry the same into effect, by appointment of the Governor, viz: Hon. Peter Lennon of Lansing, and Gen. G. Briggs of Grand Rapids, were appointed as such commissioners.

The labors of the board are now nearly completed, and it is the purpose of reporting to the other information to those interested that you may be prepared to meet the board, and be ready with the completion of them, and these are well under way. It will be ready for the dedication of the Michigan monument upon any day after June 1 next.

The board have made a contract for the monument, which cost from the sum appropriated, $20,000, there should be paid as follows: The board have paid on account, $2,000; compensation to the commissioners for their services, $1,000; the balance, $17,000, upon completing and delivery. These items permitted sections aforesaid. The board have paid for the bronze figure, $2,000, and for the bronze bas-relief, $1,500; to the battery $1,000 and to the four corner figures, $1,000 each.

The Charlevoix cornet band have ordered uniforms, which are expected to be here for use on Decoration Day. They are elegant.

Mr. Kehoe's grocery building on State street is completed, goods are being opened and the store will be opened for business soon.

The factory commenced operations Monday morning with S. M. See as superintendent and manager. Chas. See will have charge of the furniture store.

J. H. Mannon of Petoskey is in trouble, having been arrested and requested to explain his connection with a scheme to defraud the government by the procurement of a fraudulent pension.

There will be a church social at the residence of Mrs. John Nicholls on Friday evening. A choice program will be presented by Miss Adams of Ironton, Mrs. McGibony and home talent, with music, recitations and charades. Admission 10 cents. No refreshments.

An exchange says the seventeen-year locusts are due again. Their last appearance was in 1872. In that year their monotonous song was heard until late in September. It was in May and June that they put in an appearance. The resurrection of the insects, after their long sleep will be watched with interest by many people.

There are men who, for money, become bondsmen for liquor dealers, and then bustle around and try to have the newspapers say nothing about it, because if it were generally known it would annoy their families. This of itself is an admission that the traffic is wrong. Wonder if this has anything to do with the failure to publish the proceedings of the village council.

For four years this paper has had a standing offer before the village council to publish without cost to the village, their official proceedings including all allowances, if the clerk would furnish the copy. One council accepted the offer, and the clerk furnished copy for three or four meetings, and then it was dropped. The offer is still open and we believe the people would have more interest in the affairs of the village if they could know what was done at all the meetings.

The good old "salt rising bread" such as your mother used to make, is becoming a society "fad" now, and is the aristocratic bread. A Detroit Free Press reporter says it smells like stale Limberger cheese in an exhausted state. This is an infamous libel. When it is "coming up" in a hot corner behind the stove, it does have a good strong smell, but after it is baked and cool it is odorless and no bread made can approach it in sweetness and flavor, and it is the only bread fit for making bread and milk with.

The Clara Belle came down from Boyne last Thursday evening, and lay at the machine shop dock Friday and Saturday, to complete her repairs. She has been thoroughly rebuilt during the winter, under the directions of Jos. Swain. Her decks and most of the upper works are entirely new, her rail raised nearly two feet, and other changes made which make her a much better looking boat. She is at present running only on Pine lake, but will begin she run to Harbor Springs in a few days, leaving Boyne in the morning, and returning at night.

Every poor man should stop and think how much money he is wasting when he spends five cents a day for a drink. For one year it makes $18.25, or three drinks per day makes $54.75, and for what? Is not to say anything about treating, loss of time, health and character. It is almost the interest on $1,000, or it would be a nice little sum to lay aside each year to buy a home, or it would purchase nice carpets and furniture to beautify your home, or it would add many luxuries and lots of good clothes for yourself and children. You would thus aid legitimate business, and prove a blessing to your family and community.

Last Monday morning our town was nearly thrown into a state of melancholy by the sudden and untimely end by drowning of our fellow citizen Mr. Joseph Beauvais. Mr. Beauvais was in the act of placing a piece of timber in position on one of the cribs of the new government work when his cant hook slipped, and he fell head foremost into the water. Messrs. Fox and Beardslee who were standing on the wharf at the time, at once rushed to the rescue; but while Mr. Fox was taking off his coat for a plunge, and Mr. Beardslee was making a mental survey of the crib, Captain Beauvais, brother of the unfortunate victim of slips, fished him out on the extreme point of a peevie hook. Dr. Crouter was at once sent for who gave it as his opinion that the rattling of the molars was only caused by the extreme freshness of the water. His friends however not being satisfied thought he should have spiritual consolation administered, and no clergyman being present, Amos Gillett kindly undertook the office, and so effectually that in the course of an hour our worthy citizen was restored to his usual health.

Railroad Notes.

The business men of Traverse City are eager for a railroad to Elk Rapids and will appoint a committee to meet the Rapids folks whenever they are ready for the fray. Elk Rapids will put up a bonus for a railroad, and it is only a question of who'll come for it first.—News.

In reply to our question, David Ward stated last week that the grading of his railroad from Alba to the Michigan Central was now completed to within six miles of Frederick. During the past winter the men in his camps have been engaged in getting out ties. It is not probable that the roadbed will be completed and ready for the iron before the latter part of October, as Mr. Ward is making no attempt to rush the work. Several spurs, or feeders to the main line will be constructed and this the men now employed by him will be kept at work some length of time, but as Mr. Ward is in no immediate hurry to complete the road, we doubt if the iron will be laid inside of a year or two at least.—Mancelona Herald.

Shall we Have a Regatta?

All interested in holding a three days' regatta at Charlevoix, commencing July Fourth, are requested to meet at the engineer's office in the Battars block, next Monday evening, at 7.30 sharp, to make necessary arrangements.

THE OFFICIAL FIGURES.

The Complete Vote of the County on State Officers and Amendments.

The following tables were intended for last week, but were unavoidable crowded out.

The only material change in the political complexion of the table is an increase of the prohibition vote. The greater portion of this increase was made in Evangeline, while South Arm, the usual prohibition stronghold, shows a material decrease.

In South Arm township, 59 votes were cast for Lawrence M. Mc-Keogh, labor candidate for justice of the supreme court, and 61 votes each for G. McAllister and E. P. Green, labor candidate for regents.

Before and After Election.

One of the manufacturers who made use of the bulldozing "pay envelopes" during the last campaign was P. K. Dederick, maker of lay presses, brick machines, etc., at Albion. Among the lies which appeared on these envelopes were the following:

The one issue of this campaign: Shall American wages or English wages be paid to our workingmen and workingwomen?

Shall American wages or English wages be paid to our workingmen and workingwomen?

A fac-simile of the envelope is now published by the Albany Evening Union in the same column with this interesting announcement:

It is now a little over a month since a protection President was inaugurated, and the Albany Press (dem.) of this morning contains the following:

"WAGES HEAVILY CUT."

"P. K. DEDERICK'S MEN MUST ACCEPT 22 PER CENT REDUCTION OR—OR."

"The woodworkers in the employ of P. K. Dederick, manufacturer of lay presses, brick machines, etc., have been notified that their wages will hereafter be 22 per cent lower than before. They have not been asked whether they like the reduction, it has simply been thrust upon them."

CATARRH.—Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the remedy is so simple a remedy has been furnished, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B. For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

Sufferers from catarrhal troubles should read the above carefully.

Harbor Springs.

From the Democrat.

It is about settled that the new depot will be erected on the small triangular strip near Roe's dock, the company being unable to secure a suitable site at what they consider a fair valuation.

Charley Roe made a trip to the Foxes Monday, taking over a portion of the machinery for their saw and shingle mill, and returned Wednesday. He will leave again with the first favorable breeze.

The boats are running regularly now, the Cyclone and Friant both begining the seasons Monday. This is the earliest opening of navigation on record, excepting the year when the bay was free from ice all winter.

Mrs. George Pattison, of Pleasantview, was seriously burned Tuesday, while fighting fire which was running through the orchard. Her clothing caught fire and before assistance could be rendered she was burned in a horrible manner. Dr. Burroughs was sent for and everything possible done to alleviate her sufferings. Her injuries, though serious, are not necessarily fatal.

A man working on the skidway Tuesday, unloading square timber, had about as close a call as a fellow could stand and come up smiling. The log on which he was standing rolled, and he went with it down the skidway to what seemed certain death, but just as the ponderous timbers were closing together he dropped between them, falling several feet striking upon his back, while the logs smashed together with a force which would have broken every bone in his body, and sent his cant-hook hustling through the air.

Easter Exercises.

The M. E. Church was handsomely decorated with flowers last Sunday morning, for the Easter services, which were held instead of the usual sermon. The program consisted of music, recitations, readings, etc., and was interesting throughout.

At the Baptist church Sunday evening, the Easter exercises were combined with the "chapel day" service. Every year a collection is taken for the benefit of the church building fund, to aid in building houses of worship for young societies not able to build for themselves. This contribution is made in the name of the Sunday school, and the service is called "chapel day" service. A program of music, recitations, readings, etc. made up the Easter service.

At the Congregational church in the morning there were recitations, music, and a short address appropriate to the day.

The School Entertainment a Success.

In less than half an hour after the opera house door was opened the hall was filled. And the large audience sat through the three hours entertainment without the least feeling of weariness. The program was made up of music, recitations, dialogues, etc. Nearly every selection was vigorously applauded and some were called out a second time. The musical selections were especially fine, and the recitations show that Charlevoix has the making of some good elocutionists. The dialogues were all especially well presented. While speaking of the scholars we must not fail to give a good share of the credit to Prof. Enos and his assistants. They have worked long and hard to make this entertainment a success, and they may rest assured that their efforts are appreciated.

Electric Bitters.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. Funeral of J. Reed Emrey.

The flag of the steamer Petoskey was at half-mast when she entered the harbor last Thursday evening, bearing the remains of J. Reed Emrey, whose death was announced in those columns last week. Accompanying the remains were Mrs. Emrey and one child, A. J. Emrey, of Manistee, and R. A. Emrey of Charlevoix, brothers of the deceased, and Mr Milmo of Jeanerette, La., business partner of Mr. Emrey's brother-in-law.

Mr. Emrey died on the train five hours before reaching Chicago. The end came quietly, peacefully, and while he was apparently sleeping.

The funeral services were held at the M. E. church Saturday morning, with Masonic ceremonies, Rev. W. H. McCartney preaching the sermon. Delegations of the Masonic order from Petoskey and East Jordan lodges were present.

From the church to the cemetery the procession was led by the Charlevoix cornet band, and was probably the most imposing in appearance of any funeral procession ever in Charlevoix.

Mr. Emrey was 33 years old. He had an insurance policy for $2,500 for the benefit of his family.

What it Costs.

We have always objected to such tremendous generalizations as our prohibition friends are in the habit of making when they publish such crushing statistics as "The Drink Bill of Old England," and "The Drink Bill of the United States." The facts are bad and startling enough, without including all the times that the liquor passes through a man's hands before it it goes between the lips.

We have, however, a more illustration of the comparative cost of real food and sloppy drink, by the cost of potatoes in the country this spring. Potatoes are ten cents a bushel, and beer is three cents a glass. One drink of whiskey buys a bushel of potatoes, or a pound of choicest beef. As to the real values, no wise man can have any other opinion than to prefer the food. The connection between alcohol and poverty is evident.

If potatoes were to rise in price ten-fold, they would still be cheaper than beer.—Church Times.

Social.

A social for the benefit of the Congregational church will be held at the house of Hon. John Nicholls, on Friday evening, April 26th, 1889. There will be an interesting program of music, charades and recitations, and it is hoped that everyone who enjoys a treat of this kind will avail themselves of this opportunity.

INDIANA BONDS INVALID.

Judge Hoadland, of the Circuit Court, Holds a Loan Used Last Issue Illegal.

The right of Indiana State officers to negotiate a loan of $700,000 on bonds issued under authority of an act of the last Legislature, has been passed upon by Judge Hoadland, of the Circuit Court at Indianapolis. He holds that the Legislature is confined within certain limits by the constitution, and that none of the conditions specified in the constitution and necessary to make a loan valid existed at the time the bonds were issued, and for this reason the proposed loan is unconstitutional. The loan was negotiated with the German Savings Bank of New York, which afterwards refused to carry out the agreement on the advice of its attorneys. The court holds that the defendants in the present suit are not future when the loan is made. If the decision is sustained in the Supreme Court, the $600,000 loan made two years ago is also unconstitutional. The German Savings Bank holds nearly all of these bonds.

OVERZEALOUS OFFICERS.

They Arrest the Wrong Man and Thereby Get Into Trouble.

The Sheriff of Lewis County, West Virginia, returned to Wheeling from Grand Forks, D. T., with the prisoner arrested there a few days since supposed to be Dick Dowell, who escaped from jail at Weston thirteen years ago on the eve of his execution for a double murder. Several hundred people gathered at the depot and it is thought they intended to lynch the prisoner had they identified him, but of the hundreds who had known Dowell not one identified the prisoner, and the shout went up "Let him loose. He is not the man." The arrested man gives his name as James Shelton, and says he is from Morrison, Tenn. He claims he can establish his identity, and says he will bring suit for false arrest when he returns to Dakota.

BOHEMIAN OATS IN IOWA.

A Marshalltown Judge Decides that Notes Given for Them Are Not Collectable.

The Bohemian oats case at Marshalltown, Iowa, which caused the entire time of the court for a week, has been finished, the jury finding for the defendant—the maker of the note. This was brought as a test case to see if the farmer who bought these high-priced oats and gave his note was compelled to pay. The court decides that he is not, as the contract was a gambling one and the notes are not collectable. This decision will bring happiness to many farmers in Iowa, as thousands of dollars are involved in it. The plaintiff will appeal.

TWO FOREIGN NEWS.

Lord Salisbury, it is said, will visit Prince Bismarck soon.

The French Tribunal of Commerce has entered a decree for the judicial liquidation of the Societe des Metaux.

Louis Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot, who is now at Turin, has suffered another relapse, and his life is despaired of.

It is said that the Vatican has employed Mgr. Persico almost exclusively in watching the condition of affairs in Ireland.

The rush at Paris for the Exhibition lottery bonds was so great that crowds have encamped in the streets all night in order to be ready for the sale. The subscriptions amounted to several times the value of the bonds.

Trying to Shut Out Yellow Fever.

The Florida State Board of Health has published regulations adopted for the guidance of county, town, and other officers. They authorize the destruction of infected property, enforce the house-to-house inspection once a month, compel the adoption of a sewerage system in all municipalities of 10,000 or more inhabitants, and provide for special monthly reports during May, June, July, August, September, and October. The regulations for quarantine and disinfection along the seaboard are all very strict, but the money at present available is insufficient to maintain the system thoroughly.

Awful Death of an Italian Laborer.

An unknown Italian laborer met with a terrible death in the sandstone quarry at Marquette, Mich. A large stone rolled slowly on to him, pinning his feet and passing gradually over the whole length of his body, crushing him flat from feet to head.

They Wanted to Die, and Did.

At Minneapolis, Minn., President Charles F. Hatch, of the Wisconsin, Minnesota and Pacific Railway, and P. F. Lockwood, a well-known real estate dealer, committed suicide. The latter a peculiar spiritual fellow, and Hatch's direct losses in wheat, are said to have caused the tragedies.

Recent Deaths.

Among the deaths reported are those of William A. Cole, of the New York Produce Exchange; Mrs. Anna M. Lyman, wife of Bishop Theodore Lyman, of Raleigh, N. C., and Allen C. Churchill, a prominent glove manufacturer of Gloversville, N. Y.

A 70-Year-Old Wife-Beater.

DEATH OF A CENTENARIAN.

M. Michel Eugene Chevreul Reaches a Remarkable Age.

M. Michel Eugene Chevreul, the distinguished French chemist, died in Paris.

M. Chevreul was born at Angers, Aug. 31, 1786. His father was nearly 100 years old at the time of his death. In 1830 he became proparator of the chemical museum of the Museum of Natural History, and in 1824 professor in the Lycee Charlemagne, and in 1826 in the Academy of Sciences, succeeding Fourcroy. In 1826 he became director of the dyeworks and professor at the Gobelins, where he made his celebrated researches on the nature of colors. In 1826 he became member of the Academy of Sciences and subsequently a member of the Royal Society of London. He contributed many learned papers to scientific societies, and delivered lectures till after the close of his first century, but for the last year or two he had been confined or engaged in bed home, and may be said to have been active almost to the end of his

IMPROVEMENT IN TRADE.

Dun's Agency Reports Better Business, Much Better Prospects.

In their review of trade for last week R. G. Dun & Co. said:

There are distinct signs of improvement in business. Reports from interior points, almost without exception, show a better feeling in trade. Liquid advances in sugar, coffee, cotton, butter, and oats are nearly all in favor of the trade, while wool and cotton goods, pork, petroleum, leather and other articles, so that the prospect for the future is much brighter than it has been for some time. But further disbursements by the Treasury have begun to be felt, the money market has improved and exports continue to increase, commercial news is the reverse of that of last April, and the failures for the week are less than March, and nearly 20,000 less than a year ago, larger than a year ago, although not so far as to be a production close to the large. Prices have advanced and are still advancing, cotton 1-16 cent, sugar 1-16 to 1-8 pounds in raw refinery for the best grades, and 1-8 cent for most of all grades in the trust stock. The best and most of the wheat is in the hands of speculators, whether it is sold or not, and lights are overabundant. Raw cotton is higher, and there are no large stocks of it, and the market has been very active, and prices have risen 1-16 cent. Pig iron is dull and at a shade in price, but there is no weakness, and the feeling is very decidedly improved, which will stiffen the demand when the iron and steel companies in combination with the settlements have passed. The reports of the iron and steel trade are more encouraging, and owing has progressed favorably, the orders being about twice as large as last year, and the prices have advanced about 10 per ton, as against a total of 222 the previous week.

RIDING ON A SKYROCKET.

The Peculiar Invention of a Man Formerly of the United States Navy.

Manager Robinson, of the International Exposition at Buffalo, N. Y., has secured a novel attraction, a human sky-rocket, the inventor of Mr. Edwin C. Calkins, Peru, formerly of the United States navy. His rocket has been successfully experimented with in South America, and a big hotel in Minneapolis has filed a caveat, claiming the exclusive right to use it for trip. The apparatus consists of a combination of rockets of immense power with a parachute attachment which folds over the apex. Four tubes form the framework containing the rockets. The pressure of the explosive is a secret and is called dynamomite. Its peculiar property is that it is detonating. A small volume of solid makes an immense volume of vapor and lifts any weight. An exhilarating sensation is the result. The test took place under Peruvian Government patronage near Callao in December. The charge, touched by electricity, sent the machine over 15,545 feet, and the descent by parachute was perfect. Sig. Camarara landed five miles from the starting point no worse for the trip. Fifty thousand people were present, and watched with telescopes the rise and fall of the machine. Mr. Edwin will be in Buffalo in a few days.

DECLARED NOT GUILTY.

The Slayer of Harry W. King, Jr., Acquitted at Omaha.

After five minutes deliberation at Omaha, Neb., the jury in the case of Elizabeth Hooker, who killed Harry W. King, Jr., of Chicago, returned a verdict of not guilty. When the words "not guilty" were announced a shout such as was never heard before in the Omaha court-room went up from almost every throat in the audience. Men mounted benches and swung their hats, women waved their handkerchiefs and wept. No attempt was made by the court officers to quiet the outbreak. Miss Boechler said to the jury, "All I can say is thank you; God will reward you." A delegation of ladies, many of whom were colored, congratulated her. She kissed all of them. One venerable colored woman took her in her arms and almost lifted her off her feet, as she cried: "God bless you, honey." When all who desired to had congratulated her, she was taken back to jail, where she lay down on her cot and soon fell asleep. She has been tendered, free of expense, elegant quarters at a prominent hotel while in Omaha, but will go to Cleveland, Ohio, where her mother lives.

HE SACRIFICED TO THE DEVIL.

A Religious Fanatic in Georgia Kills His 5-Year-Old Son as a Sacrifice.

Prince Law, a negro living on the Springfield plantation, five miles out of Savannah, Ga., killed his 5-year old son as a sacrifice to the devil. Law is crazy on religion. He became convinced that it was his duty to kill some member of his family, and he drove his wife from home and took his child to death on the doorstep with a piece of scantling. Law was arrested, and is a raving maniac in jail.

OF IMPORTANCE TO FARMERS.

Users of Spring Teeth Harrows May Have to Pay Royalty.

Bement & Sons, of Lansing, Mich., have secured control of the original patents for the longitudinal adjustment of the teeth harrows. These patents have been infringed upon for years by agricultural implement manufacturers, and the firm has already begun suits in the United States District Courts against Lawrence & Chapin and Chase, Henry & Co., of Kalamazoo, Mich., Ira S. Rich & Co., of Canandaigua, N. Y. Suits will be begun against all other infringers as speedily as possible, whether manufacturers, dealers or users. The action is of decided importance to the farming interest, as it is estimated that over 100,000 spring teeth harrows with the adjustable longitudinal attachments are in use, and the users may be compelled to pay royalty.

WINTER WHEAT.

Report of the Agricultural Department for April.

The April crop report of the Agricultural Department at Washington, D. C., says the general average condition of winter wheat is 84, nearly the same as the April condition of the crop of 1886, which left at harvest to 87.8; that of 1885, 82, and that of the previous year 88.1. The April condition of the large crop of 1884 was 95.4, going up to 98 at harvest. The present condition by principal States is: New York, 94; Pennsylvania, 92; Maryland, 97; Kentucky, 97; Ohio, 88; Michigan, 87; Illinois, 92; Missouri, 90; Kansas, 96; California, 98. The condition in the Southern States ranges from 80 to 97. The rye crop is also in good cond——dition better than that of wheat in Ohio and Michigan and worse in Missouri, with slight differences in other States. The general average is 93.9.

THE COMPTOIR DESCOMPTE.

Reorganization of the Great French Financial Company.

The London Times says: "The new Comptoir d'Escompte of Paris will be a concession on the lines of the old concern. The capital will be 200,000 francs, half paid up, and exclusively offered to the French capitalists. There will also be 60,000 founders shares entitled to 30 per cent of the profits after a 6 per cent is deducted for a reserve. Twenty shares will be handed to the liquidators as a contribution to the old company, and there remaining 21,000 will be handed to the State as a bonus for its guarantee of a minimum of 50,000, has been organized. It will open for business about the 1st April, and expects to be the first bank in Oklahoma Territory.

Presidential Appointments.

President Harrison has made the following appointments: Frank Plumly, of Vermont, to be United States Marshal for the District of Vermont; George A. Knight, of Texas, to be United States Marshal for the Northern District of Texas; Leo E. Bennet, of Indian Territory, to be agent of the Indians in the Territory; and James Dowdell, of Dakota, to be Register of the Land Office at Huron, D. T.

Phenomenal Strikes of Gas.

Specials from Findlay and Tiffin, in the natural gas belt of Ohio, report phenomenal strikes of gas. At Findlay two wells were struck, Onehas a capacity of 3,000,000 feet, and the other of 1,000,000 feet. At Tiffin the pressure of an old well increased suddenly, blowing out its casing, and a well and bursting pipes in a factory which was at the maximum, whatever the number of inhabitants may be, shall be entitled to one representative in the general assembly for every full fractional section thereof in excess of 50 inhabitants, under the provisions of the preceding section, and be proceeded by the Secretary of State to apportion such representatives among the counties, districts and towns in the manner following, to wit: Section 1. Be it enacted, that the following-named counties, districts and towns are entitled to representatives in the general assembly of Michigan, for the year 1889, and for the succeeding two years, to wit: Section 2. The counties, districts and towns entitled to representatives shall be represented by the number of representatives set opposite their respective names, to wit: Section 3. He Got Away With It.

A short old man in a long gray board yesterday arrived at Christmas through Fulton market noon and stopped at a stand of grapes were displayed. "Have you any?" he asked, pointing to open baskets of Concords, Catawbas and Malagas. "Yes, sir," replied the fruit vender, who was busy at the moment with a customer, now short man's actions with "How much for grapes?" he asked, laconically, eating a few. "Forty cents a basket." "Too much," said the man, walking away two more Concords. "Are you a wholesale dealer?" "No." "Own a vineyard, then?" "No." "Where did you learn to talk?" "Down in Dover's Jersey." "Well, see here, old friend, I'ts about a pound and a half of grapes, and I'll tie that basket for 40 cents." "Well, I'll do it, but I'm sorry; we don't want to go around here." —New York Sun.

GROVER CLEVELAND has purchased a cottage, containing 12 rooms, on Broadway, White Plains, near New York city.

The Clark thread works, Newark, N. J., the employe of which are striking, has closed down. They will be starved into accepting a 15 per cent reduction.

It is amusing to see the scoulled independent or neutral country newspapers flop back into the republican ranks. With four years of republican administration ahead, they seem to think that will be most profitable.

POSTMASTER George Washington of Bay City has been bounced. The democrats left the republican postmaster in the office until his time expired, though he was such a trenchcrous ass that the republicans themselves tried to bounce him and this is what they got in return.—Cheboygan Democrat.

DR. THOMPSON, a democrat, was elected school inspector at Traverse City, last week by two majority, and Alfred Fredrich also a democrat, came within 12 votes of election. This is an unheard of thing in that place and causes the Herald to pipe and remark to the effect that this fool voting will hurt somebody yet.—Cheboygan Democrat.

"PRESIDENT HARRISON recently declared that partisanship would have no effect to remove present incumbents of office so long as they did their duties efficiently. In other words removals will not be made for political causes."—Cheboygan Tribune. That reads well as a theory, but is in fact a delusion and a snare. The republicans of Charlevoix alleged only "offensive partisanship" against the Charlevoix postmaster, and secured his removal in short order.

Republican rule is getting to be synonymous with minority rule. The party has the president, though the democrats got nearly 100,000 more of the popular vote. It has the governor in Connecticut, though the democratic candidate polled 1,400 more votes. It has now secured all the state officers, save one, in Rhode Island, though the democrats polled 3,500 more votes than the republicans. And it holds the legislature in New York, a state which has gone democratic seven times in succession.—New York World.

NEW YORK CITY last week borrowed $6,000,000 at only 2½ per cent interest, selling her bonds at a premium of 1 per cent above par, and received bids for $1,500,000 more money than she wanted. This illustrates the truth of what we said some time ago. There is lots of money in the country but it is not in circulation, as it is monopolized by the few. The holders of money can't invest it in business or manufacturing, for nearly all lines are monopolized, and stock in monopolies fostered by the tariff is not for sale. The congestion of business and the scoundrelly management of the railroads is driving one after another of the roads into bankruptcy, railroad stocks and bonds are not to be thought of as securities. The poverty of the farmers and small holders of real estate even real estate mortgage to the amount of 4 each value of property hearthrobs, and the interest uncertain, for farmers can't pay interest on mortgages, let alone paying the principle, and sooner or later the man who loans the money will have to take the property which is depreciating every day. The protected manufactures have innumerable rings with in rings, each of which skins the people. Small manufacturers are driven to the wall by the trusts, small shop keepers cannot compete with the big dealers who have millions of capital and can get unlimited means at 5 per cent while small dealers have to pay 10 and 12 per cent for money. Notwithstanding our magnificent resources and opportunities the United States are to day less prosperous than England or France. How long will the people continue to vote for protection for monopoly, that hoards all the money the Shylocks don't get in the United States treasury, takes away the life blood of business and makes them the helpless victim of the money sharks and monopolists.—Democrat.

A Warning to Pennsylvania.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie has been visiting the south, and he expresses admiration and surprise at the strides it is making in the manufacture of iron and its products. The southern plants, he says, are excellent; but blast furnaces have all the modern improvements; so has the mine machinery; the coal, iron-ore, and limestone are better than he expected to find; the ease and cost of mining are all superior; her ability to manufacture at the lowest figures must give the southern manufacturers a large market for their pig-iron; finally he says he regards the south as "the most formidable industrial enemy of Pennsylvania in the future."

And, indeed, if Mr. Carnegie's figures are to be relied on, Pennsylvania will have to look to her iron laurels, against which a protective tariff will not avail to shield her; that is, unless the constitution shall be amended, on the plea of the absolute necessity of preserving the iron industry of the Keystone state from utter annihilation.

Thus, Mr. Carnegie says that $10 a ton for foundry iron—the highest grade—produced in Alabama is a liberal estimate. He adds: "With good management, and for a series of years, some of the best-located and best-managed furnaces may be able to do even better than this figure."

Now, when we consider that the Pennsylvania iron men declare they cannot profitably operate their works at a less rate of protection against the foreign product than $6.75 a ton, these figures of Mr. Carnegie must prove little short of startling to them; and for the very excellent reason that $10 a ton for Alabama is less than the present price of pig-iron in Great Britain. The latest quotations for pig-iron in that country are $10.75 to $12 a ton.

So that this southern state is now able to produce pig iron at a less price than Great Britain and therefore needs no protection as against the foreign product.

In view however, of such a totally unexpected contingency as these facts develop, what is to become of the industry in Pennsylvania? Even with Congressman Pig Iron Kelly to the rescue, the lookout for the coal and iron barons of the great Keystone state will prove blue enough.—Chicago News.

No "Miserly Stinginess."

New York World: The policy of surplus-spending outlined in president Harrison's address is promptly and thoroughly indorsed by the chief republican organ of the city.

"Miserly stinginess is not economy," says the Tribune. "Nor is it a trait beloved by the American people. In their sober thinking, voters realized that a necessity for postponing any outlay that is really wise or needful has passed."

This opens a charming prospect before the tax payers. The expenditures of the government for the current year will reach the enormous sum of $423,000,000. The pension list has grown from $35,000,000 to $82,000,000, or more than double, since fourteen years after the close of the war, when it would naturally have begun to diminish. This is not much like "miserly stinginess." The population of the United States has doubled since 1880. The ordinary expenses of the government have within this period increased more than fourfold. Does this look like "miserly stinginess?" Within ten years the appropriations for the war department have increased $8,000,000, for the navy $5,000,000, and for other things in proportion. Where are the indications of "miserly stinginess" here?

The surplus revenue above even these most extravagant appropriations is over $100,000,000. And this the president evidently thinks, and the republican organ agrees, it is "the part of wisdom" to spend also, the new "campaign of education" opens early.

J. T. Kirkpatrick is rushing the work on the new shingle mill. The frame is up, the roof is on, and it is now expected that two machines will be in operation in about three weeks. A fire extinguisher will be put in, go, and will bring the boiler, engine, and other machinery on her return. The dock is completed, and the company have timber for over five million shingles. They will rush things this season.

An exchange says there are more young men in the penitentiary in this country learning trades than there are outside of them. The principle cause of this is that we are educating our young men for life gentlemen, trying to make lawyers, preachers, doctors and clerks out of material that is needed for blacksmiths, carpenters, merchants, and honest men of wood and drawers of water." It is a mistake, and a big one, to teach our boys and girls that labor is disgraceful, and do nothing for a living is more becoming to society. Hints such society! It is rotten to the core and is ruining our country to day; and there are sons and daughters who are now being educated to play the "leading lady" and "walking gentlemen" in the drama of life, who will light out for the poor house or penitentiary before the curtain falls on the last act of the play to which they have been educated by their too indulgent parents.

SOME EASTER CUSTOMS.

A DAY CELEBRATED ALL OVER THE CHRISTIAN WORLD.

Flower-Decorations, Nest-Hunting, and Other Easter Diversions—A Pretty Poem and an Entertaining Story.

Forget-Me-Not: An Easter Poem.

Christ is risen, good Friday is past,
And joy has come after forty days' fast;
The resurrection is for rich and poor,
For young and old, for evermore.

To enjoy springtime's beaming hours,
To gather some lovely flower,
The people go forth at early morn,
Each one bringing a gift on the altar to lay,
For this is the holy Easter day.

But see! a little child with tearful eyes,
Her little heart breaking with pitiful cries;
"My little one, why are your eyes full of tears?
Come, darling, and tell me all your fears."

Oh, father! I, too, sought my offering; but "Forget me not" was a single forget-me-not.
"There, there, be quiet! the Lord helps in need,
He knows thy heart and takes the will for the deed.
Thy pure love, my little tot,
Is the dear Lord's forget-me-not."

Thus speaks the father, but the child weeps
Still more;
And pining, draws him one more to the door,
They meet again up and down the lane,
But spring is only barely awake.

Now, as they return at the close of day,
They meet an old beggar lame by the way;
Mirthfully his hazel eyes shine out
"Take pity, my child, and forget me not."

The child looks up with a smile and a tear,
As the flowers true meaning come to her ear;
She clasps from her neck a chain of gold,
And gives it to him with pure delight.

The chain was of tiny, golden beds,
Each holding its flower, like the fairest emeralds,
"They fought me," she says, "cruel I had forgot,
Thou like poor man is the Lord Jesus Christ."

The child became queen of great renown,
And found—poor child!—adorn her crown,
For to hundreds she gave their daily food,
Maria Theresa, the great and good.

Easter Customs.

HE sacred festival of Easter has been appropriately termed "the queen of festivals." It has been observed from the foundation of the Christian religion, and is celebrated in every part of the Christian world with great solemnity and devotion.

The flower decorations of the Roman, of the Eugenian, and of the Greek churches on Easter Day excel those of any other nation, but the keen amusement of preparing the Easter egg has not yet become universal, and is not nearly as pretty as the nest-hunting as described in our Easter story. Again, the gathering of wild flowers for an Easter offering, which is practiced everywhere in the southern part of Europe, and which our poem "Forget-me-not" so beautifully describes, is certainly an admirable idea.

A few years ago the writer had the pleasure of preparing an Easter egg hunt at a young ladies' academy on the Hudson. It was a bright cold day, and all that nature could afford for the occasion were branches of aborvitæ and a few of arbutus. These were quickly woven over fine wire into delicate little nests, then eggs were blown and by the dozen and on each a pretty Easter greeting was written and was tied into the nest with a delicate satin ribbon, which was attached to a prettily decorated Easter card in the form of a cross. After the nests had been well secreted in every nook and corner of the building, the young ladies were invited to begin their hunt. While they were rummaging a rustic table was laid, that is, instead of a cloth it was spread with green branches. On these were placed eggs, prepared in every conceivable manner. There were boiled, scrambled, fried, broiled, poached, stewed, baked, pouned, scalloped, curried, and pickled eggs. In the center was a huge egg cake built of Easter cake cut in strips, and in the center was a cordial invitation that the one who had been fortunate enough to find a nest should be the queen.

Now the fun began. Most had found two or three, others had not found any, the latter were not entitled to seats at the table, and the former were not willing to give them the prizes demanded. Finally they agreed that the unsuccessful Diana should pay a dime for her nest; then the nests were equally distributed and about one dollar and fifty cents was collected for the prize. After the refreshments the young ladies adjourned to a room and had a good, real good time, and they unanimously declared that they had never seen an Easter like this before. We will close this description by giving our readers a few lines from a long Easter egg:—For bright red, boil down in cranberry juice; for bright yellow, boil them with onion skins; for blue or purple, use the juice of preserved plums or black cherries; for bright green, wrap them in spinach leaves. The old-fashioned method of boiling them wrapped in bright calico is very satisfactory.

The Living Easter Egg.

BY MRS. A. T. WALLACE.

LL of you run, now, and seek to your hearts' content, among the gooseberry bushes, behind the large trees, in the arbor, and away out on the meadow. But, children! but keep peace. Whoever finds an egg may eat it, but he who will's another seek in the same place. Begins to quarrel over the found egg, will be punished, and goes empty, and, above all, he will not receive the Easter cake.

It was a noble peasant woman who spoke thus, and those whom she addressed were two girls of the age of 7 and 10 and two little boys, one 12 and the other 4 years old.

When the last syllable had passed her lips, the little crowd, which had been kept in the house all winter, rushed out-doors and rummaged under the branches of all the bushes and in the tall grasses.

Easter that year had fallen unusually late; therefore the gardens and fields displayed the colors of spring.

The leaves of the gooseberry and currant bushes began to peep out and warm themselves in the rays of the April sun. Apple and plum trees were strewed in their white and rosy blossoms, and the air was balmy opened by thousands their buds under white calyx and the lark thrilled a joyful resurrection song.

"I found it," triumphantly called a voice from the corner of the garden, and the youngest girl, with beaming countenance, crept from under the gooseberry bush, in the thick branches of which she had discovered a bright, speckled Easter egg. Her little brother, whose search had been rewarded, ran to the place of his sister, called, "Yo, yo, I have found yours!" and, three yo, one under the bush, and, hurrah! throw I see two behind the dog house."

"GOOD OLD FATHER CLAUDIUS HAS FOUND A LIVING EASTER EGG."

Then the other little girl cried: "See this beautiful blue egg. I found it in the elder bushes."

Only the youngest of the boys stood with a sad face, just ready to cry; his large black eyes staring into the "nest" in his little hands full of "nothing." He said plaintively: "Hans finds nothing and can not find nothing."

"Because Hans does not seek earnestly," said the youngest girl, taking him gently by the hand. "Come with me; I will help you hunt."

She led him away back of the garden, where the old willow trees branched the meadows. Meanwhile the peasant woman, taking her leave, called after them: "Be good, my children, be good, and forget me not."

The peasant woman nodded, and after a while, pause the story continued.

"Claudius was known to be a sworn enemy to the French and their pernicious Emperor; but his son Frederic, contrary to his father's wishes, joined the Italian regiment of Napoleon, and became a vivacious captain. They had had many a hard fight on the subject, and the old man had sworn that if his son ever came home again, he would disinherit him, choosing his own country he joined the French, and even with the Italian beauty, with the request that, if possible, the child should be brought home to him.

"Well, as the day of the rebellion drew nigh, and the fortunes of the French began to waver, the old man was delighted with his son's letter, in which he stated that he would come home, and, if possible, bring his bride with him. The old man almost died with grief, but he could not stop himself, and had to submit Charlevoix, Mich., April 25, 1889.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Ironton.

APRIL 23.—In spite of the prophesies to the contrary our pleasant weather still continues. The birds are singing, frogs have commenced their nightly carols, and everything looks as though spring was here in earnest.

We were misinformed in regard to the quarterly meeting being held on Saturday and Sunday last, but will be held one week from that date.

James Allen has taken the contract of the P. L. I. Co. for loading their wood on the scows at 25 cents per cord. He commenced his job Tuesday last.

The Company have men at work blowing out stumps with dynamite cartridges, and last Saturday a small boy in quest of knowledge was examining one of the cartridges when it exploded, blowing off both of his thumbs and one finger. This should be a warning to the rest of the boys.

Malcomb McDonald has rented R. Miller's building on the west side of the ferry and will move his stock of goods into it.

Mr. Parker has commenced clearing the ground on his farm opposite Ironton preparatory to building a house and barn. He will clear up the lower terrace leaving only the evergreens standing, which will make quite an improvement in the looks of the place.

A lady from East Jordan has organized a singing school in Ironton, and is held four nights a week in the I. E. church. We have joined the class and have great hopes of being able to sing some of these days.

The Munson hotel is receiving a new coat of paint.

It is reported on good authority that Ed. Jackson has the postoffice at Ironton.

Advance.

APRIL 23.—Fred Smith is building an addition to his house.

Peter Karlskin expects a new stock of boots and shoes soon.

A. B. Steele contemplates building an addition to his store.

Improvements that have been made in the Plater's saw mill makes it one of the best mills on Pine Lake.

David Willis having purchased the George Smith property has moved the house and is building an addition to it.

Geo. Wood has got his new house painted and it is unquestionably the nicest farm house in this part of the county.

The young folks turned out and surprised John Lloyd and wife last Saturday night.

John Healey expects his wife home soon from Ann Arbor, where she has been since last fall.

The Clara Belle commenced making regular trips between Boyne City and Charlevoix last Monday.

The Ada of South Arm, loaded with potatoes for P. B. Newton last week, and will take them to the north shore. She took about 800 bushels and will be here again soon for another load.

Rider Haggard has left John Healey's and has gone in search of Jumbo.

Ed. Phillips is on the sick list again. Dr. DeLacy is attending him.

Itch, Mange, and Scratches

On human or animals cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. This never fails. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co., Druggists, Charlevoix. 3m9

Inwood.

APRIL 24.—Pastures are looking very green.

Mr. Lucien Pearl's family of Norwood, were the guests of O. D. Hilton on Sunday.

Henry Vandusen has moved back on his farm; Geo. Miller having vacated.

The Sunday school at Hilton's school house was started last Sunday with the following officers: Superintendent, Oland Weed; assistant superintendent, Jimmie McGeogh; secretary, Roswgen Bolton; treasurer, Lillie McGeogh. The school is to be carried on through the summer, meeting every Sunday at 1 30 p. m.

Wilson.

Rainy.

Mill shut down on April 20.

Supervisor Hudkins is assessing property.

Edward S. Brintnall starts for Oklahoma today.

The Sunday school interest at Afton increases. Thirty three were present on Sunday last.

J. R. Yance took a trip to Pleasant Valley on Monday last.

Eld. Scofield preached at the school house at 11.30 on Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Worden of Paradise Hill, were guests at Geo. Bowen's on Sunday.

Trailing arbutus has been found, but in small quantities. It is rather early for that beautiful flower.

Miss Mamie Pearsall has commenced school in the Sedgeman district on Monday morning.

Ed. Nowland raised a barn on Tuesday last; Albert Todd builder. By the way, Albert has a good reputation as a builder which many an older carpenter might envy.

Atwood.

APRIL 22.—Seeding is well along in this section.

D. Stebbins purchased a horse team of G. VanPelt last week.

Gilbert LeClair has a bran new buggy. Now girls.

John Greenman has bought a yoke of oxen of O. D. Wood.

A tightener pully was cracked in D. Flannigan's shingle mill Saturday.

E. W. Coulter is at work for Mr. Nash at Norwood.

J. Seymour has taken thirty-five acres of land to work on shares of Mr. Jolliffe.

Mr. Byers, has a new seed drill and says it works to perfection.

FOSTER SAFE IN MEXICO.

The Absconding Granville Fund Trustee Beyond Extradition with $150,000.

Information has been received at the New York Produce Exchange that William Henry Foster, Jr., the absconding attorney for the Trustees of the Granville fund, is in Mexico, where he cannot be extradited. Foster fled on Sept. 27 last, after defrauding the Granville Fund of $150,000 by means of fake mortgages. His father has since paid to the trustees $30,000, the amount which would have gone to his son under his will. Foster seems to be assured of his security in Mexico, for he has communicated with some of the members of the exchange. A nonresident representing the trustees will go to Bayport and take an inventory of Foster's property. It is valued at between $30,000 and $60,000. There is a reward of $5,000 for Foster's arrest.

STRUCK DEAD BY LIGHTNING.

Several Persons in Connecticut Killed in a Furious Electrical Storm.

Several persons were killed and many others injured by lightning during a severe thunder storm near Danbury, Conn. While the family of Lucinda Adams, of Trinity Lake, was at supper the house was struck by lightning and the entire family rendered unconscious. Mrs. Adams, when regaining consciousness, was horrified to find two of her family dead and the rest terribly injured. The house was also set on fire. Noah Adams, a relative, was horribly burned and instantly killed by the bolt. A daughter of Mr. Adams was also instantly killed and her body terribly mutilated. The neighbors succeeded in dragging the unconscious people from the burning building.

Died of Rabies.

Solomon Sheaf, a young farmer in Parke County, Ohio, died in terrible agony from hydrophobia. He was bitten in February, but no one thought the dog was mad. The other day he became ill while at his field plowing. He went to the house and told his wife he thought he had hydrophobia. He grew worse and had severe spasms. In these he would attempt to bite everything near him, making a noise something like the barking of a dog, and frothing at the mouth. He was then handcuffed and tied with ropes to keep him from doing himself bodily harm or injuring others. The same dog also bit a boy by the name of Myers. He is sick and shows almost the same symptoms that Sheaf did.

They Can't Organize.

The application of the Hamilton County Saloonkeepers' Association for incorporation has been denied by Secretary of State Ryan, of Ohio, on the ground that the objects for which the association was organized—i. e., the antagonism of the liquor laws of Ohio—is unlawful and not to be encouraged. The Secretary announces that he will incorporate no body proposing to subvert State government, and organized for the sole purpose of raising funds to fight the laws already on the statute books. He has sworn to support the best interests of the people and public policy.

Kansas—Fred Louis, Marion; William March, Eureka; Perry Davis, Fort Riley; Augustus Wagner, Leavenworth.

Nebraska—Jacob Sisson, Clinton; Peter Shurr, Joliet.

SUN & CO.'S WEEKLY REPORT.

Trade Centers Generally Reported a Steady Improvement—Heavy Wheat Surplus.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s review of trade for last week is as follows:

Most of the indications usually considered of value point to a steady improvement in the business of the country. Some of these may be thought to profile. Crop prospects brighten daily, and though the result is largely dependent upon favorable weather, yet failures in some important branches of industry, and the fact that prices are advancing, while stocks of cotton and leather interests are embarrassed by production above the demand, and weather affected trade in many parts of the country, yet wheat and cotton are the principal products, and coal and coal affect business in many lines, but average for all grades and qualities nearly low lower. The overproduction of cotton goods, and the fall in price of the staff, which is produced by the demand for finished products, since the opening of the year, is more and larger than in any previous year. But the depression in price, which has been accompanied by a decline in the cost of the raw material, has not checked production, and the excess of production undoubtedly has been greatly in excess of the demand, and the result is progressing fairly, with a consumption a little larger than last year, and stocks a little larger than a year ago. The export of cotton goods is fair, and probable demands, which seems likely to be not in excess of those of the month of July, is sufficient to cause depression in stock. The general average of prices is a little lower than last week, and the business done somewhat smaller, as against last previous week.

THE FRUIT CROP.

Probable That the Yield of Apples Will Be Less Than Last Year.

The fruit and vegetable prospects of the whole country, summarized from reports of reliable correspondents in the several States, are:

Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Tennessee, Texas, and Mississippi furnish very full and complete reports. The peach crop will be the largest ever produced in the South, being alive at this time in every State in the Union, and the season being now so far advanced that it is safe to say that the West and South and, although too early to safely predict a full yield in the East, a good one is anticipated. At most points in the Northwest, on Apple-growers, the crop of apples will be a little larger than last year, but very, leaving the off year for the great crop of the big shipping points, notably western New York, a season that can find every market in the country when a full crop is gathered. The crop of pears will be very large, and of plums, the yield larger than that of 1888, which was the highest in many years. The pear crop will be large, through the great peach growing region of Ohio. The grape crop in the West and South promises a very large yield, and in Northern Ohio the yield of grapes has been inflicted. Nearly double the yield of last year is looked for. In Ohio and the great grape growing regions in New York and Pennsylvania the crop will be considerably larger than last year, other small fruits will be large, being at many points rather neglected. The yield of vegetables is good in all portions of the country and the yield promises to be large.

IN THE FURY OF FLAMES.

New York Visited by the Fiercest Fire Ever Known.

The biggest and fiercest fire New-Yorkers have witnessed in this generation swept the east bank of the North River clear from Fifty-ninth street to that what would be Sixty-fifth street if that street ran to the river. It destroyed more than $1,500,000 worth of property belonging to the New York Central Railroad, and a great quantity of lard, flour, and the like, belonging to other persons, notably N. K. Fairbank, the great Chicago lard merchant. The flames destroyed the two big elevators, "A" and "B," of the Vanderbilt system; a big brick building stretching from Fifty-ninth street to Sixtieth street, and occupied jointly by the Fairbank Lard Refinery and the Rossiter stores, and wiped out the dock property of the New York Central system from Fifty-ninth to past Sixty-fifth street. At least one man was killed in his headlong flight from the fire. A score more were injured jumping from the windows and falling from the burning. The following list includes the killed and injured so far as is known: Herr Bunsing, John Johnson, Charles Brown, William J. Noble, and Edward H. Tobin. The financial loss will be about $2,635,000, largely covered by insurance.

PENSION RULINGS.

Three Decisions of Importance to Old Soldiers.

Assistant Secretary Bussey has rendered three important decisions in cases involved the important question of when may a soldier or sailor be considered "in the line of duty." They are as follows:

The first case is that of W. H. Beckenshaw, of Company A, Ninety-fifth Ill. He was in charge of a detachment, jumpin, on shoulder his gun, and marching to the place where he was ordered to do picket duty, when the accidental discharge of his gun occurred, the claimant was in the place, ready to do picket duty, and in line of duty. Assistant Secretary Bussey holds that the injury alleged as the ground of pension happened in the Department of the Ohio, and that the claimant was in line of duty. H. Sedgwick, late of Company A, Ninth Ill., was in charge of a detachment of men, and was engaged in drilling and teaching. The assistant secretary sustains the claimant's contention that he was in line of duty on the ground that the claimant contributed directly to the efficiency of his command, and that the duties of the officer in charge constituted a violation of the rules of the service. The case of Mr. Ward, late of Company A, Ninth Ill., a soldier who died in the Andersonville prison, was also in line of duty, the soldier having contracted the disease which caused his death while in the service, for being absent from his company and regiment without authority, and in the hands of the enemy, and he is entitled to a pension, the widow, the children, or the dependent father, as the case may be, to be presumed connected, as a result, with the compliance by the soldier with the requirements of the service, and a connection between the fatal disease and the service to be presumed in the case.

SAVED FROM THE WATERS.

Passengers and Crew of the Danmark Taken Off by the Missouri.

All of the passengers and crew of the Danmark were saved. Mr. Raben, the first officer, was the among them, reports that on April 4 the Danmark's shaft broke. The next day the disabled steamer met the Missouri, bound out from London, March 26, for Philadelphia and Baltimore. The Missouri towed the Danmark until the 6th, when the latter was abandoned as the wheel to sink. At first the Missouri had taken on board the entire property of the Danmark's passengers, but after having thrown overboard a portion of her cargo she found accommodations for all the crew and passengers of the Danmark. The Missouri then proceeded to the Azores and lost there the first and second officers and 20 passengers, she then continued her journey to Philadelphia. Pa., with 340 passengers and the remainder of the crew, where she arrived safely. On Saturday, the three engineers of the Danmark left the Azores for London. The crew of the Danmark was about 300 miles from Newfoundland when the accident happened.

MYSTERIOUS WOMAN IN BLACK.

She Haunts the Vicinity of the Jail Where Her Husband Is Confined.

A woman in black haunts the Jackson (Mich.) Jail and makes frequent attempts to see Latimer, the accused murderer. She refuses to give her name and her identity is unknown. She is a brunette and is always concealed beneath a heavy black veil. Most prominent and reliable people have met her and have neighborhood talk on her account. She says nothing to anyone, and her object in patrolling the neighborhood is a mystery that creates no end of gossip. Some have guessed that she is an enemy of Latimer and others that she is his friend, but no one has said all along would prove an alibi for him.

THEATRICAL PEOPLE DUPED.

A Bogus Press New York Collects Money for an Alleged Charitable Society.

A man who represents himself as Rev. Joseph Kingsley has been distributing subscriptions in New York City, for, he claimed, St. Mary's Orphan Asylum, at Leavenworth, Kansas. He exhibited a certificate which purported to come from Bishop Fink, of Leavenworth. It seems clear that he is a bogus priest. He has been arrested, and says his name is James Reynolds. He was a peddler, and recently went to New York from Ohio. By his swindling scheme it is said that he has picked up several thousand dollars. Among those he has swindled are Barker Dazzen Kelly, John McCaull, A. M. Palmer, and Ada Rehan.

THE TWO DAKOTAS.

Gov. Mellette Issues His Proclamation for the Division of the Territory.

Gov. Mellette, of Dakota, has issued his proclamation covering the two Dakotas in the matter of distributing the inchoate states for the election of delegates to the Constitutional Convention, and for the operation of Congressional enactment at Bismarck and Sioux Falls respectively, on the 4th of July. The districts were created upon the basis of last year's vote, and the work was accomplished with the utmost harmony. All of the Commission, Governor, Secretary, and Chief Justice.

A Promising Outlook.

Detailed reports from all the wheat states show that the prospects are encouraging about half the wheat produced in Minnesota and Dakota have been received at St. Paul. At 190 stations good to excellent condition of the ground is reported, thirty consider it fair, while only ten rate it as not good. The percentage of crop planted is equal to or above last year, and the acreage will also exceed last season, only thirteen stations reporting any decrease, while 102 have increased their acreage. The fly spell is broken.

France Will Tax Adulterated Lard.

The United States consul at Havre, under date of April 4, informs the State Department at Washington, D. C., that from and after May 1, a duty of 60 cents per hundred pounds net will be levied on all imports into France of lard mixed with cottonseed oil, irrespective of the percentage of such mixture, and that all lard imported from the United States will be subject to governmental examination.

Foreign News Notes.

The Paris tribunal has ordered the liquidation of the Panama Canal Company to compensate discharged employes.

M. Nunnaghy, the author of "Mlle. Rescalme," has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment at Paris, and M. Savine, the publisher of the book, to three months' imprisonment and to pay 3,000 francs fine and 5,000 francs damages for libeling ex-Minister Baynal.

Broke Jail and Fled.

The prisoners at the jail of St. Joseph de la Beauce, a town about half way between Montreal and Quebec, Can., revolted and shot and seriously wounded Jailer Chouinard and sergeant Harpe of the provincial police, overpowered, bound and horribly maltreated three of their keepers and then five of the desperate convicts made good their escape.

A Finicky Banker.

At London, Ont., as Frank Clarke was sitting alone in the sitting room of his father, Clarke, two men entered, and one, presenting a revolver, demanded his money. Clarke seized the pistol and turned it aside. He grappled with the two men, and the one attempted a second shot, but Clarke threw them off and turned it aside.

The Drama.

Lotta played to large houses last week at Detroit in Charles Gounod's "Sibyria," Bartley Campbell's spectacular and sensational play, is the attraction this week. Lotte follows in Gounod's opera next new play, "Two Sisters," will appear. Modjeska's farewell tour is promised for the first time in Chicago by Manager McVicker the coming summer.

Epidemic Among Sundanese.

A force of Sundanese attacked and defeated a party of Egyptians from Suakin near Sinkat, killing 300 of the Egyptians. The Egyptians lost ten killed and wounded. They were forced to take to refuge on the steamer Agami and have returned to Suakin.

Base-Ballists Banqueted.

The returning base-ballists were accorded a great reception in Chicago on the 19th inst. They were received at the depot, and a procession escorted them to the Palmer House, where they were entertained at a royal banquet.

Opposing the Jesuits.

At a meeting of citizens, last, a resolution was adopted calling for the disallowance of the Jesuits act and saying that if Jesuit intrigues do not cease their expulsion will be demanded.

Big Jewelry Failure in New York.

Goodman & Rosenberger, jewelers at 21 Maiden lane, have closed up on attachment for $8,270, with $60,000 debts and small assets.

A Buffalo Tragedy.

At Buffalo Thomas Dominguez, a Spaniard, killed his wife with a razor, after desperate struggle, and then cut his throat. Two little children survive.

From Far and Near.

An election was held at Angolier, Ind., to settle the contest of the postmastership, and resulted in the election of R. L. Schlotterbeck.

Rose Herer, 20 years of age, employed at the Lutz hotel in Wabash, Ind., died with symptoms of poisoning. An investigation has been ordered.

Mrs. Samuel Rigert committed suicide at Independence, Mo. She left two small children. Despondency because of ill-health and poverty caused the act.

THE NATION'S GROWTH.

FORTY-TWO STATES NOW COMPRISE THE UNION'S GALAXY.

How Star After Star Has Been Added to the Flag—Historical Facts Not Generally Known—The Union As It Was and Now Is—Interesting Data.

FACTS of the Union, on March, 1789, when George Washington was inaugurated, only eleven States were represented in the Congress which had adopted the Constitution, only eleven had ratified it. Had the Union been dissolved much longer the eleven might have been twenty-two. Under the act of March 4, 1789, Congress had provided for the admission of Territory of New York, and the Territory of Vermont was admitted March 4, 1791, and the Territory of Kentucky was admitted February 4, 1792, and the Territory of Tennessee, and the Territory of Ohio, and the Territory of Louisiana, and the Territory of Indiana, and the Territory of Mississippi, and the Territory of Illinois, and the Territory of Alabama, and the Territory of Maine, and the Territory of Missouri, and the Territory of Arkansas, and the Territory of Michigan, and the Territory of Florida, and the Territory of Iowa, and the Territory of Wisconsin, and the Territory of California, and the Territory of Minnesota, and the Territory of Oregon, and the Territory of Kansas, and the Territory of Nebraska, and the Territory of Nevada, and the Territory of Colorado, and the Territory of Dakota, and the Territory of Idaho, and the Territory of Montana, and the Territory of Wyoming, and the Territory of Washington, and the Territory of Utah, and the Territory of New Mexico, and the Territory of Arizona, and the Territory of Oklahoma, and the Territory of Indian Territory, and the Territory of Alaska, and the Territory of Dakota, and the Territory of Dakota, and the Territory of Dakota

RUSSEL HARRISON son of the president and who is editor of the Montana Live Stock Journal has been sued for libel by ex-Governor Crosby.

WILLIAM ROBERTS who has served eight years of a twelve year sentence, for a crime he never committed, has been pardoned and will receive money remuneration from the state for the time served.

ATTORNEY GENERAL MILLER has ordered the suits begun by the Cleveland administration against the Northern Pacific for stealing upwards of 40,000,000 feet of timber from government lands, discontinued.

Thus is Stanford's gigantic corporation rewarded for its mammoth campaign contribution of half a million dollars.

This is one of the largest and most direct theft on record.—Ionia Standard.

ABOUT a year ago, a mail route agent named Ashman, running out of Grand Rapids, while on a drunk, allowed "his train" to go out without either mail or agent. He was dismissed from the service, and J. Monteith, an industrious and deserving applicant was appointed. A few days ago the new superintendent of mail routes, in his eagerness to better the service, notified Monteith, a democrat, that his pay had been discontinued, and afterwards re-instated Ashman. Absent!

"PHOTOGRAPHY," by Professor John Trowbridge of Harvard, in the May Scribner, brings together in a most interesting way the remarkable achievements which the dry plate and instantaneous processes have made possible. The illustrations are from photographs taken under unusual conditions—showing objects photographed under water, by lamp and candle light, by lighting, and by flash powders; and the method of photographing the values of colors, surf and waves, men in motion, and vibrations of spoken words. The text is a clear and untechnical commentary upon these topics.

THE BOBBS MERRILL Assistant General Superintendent of the New York Central, contributes to the Railway Series of Scribner's Magazine, a lucid and entertaining account of the vast and complicated machinery which keeps in motion "The Freight-car Service" of this country. He describes the strange wanderings of a freight car; the methods employed by the car accountant's office to keep track of the wanderers; and the use and abuse of cars, with some valuable suggestions in regard to expenditing car service and readjusting the plan of payment. The illustrations shows important freight yards, piers, warehouses, car works, and floating trains.

How Protection Protects.

I have already cabled how the firm of Higgins, carpet makers, after inducing their employes to walk in republican processions and vote the republican ticket so as "to protect American industries," promptly locked them out as soon as the election was over because they would not accept 12 per cent reduction of their wages. The Brooke Iron Company, the Reading Iron Works and the Pottsville Iron and Steel Company have followed their shining example, and ordered wages reduced from 5 to 17 per cent, or their works to be shut down. Politicians cannot be held responsible for the weather—although they always claim the credit for it when it benefits a country—but the mild, open winter has been disastrous to almost all kinds of business here and the cutting of wages is becoming more and more general. The workingmen have no redress at present, but they are preparing for a general strike next May, when the gravest troubles are feared.—London Sunday Times.

THE MAY MAGAZINES.

Scribner's presents its readers the following interesting table of contents for May:

"The Canada Pool," Frontispiece. Drawn by M. J. Burns; engraved by Van Ness.

"The Land of the Wahsatch," By Leroy Milton Yale and J. G. Aylwin Creighton. Illustrations from sketches and drawings by L. M. Yale, L. R. O'Brien, and M. J. Burns; engravings by E. A. Clement, DeForest, Evans, Fay, Fitchtenau, Reid, Hoskin, Muller, Powers, Schneider, M. J. Whaley, and Van Ness.

"The Greater World," By Eric Hawthorne Lathrop.

"Court Life Toward Twenty Years Ago." By Eugene Schuyler; (To be concluded in the June number.) With portraits, engraved by Kruell and others, from photographs.

"Jeanne."—VI.—XII. (Conclusion). By John Elliott Curran. (Begun in the April number.)

"The Freight-car Service." By Theodore Voorhees. Illustrations by Herbert Denneth, H. D. Edwards, H. D. Nichols, Y. Pevard, W. Fitler, and others; engravings by Peckwell, Beard, and Witt.

"Under the Leaves." By William Herbert Carruth.

"The Dilemma of Sir Guy the Neuter." By Octave Thanet.

"A Levie of the Dawn." By Charles Edwin Markham.

"Photography." By John Trowbridge. Illustrations from negatives by the author and others. The view of lightning from a photograph by A. H. Bisden, Esq.; that of a burning building by D. N. Sorrell, Esq.; engravings by Baldwin, W. Miller, Peckwell, and Schneider.

"Fiction as a Fine Art." By Kate Stephens.

"Fiction as a Literary Form." By Hamilton Wright Mabie.

"The Master of Ballantrae." By Robert Louis Stevenson. (Begun in November—to be continued.)

"Not Strand but Sea." By Mrs. James T. Fields.

"The Lock of Old Homes in America." By Charles Eliot Norton.

Godey's.—The May number of Godey's Lady's Book is full of attractive features. The frontispiece illustration is a pleasing picture entitled "I Love it's Velvet." The colored and black fashions and work novelties are shown in real variety. The illustrated story, "Round Our Way," by Emily Lennox, is charming. "Why Lodged the Mistletoe" by Inez Porter, "A Story of the Cardinal Virtues," by Augusta de Bubna, and "A Handful of Wild Flowers," by M. E. C., are each of a pleasing kind. "A Woman's Way" grows in interest. Numerous short stories and poems fill up a well selected collection of light reading. "Aunt Jane's Portland Fortune-Telling," "Chats with our Neighbors," and the Household Department are of interest and practical value to housekeepers.

The fashion gossip and foreign letter are full of interest; and the boys and girls will find pleasing work suggested for them. Taken as a whole, the May number is one that no one can afford to do without who desires both amusement and instruction.

Godey's Lady's Book, Philadelphia, Pa.

Wide-Awake.—The May Wide Awake has two contributions that make this issue of special interest. One is a long and thrilling tale by Jessie Benton Fremont, of a personal Californian adventure in the wild mining days of 1848. As a foil to this dramatic narrative, is "The Homes of Andrew Jackson" (Children of the White House Series). It is crowded with twenty illustrations.

Every one enjoys a good anecdote, well told, turns first each month to the new department "Men and Things."

Trowbridge's popular serial "The Adventures of David Vane and David Crane" reaches its last and best chapters.

A new serial, "Sybil Pale's Fairness," by Chas. Tyler, author of "Comedies for Women," "Royal Lowrie" "Honor Bright" etc., will open with the new volume in June. "Five Little Peppers Midway," Margaret Sidney's charming serial, comes to a pause in this number. But "Five Little Peppers Further On," will delight all readers through the second half of the year.

Many other articles, stories and poems fill the number, the more a favorable once being a ballad of a boy's patriotic ride during the civil war, a "Bicycler Letter," by Mrs. ex-Governor Claflin, "An English May Day," by Mrs. F. A. Humphrey, "Walking," by Miss L. I. Guiney, etc.

Wide Awake is 20 cents a number, $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Boston, Publishers.

BELFORD'S MAGAZINE!

BELFORD'S MAGAZINE discusses ALL TOPICS of general interest to the public. It favors a reform in the tariff. It believes in honest government. It does not deal in dead issues. Its editor is the brilliant author and journalist, DONN PIATT, and it is by long odds THE BEST magazine before the public.

Each number contains a complete long novel by a well known author, beside shorter stories, poems, sketches, reviews and criticisms.

BELFORD'S is a live magazine. There is not a dull page in it. If you have not seen it send six cents for sample copy. Price $2.50 a year, 25 cents a number.

Beauty

Is desired and admired by all. Among the things which may best be done to enhance personal beauty is the daily use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. No matter what the color of the hair, this preparation gives it a lustre and pliancy that adds greatly to the beauty. Should the hair be thin, harsh, dry, or turning gray, will restore the color, bring on a new growth, and render the soft and silky. For keeping the scalp clean cool, and healthy, there is no better preparation in the market.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

"I am free to confess that a trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor has convinced me that it is a genuine article. Its use has not only caused the hair of my wife and daughter to be but it has given my father-already venerable, a respectable length and appearance."—R. Dutton, Oakland, Miss.

Abundant and Glossy,

"My hair was coming out (without any assistance from my wife, either) when Ayer's Hair Vigor was using only one bottle, and I believe it will do the same for any one who uses it."—R. T. Schanstiss, Dickson, Tenn.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor in my family for a number of years, and regard it as the best hair preparation I have ever tried. It keeps the scalp healthy, prevents the hair from falling, and preserves the original color. My wife has used it for a long time with good results."—Jerome Hedges, Jr. M., Jackson M. D. Thomas Hill, Texas.

"My hair was becoming harsh and dry, but after using half a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it became soft and glossy. I cannot express the joy I feel at having found it."—Lucy J. Handy, Delavan, Ill.

☞ The value of a remedy should be estimated by its curative properties. According to this standard, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best and most economical blood medicine in the market, because the most pure and concentrated. Price $1. Worth $5 a bottle.

Scribner's Magazine for May will interest readers of many and varied tastes. Men of letters, lovers of good fiction and poetry, railway men, amateur and professional photographers, and sportsmen will find articles which will strongly appeal to them. The variety and excellence of the engravings will delight those who appreciate good art.

We have received the Michigan Manual for 1889, compiled by Secretary of State Osmun. As usual it is a valuable compendium of useful and interesting information relative to our state. It contains brief biographical sketches of U. S. senators and representatives in congress from Michigan, also of the state officers, senators and representatives; election statistics by counties, terms of the several circuit courts, commissioners of deeds for Michigan in the several states and territories and much other useful information.

Said a well known Detroit citizen "If there is one thing in this world that will make a man swear it is to yield to a paper and strike upon an interesting and well written article and just as you get thoroughly interested find that it is an advertisement for some safe kidney and liver cure or some Log Cabin Sarsaparilla remedies. I tell you what, it is enough to make a preacher curse." In reply to the question, do you think it pays to advertise, he replied: "Of course I do. I would not for a minute be without an advertisement in the paper. No person now-a-days can do business and make it pay without advertising. People think more of one line in the paper than they would if you stood and praised your own goods for a month." With these words he hustled off to his store saying that he was being driven to death with business.

A Sound Legal Opinion.

E. Rutledge Mooney Esq., County Atty., Clay Co., Texas, says: "Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with malarial fever and jaundice but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric bitters saved his life."

Sep. 21. 1. Wiesman, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: He positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters.

This great remedy will ward off, as well as cure all malarial diseases, and for kidney, liver and stomach disorders stands unequaled. Price 50c. and $1. at C. R. Hines & Co.'s Drug Store.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS.

THE CENTENNIAL OF WASHINGTON'S INAUGURATION.

Wonderful Progress of the Nation—Our Mighty Empire of To-day Contrasted with the Infant Republic of a Century Ago.

BY DUKE BAILIE.

ON the 30th day of April, 1789, George Washington was inducted into the office of President of the United States, with imposing ceremony, in the balcony of the City Hall, New York.

His inaugural address that day the great man echoed the sentiments of those who framed the Constitution of the new government when he spoke of the work of the future as "an experiment." The work before the first President and his associates was full of difficulty. Statesmen of the highest order of intellect, some, indeed, in the Cabinet of Washington, lacked faith in the success of the experiment established for the security of the rights of the great commonalty of labor in meeting the questions that came up. Madison, still a member of Congress, wrote: "We are in a wilderness without even a footstep to guide us." Washington, a republican, from the deep sincerity of his nature, gave to the plan the full weight of his influence, and was a tower of strength. An enthusiasm were overcome doubts were dispelled. The government in a few years proved adequate to meet every emergency. It was firmly established. The "experiment" was a success. Washington, in his inaugural, said it was "the strongest government on earth," and "the only one where every man, at the call of the law, would fly to the standard of the law, and would meet invasions of the public order as his own personal concerns."

This was the work of the revolution at length accomplished by the embodiment of the ideas of local self-government, and of national union in the Constitution as the organic law, and the establishment of a republican government that met the wants of the people, and was in accord with the ideas by men of liberal views all over the world. The feeling of this school was expressed by Sir James Mackintosh as he wrote: "America has emerged from her struggles into tranquility and freedom, into affluence and credit; and the authors of her Constitution have constructed a great permanent experimental answer to the sophisms and declamations of the detractors of liberty."

The results of a retrospect of a century's growth in those fields which suggest some of the most important results of the marvelous development of other nations are such as to awaken a feeling of just pride in every American citizen. And the reflections naturally deduced from these results as to the characteristic features of our people contradict those which are drawn from a superficial review of the social and political abuses of the day, and are most reassuring as to the honeful future of this republic.

The entire power and force of England was directed to the suppression and destruction of the commerce and internal industry of the infant republic. Pitt, in the year 1785, eight or ten hook-boats of about twenty-five tons each performed all the carrying trade between Cincinnati and Pittsburg. Hamilton, when Secretary of State, in his report under the head of coal, notes: "There are several mines in Virginia now worked. There is something," he says, also, "in the texture of cotton which adapts it in a peculiar degree to the application of machines." What are coal and cotton to this nation, to the world, to-day? Within seven months of this year nearly 3,000,000 yards of our cotton cloth competed with the British manufacture; 1,000,000 yards went to Mexico, 3,000,000 to Central America; 6,000,000 to the West Indies; 2,000,000 to South America; 3,000,000 to Asiatic countries, and, besides, we have supplied our own 60,000,000 of population. This is the century's statement for manufacturing cotton cloth alone.

Even Jefferson, the writer of the immortal Declaration—in intellect the most widely influential of our early statesmen—failed at first to grasp the powers within our country. To day the United States stands first of all countries of the world; the annual product of its factories reaches at least five billions of dollars, and fully four million of operatives are employed in its various industries. The product per operative, owing to the greater skill and intelligence of American artisans, is in the United States $1,500; in Great Britain, $1,000; in Germany, $600; in Italy, $300, $200.

The Americans are the best-fed people of the present age, and therefore they are able to accomplish the greatest amount of best work. According to Vauban, Bossuet, and Lagrange three names illustrious in war, religion, and science, respectively, "that country may be considered the most prosperous in which the inhabitants are able to have the largest ratio of meat for their food." The United States consumes 180 pounds of meat per inhabitant; the Russian Empire, 120 pounds; France, 90 pounds; Switzerland, 55 pounds; Germany, 55 pounds; Scandinavia, 45 pounds; Russia, 44 pounds, and so on downward to Italy, gal. with 20 pounds per head per year.

Even up to 1850 the United States used at intervals to import wheat from Europe; whereas now it produces one-third of the world's crop. Facilities for transportation have so improved that wheat grown on the Mississippi is now sold as cheap in Europe as that grown on the spot. For the last half-dozen years all the land of Illinois has been yielding more crops than it has cost. We can now import corn from Illinois to the nearest port.

In 1790 and 1791, the mess bill of a Continental officer shows that he paid for sugar $14, $16 and $18 a pound; twist silk, $10 per yard; three brushes and a black ball, $80; a black silk handkerchief $75; eggs, $12 per dozen. When our postoffice was established, in May, 1794, a single letter cost six cents for thirty miles; over 60 miles twenty-five cents, and over 600 miles, one dollar. In 1790 $20,000,000 of silver and $22,000,000 of gold were available for coinage, the remainder being used in the arts. From the date of enactment of our first coinage law, in 1792, to the beginning of the present year, the product of the United States was eighteen hundred and five millions of gold and eight hundred and fifty millions of silver, and nine-tenths of this total was produced in the forty years ending December 31, 1888. Our country has $15 in specie per capita for each one of its inhabitants.

While money circulates and is a most essential factor in the maintenance and advance of civilization, honesty and industry are the real wealth of a country, and contributed to the love of acquisition of wealth. The pioneers whose camp-fires, from Massachusetts Harbor westward, had marked the advance line in the conquests of industry, has been for the most part men imbued with the spirit of true religion; men who, opposed to the supremacy of the church, still recognized it as a necessary factor in the upbuilding of a successful commonwealth, and provided generously for its growth and conservation. Thus it was that upon the borders of uncomposted lands, and in the midst of surroundings comparatively unfavorable, the pioneer worshiped in a temple of his own building, and was led by the minister who could pursue their studies beyond the rudimentary knowledge imparted by the grand women of that day, who found time, amid the toil of the wilderness, to teach their children how to read and write, how to think, and how to live.

Our national idea includes the school as a matter of course, and the first rude building in any new community generally served as the school-house. The school-house, as the palladium of political safety and prosperity, Andrew Jackson gave expression to the determined will of the nation, in the terse sentiment spoken at the night of his inauguration, "The Union must be preserved." Abraham Lincoln, the martyr-President, said that the thousands who died for their country on the battle-fields gave their lives "that the nation might live." Millions had responded to the call of that martyr-President, who, in 1861, spoke of as their own personal country, and meeting their own destruction "that government of the people, by the people, and for the people should not perish from the earth."

It is such a government that the genius of our people requires; such a one only under which our States may remain for ages to come unbroken, and free.

WASHINGTON'S DESK IN FEDERAL HALL.

Washington's Personal Appearance.

Washington, according to Houdon's measurements, was 6 feet 2 inches in height. He was a giant in size and physical strength. His hands and feet were proportionately large. His hands were enormous. They were No. 13. His ordinary walking-stick was a shillalah, which he used to carry in his pocket, and he could not buy a glove to fit him, and had to have his glovers make him to order. His mouth was his strong feature, the lips being always tightly compressed. He was a man of few words and of strong emotions, and his mouth was the index of his character

W. H. Healey and family, of East Jordan, passed through here on Monday last, en route for Oregon, where he expects to make his home.

The New Discovery.

You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the men who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it is, that when once given a trial, dr. king's New discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any throat, lung or chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial Bottles free at F. G. Hines & Co.'s drug store. c

Atwood.

April 20.—Henry Blair has rented a farm of his nephew, Sim Blow, and takes possession to-day.

Wm. Ingalls has rented his farm and moves to Central Lake this week. He will go into the saw-mill business.

Fred Stafford is the papa of a bouncing girl.

Rev. Mr. Whitman was at Ironton Sunday, holding quarterly meeting. Rev. Thurston, of Charlevoix, filled his appointment at Atwood.

The doctor says there is not as much sickness of a dangerous character as usual in this township.

A number of families have moved in this place lately. They like the place and will settle.

Miss Clara Wood commenced this morning to teach the Antrim school.

Echo.

Chilly days and colder nights.

Mrs. McMillan was quite ill, but is better at present.

Little Jennie Scofield is failing fast. Her recovery is doubtful.

Mary McMillan came home for a few days visit on Saturday last.

Mrs. Papineau is some better.

Isaac Vance attended M. E. quarterly services in East Jordan, on Saturday and Sunday last.

Elder Scofield and wife, of Wilson, visited at A. E. Scofield's, one day last week.

School began in the Vance district on Monday last; Miss Nancy Kinney, teacher.

Mrs. Orson Bartholomew has her mother, Mrs. A. King, of South Arm, visiting her for a few days.

☞We notice a new departure in the treatment of disease that promises to revolutionize the medicine business. It consists in the collection of the specifics used by noted specialists of Europe and America and bringing them within the reach of all. For instance, the treatment pursued by special physicians who treat indigestion, stomach and liver troubles only, was obtained and prepared. The treatments of other physicians, celebrated for curing catarrh, were procured, and so on till these incomparable cures now include disease of the lungs, kidneys, female weakness, rheumatism, nervous debility and piles. Originated and used by specialists, being a positive cure for each disease, these preparations are the best remedies procurable. We advise all to send 3 two cent stamps to the Chase Medical Specialty Co., 179 West Adams St., Chicago, Ill. and receive by return mail their interesting hand book. 7569

Burgess.

April 20.—Mr. Fish has rented the Henry Kahler farm for a term of years.

At a meeting of the township board Chauncy Howe Sr. and Geo. Scott were appointed as a board of review.

Saturday the steamhargo Root, finished her cargo at Burgess with shingles for Downer.

The J. L. Green brought a full load of beer for Fred Smith from Milwaukee.

School commences in Maple Grove district next Monday.

Monday and Tuesday were slightly wintry.

Fire at Petoskey.

Petoskey, April 29.—An alarm of fire was sounded at 3 o'clock Sunday morning, which proved to be at the Occidental hotel, (one of the oldest buildings in the place, having been built in 1874,) almost the whole inside of the building was badly damaged by either fire or water. Jacob Passage, the owner had just effected an insurance of $5,000 a few days ago. The loss is estimated at fully $3,000 on the building alone. Mr. Passage intends to immediate ly commence to refit and re-open the hotel to the public.

"Cheaper Sugar."

There are about 9,000 barrels of sugar owned by the wholesale dealers in this city. As sugar has advanced three quarters of a cent and is likely to go higher and as sugar is always sold here on quotation prices, Grand Rapids grocers smile. By the way the final republican rallying cry of the last campaign was "cheaper sugar." This like other republican campaign promises has to be taken in practice on the doctrine of contraries.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

Author of "Beautiful Snow."

Mr. J. W. Watson, the author of "Beautiful Snow," having been described by the New York World as the author of an unsuccessful book of poems, and at present an elevated railroad tenkoman, writes to that journal as follows: "My book of poems is not a failure, but, the publishers inform me, is one of the best selling in the trade, though I derive no profit from it, nor do I even a copy (fact), the price being beyond my pocket ($3) and the publishers never having presented me with a copy. There are many better poems in it than 'Beautiful Snow,' and several almost as popular. Frank Leslie never offered me $1,000 to write any poem, though he has paid me much money for doing so."—Frank Leslie's Newspaper.

Is Your Dander Up?

The word "dander" is a corruption of danger, and has generally been considered an Americanism, but in Halliwell's Archaic Dictionary he gives the words dander (anger) and danger (disturbed), the former common to several English counties and the latter peculiar to Somersetshire. A dandy is generally used to mean a coxcomb, a fop, and is the French word dandin (a cuckold fellow).—Detroit Free Press.

A quiet boarding house will get two or three summer boarders by addressing H. C. Fox, Richmond, Ind.

Alick Rosenthal's spring opening has been extended. Note the changes in his advertisement in another column.

A. T. Washburne & Co. call special attention in another column to recent invoices of new goods. Look them over.

J. R. Dixon lost about 100 cords of block wood by fire Sunday afternoon. It was piled in the woods where it was cut.

L. E. Allen has leased his residence to the McGibeny family for the summer. They will take possession early in June.

"Why don't you run a bigger paper?" is frequently asked us. Because our business does not require it. Whenever business demands it we shall be able to issue a ten, twelve, sixteen or twenty-four paged paper. Do you tumble?

The hot weather of the past few days is opening the buds nicely, and by another week the woods will be a living green.

The fire department was called out Monday afternoon to put out a running brush fire on the Upright & Halbert addition.

Smith's colored minstrels, fifteen people, will play at Bartholomew's ope a house on Saturday and Monday, May 11 and 13.

A. W. Hulburt and family will move this week to Yuba, Grand Traverse county, to take a situation at driving team for the summer.

The steamer Florence, from Reid's lake is making two trips a day to Boyne, and will continue all the season if business is sufficient to make it pay.

Four first-class theatrical companies booked for Bartholomew's opera hall. The stage will have a new carpet and other improvements, the piano will be in the best of tune.

The new front in the Lewis block gives Alick Rosenthal an elegant show window, and on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, his opening days, he had them well filled, making an elegant display.

Henry Swanson returned to Charlevoix last week after three or four years' absence. During his absence he has been sailing on the Atlantic, visiting among other places, his old home in England. He expects to settle at East Jordan again.

C. D. Smith, late of Owosso, has established a tailor shop in the Hill building, corner Bridge and Clinton streets, lately occupied by C. H. Maddaugh. He advertises latest styles of goods always on hand, and suits made to order. Give him a call.

Every bit of improvement adds to the maker's property and to the entire community as well. The sum of many little things, such as neat fences, well painted buildings, and clean, shady streets, make the grand whole of a beautiful village.

Lieut. Kuhn, of the U. S. engineer corps at Grand Rapids, was in town Tuesday, looking up the necessities of the harbor. He will recommend some dredging to be done here as soon as possible. He also expresses himself well pleased with the work done under Crouter's government contract.

C. H. Ball returned Monday from Marquette, where he went to secure his homestead. He built a shanty, cleared a "garden patch," and planted potatoes, peas, etc. He says he has 160 acres of as good land as there is on the peninsula, and among its other products he will harvest a million and a half of pine, besides cedar, hardwood, etc.

Petoskey Record: The Charlevoix people are organizing to get up a regatta about July 4th. Certainly there is no place along the shore where a regatta could be held with safer conditions as to weather and water. They have Lake Michigan, Round Lake and Pine Lake to lay the courses on, and no weather at all likely to be bad at that season could interfere, even with sloll racing.

Lee Boardslee is booming the bicycle business these days. The wheel sold to Fred Wood last week is the first of four or five sales to be made early this season, and other sales may follow before the season is over. There are now four wheels in town, and four more are expected in time to organize a bicycle club and take part in the sports of Fourth-of-July week.

Dr. Crouter and W. H. Downer had a "brush" with their fast horses this week, and Crouter says Downer took his dust. Crouter expresses the belief that his gray mare can beat Downer's horse every day in the week "for money or marbles." Nothing short of a good race track will satisfactorily settle these questions, and that level plat of ground south of town would be an excellent place to build it.

THE SHAVED SHINGLE CO.

An Enterprise That Will Bring Many Dollars to Charlevoix.

Early next week, possibly by Monday, the Michigan Shaved Shingle Co. will be operating their new mill on Pine Lake, south of the resort. Last Saturday a representative of the JOURNAL visited the mill and found a large force of men at work setting the machinery.

The floor space of the mill is 40x70 feet on the ground, and the central portion of the building is two stories high. In front of the mill on the east side is a good substantial dock 50x125 feet, and on the west side will be a large platform besides the steam boxes.

The south wing of the mill will be devoted to the saw mill and butting saws. From there the bolts will pass into the steam boxes and then into the cutting room, which will be supplied with two complete sets of machinery. Automatic carriers will lift the shingles to the second story, where they will be trimmed and sorted, passing down again to the packing room and out on the dock. Automatic carriers will convey all the refuse to the fuel room.

In the arrangement of the machinery there is no cutting back of material or product. The rough logs go into one side of the mill, and the bunches of packed shingles come out of the other side, while the refuse is employed in giving power to operate the whole machinery. The prevailing idea is to do as much of the work as possible by machinery, leaving the least possible amount to be done by hand. This gives the best results for the capital and labor expended.

A. Buttars is superintendent and manager, and J. T. Kirkpatrick superintends the construction of the mill. Geo. A. Gage, the patentee, has charge of the erection and operation of the shingle cutting machinery.

The power will be furnished by a 50-horse-power engine, with a boiler 16 feet long and 60 inches diameter.

When the mill is in full operation, employment will be given to at least 35 men.

Laugh Till You Cry.

"Little Nugget" is a play without a suggestion of pathos, but one full of tears from beginning to end. This may seem paradoxical, but the tears are those of laughter and merriment at the highest pressure. The author wrote to create laughter only, and he has succeeded admirably. Havlin's never contained more delighted audiences than yesterday. At the matinee the business was good. In the evening the house was packed to the walls. No doubt it will continue to be so long as "Nooguit" holds the boards. The principal character, "Barney O'Brady," to the mind of the writer, gives a more comical delineation of the "Exaggerated Irishman" than Pat. Rooney. "Barney" has a penchant for turning up at the most unexpected times and in such an unexpected way, as to bring down the house at each appearance. His courtship of the wealthy widow, "Mrs. Simpkins," is the climax of fun, and the audience fairly vented its delight in yells, as "Barney" gained the hand that "owned thim two hundred acres." The cast is above the average for such plays. "Little Nugget" doesn't pretend to be true to nature or afflicted with a patch of realism, but it goes further and ludicrously depicts the real in a delirium, and that is what the average theatre goer wants.—Cincinnati Times-Star, Monday, Feb. 27, 1888. Council Proceedings in Other Towns

Buchanan is probably the only town of importance in the state that makes no provision whatever for publishing the proceedings of the common council. Two or three years ago the council quit in a "huff" because the papers refused to publish their work for nothing, and since then no effort has been made to let it citizens know what the council is doing.—Buchanan Record.

Niles city pays forty cents per thousand ems which is small enough certainly, barely paying for composition. The people insist on the publication here as they are fully informed of the exact amount of money spent and what for. We believe the fact that the publication is made is a powerful incentive to economy.—Niles Democrat.

Marriage for a Quarter.

A story is told about a minister's marriage fee that causes amusement among the clergy. He was paid $1 for marrying a couple. After they departed he was about to hand the money to his wife when the door bell was rung. The newly married wife said she wanted a certificate. No marriage was good without one. It cost twenty-five cents for a blank that would suit her. The reverend gentleman filled the blank out in the usual form, and she went away seemingly satisfied.

A few days later she appeared at the door. "Mister," said the woman, in an aggrieved tone, "I looked through the papers and can't find a notice of our wedding. You ought not to treat us different from other folks." So the domestic went to a newspaper office and paid fifty cents to insert a notice inserted. When he reached home he handed the remaining twenty-five cents to his wife with the remark: "Here, my dear, hurry up and take this before that woman makes another call."—Kingston Freeman.

Sentimentalists like Byron and Shelley might have a horror of a woman who confessed to a hearty appetite, but the women who fill homes with sunshine are those who can both cook a good dinner and help to eat it.—Christian World.

ANOTHER SUDDEN DEATH.

Alanson Campbell of Eveline Stricken with Heart Disease.

Last Sunday morning Alanson Campbell, living near Ironton, hitched up his team with the intention of visiting relatives in Charlevoix. His wife and child had got into the buggy with him, and he was just starting into the road, when he fell over and expired almost immediately.

Mr. Campbell was about 36 years old, and leaves a wife and one child. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Orson Campbell, who were living with him, and a brother of Ben and Smith Campbell, and Mrs. Lorenzo Cook, of Charlevoix. The funeral occurred Tuesday, and the remains were laid to rest in the Charlevoix cemetery.

East Jordan.

From the Enterprise.

Messrs. McGuire and Marrin, of the Cigar Mfg. Co., have dissolved partnership. Mr. Marrin has left with his family for the Rapids, and Mr. McGuire will continue the business alone.

The Commercial House barn has been purchased by Frank Blakely, of Eastport. It is probable that Messrs. Blakeley and Shapton will enter into partnership and run the concern together.

Mr. O. S. Washburn, chief of the Charlevoix Fire Department, in a neat and appropriate speech at the firemen's ball on Tuesday night, said that his boys were more than pleased with the reception given them, and hoped to reciprocate at a not distant time. He also expressed himself agreeably astonished at the efficiency of the East Jordan Hose Company, and said that the water appliances were equal, if not superior, to those at Charlevoix, and that water could be got much quicker.

All's well that ends well, and the glorious kick over the waterworks question has ended with satisfaction to everybody, kickers included.

C. G. Sweet, who was absent at the time of the burning of his mill, has returned home and is making preparations to go to Beaver Island, where he owns considerable land, and go into the bark and lumber business. He will retain some of his old hands.

One of the Seven Richest Men.

The Chinese minister is a mandarin of such high rank that he stands fifth only from the emperor, and rumor has it that he is one of the seven richest men in the world, the seven including the famous Rothschilds. His jewels are magnificent, and it is a well known fact that he was one of the heavy purchasers when the imperial regalia of France was broken up and sold. He is a man of middle height, with phenomenally small hands and feet, piercing brown eyes, a fair skin and two dimples that make his smile doubly pleasant. His manners are exquisite, and he carries his hospitality to the point of interpreting literally the flowery phases of his native land. He is an immense favorite in society. His taste is perfect, and the rich and harmonious toilets he wears are the envy and admiration of all colorists. He speaks very good English, and has a distinct lisp, which he exercises very cleverly at times.—Boston Journal.

Cost of Private Cars.

Many extravagant stories are in circulation as to the cost of private cars, such as are used by railroad magnates, opera singers, imported actors and millionaires, and I have often heard it stated that an average Pullman palace car is worth $50,000. Stories are printed about cars costing all the way from $100,000 to $200,000. The fact of the matter is that a palace car costs $12,000 complete. The make up of all cars, regular or special, is about the same. Additional cost is brought about by the internal decoration, and that must necessarily be limited. I doubt if there ever was a car constructed that ever cost more than $25,000. To exceed that figure would require a decoration exclusively in jewels and the precious metals.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

One of the watch docs at the railroad station in Portsmouth, Va., was killed by being run over. His mate went to the place where he was buried, dug him up, had a piece of meat by his side and then went away.

Test of Death.

Many tests have been suggested to define whether or not life is extinct, or death has appeared to occur of the most recent, and held to be of the most reliable, is called the sub-hypodermic test. In using this operation a hypodermic syringe is used, which contains under the skin of the arm some other convenient portion of body. If the body be not dead—if it be the faintest circulation—the morphia will produce on the skin, at the point where it was injected, a dark red patch, on the surface of which raised red spots will appear; if there be absolute death, there will be produced a brown dark blotch, which is definitely conclusive against a possible vitality.—Boston Herald.

Polluted Ice.

Users of ice must read up on the recent investigations of Kedzie, Peugres and Prudden, showing that ice taken from polluted streams is not purified by freezing. Kedzie tells us that if ice from streams containing rotting vegetable matter or sewage, it will produce diarrhœa. In 1875, at Rye beach, an epidemic broke out in a new hotel, and was traced at last to ice taken from an adjacent pond. The stagnant water in this pond in summer was foul and stinking with putrescent matter. Organic matter, as well as bacteria, is not eliminated by any ordinary process of cold. Too many of our creams are the recipients of sewage. This is the age of civilization, and we may have it pure.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In Honor of Burns.

A Burns mannemonde to celebrate the birthday of the poet is an annual custom in Leslie, Fifeshire. At the late celebration twenty-four plowmen, merchants and farmers, mounted and dressed to represent the principal characters in Burns' works, paraded the street headed by a volunteer band and accompanied by a crowd of people. Burns himself appeared in blue coat, brass buttons and breeches, with other characters from Tam O'Shanter, Rowley Johnnie, Auld Lang Syne, Jock o' Hazeldean, Bonnie Lesley, Highland Mary, Bonnie Jean, Hon. "Here you are!" called out a fruit pointing to upon basket of Concords, Catawbas and Delawares, for half the price. The small man stopped, hesitated, fumbled in his pocket as to free his fattively gulled off a bunch in a basket of Concords, put the bunch in his Catawba, and began on

The fruit vendor, who was busy with a customer, now noticed the short man's actions with increasing anger, and cried out:

"How much for grapes?" asking a Delaware.

"Forty cents a basket."

"Too much," said the man, and walked away two more Concords.

"Are you a wholesale order."

"No."

"Own a vineyard, sir?"

ANOTHER RAILWAY BONANZA.

Delightful Wrinkle on the Grand Trunk Railway, Near Hamilton, Ontario.

A Gentle Shaking of Bonds in the Grand Trunk Railway has taken place near Hamilton. The bonds have turned from the track, were thrown off the road bed, and some twenty miles of them lay in the blazing sun, where they lifted upright. The superintendent of the road, who was at Toronto, when the news came from Chicago to Detroit by way of Toronto, Montreal, Portland, Portland, Boston, New York, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, and Grand Trunk Railway, telegraphed to Hamilton for a Wagner Palace Car to take a Pullman car and two Wagner sleeping cars, on the road to Detroit, and ordered the train made up of twenty miles of bonds. On passing a point where the road crosses the Credit River, the train was stopped, and the bonds were loaded on to the engine almost upside down, and were thrown into the Credit. After the engine, and the first of the car had passed, the bonds were thrown off the track, and the train was moving in single file. The last car, however, caught the bonds from the engine, and they were left in Eaton. The conductor following with the Pullman and Wagner cars, saw the bonds on the road of the train, were jolted together by the shock, and immediately caught the train. He ran back to the Credit, and found the train had run off the track, and the bonds were lying in the road. He ordered the cars back, and found the bonds were not injured, and he the nearly upset the train. Only scratches could be found on the bonds, and the slightly damaged, but the charred remains of Wagner Palace Car were found among the ashes. Next to the engine was a first-class car, and where the seats in it, a man and a woman were placed, there was a little space, but the fire nearly drove the people forward. All the remains of the two was a handful of charred bones, and a few pieces of gold, and the shoes, a pair of the women's were almost ruined with bronze. The newly roasted antiques were burned beyond recognition. The loss to the Railway Company will be very heavy.

No Fears for a Strike.

It is claimed that a great deal of the western and Iowa corn-cobs this winter will be used for fuel, in consequence of the strike and coal famine in Illinois and Western Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin. Nothing but cobs threatens to break, where the cobs are plenty, we contemplate the remarkable degree of comfort the future corn-cob may enjoy. The Pending Fisheries Bill Again.

From the Petoskey Record.

We find our article last week on the pending fisheries bill has created a good deal of excitement among the fishermen who had supposed the main points in the bill to have been satisfactorily settled with the legislative committee.

Ever since Michigan became a state the people have suffered no inconvenience from lack of fish, though all this time each fisherman has been free to use such nets as to him seemed best.

It is very doubtful if any benefits are to be derived from legislation on this question, there is certainly no excuse for adopting at once measures so radical as to involve a practical revolution in the business and the financial ruin of many who are engaged in it.

As near as can be ascertained three-fourths of the nets now in use on the east shore of Lake Michigan are 3½ or 3¾ inch mesh. Still the fishermen are willing and desirous to operate with the fish commission in any reasonable regulation as an experiment.

They held a convention during the winter and sent delegates to Lansing to confer with legislative committees. These result of these conferences was an agreement or compromise fixing 4¼ inches as the mesh for gill nets and heavy penalties for the catching of white fish weighing less than 1½ pounds each.

Any change made now, while they are all insufficiently employed in their fisheries, would be regarded as a breach of faith on the part of the state fish commission, and precipitate an unending warfare where good feeling and co-operation are necessary to any good results.

The increased size of mesh from 3¾ and 3½ to 4¼ is certainly sufficient to test in a practical manner the benefits (if there are any to be derived) of legislation on this question, and it will be time enough to change from 4¼ to 4½ when experience shall prove such a change to be desirable or beneficial. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the legislature will see to it that the theories of the (three) men who propose the state fish commission do not prevail over the life long experiences of the thousands of our practical fishermen.

The Harbor of Greytown.

The most difficult feature of the Nicaragua canal is the restoration of the harbor of Greytown, which has been destroyed by silt deposit from the San Juan river. The United States survey allows $1,767,000 for this purpose, but it may cost $5,000,000. It is not more difficult, however, than was the construction of a harbor at Port Said, and the work will resemble it in character. The method of restoration is a question whereon opinions differ; that favored by the United States engineers being the diversion of the lower San Juan into the Colorado branch, which already carries to the ocean eleven-twelfths of the volume of the river. This can easily be effected, and once the harbor is scoured, it is intended to dredge it, and to run a breakwater 3,000 feet from the outer line of the harbor into the Caribbean, with six fathoms at its seaward end. The breakwater may have to be subsequently extended seaward. The soil is a volcanic sand, easily dredged, but difficult to locate permanently.—Overland Monthly.

THE Detroit Evening News proposes to send a delegation of 40 American workman, all first-class in their respective trades, to the Paris exposition to make carefully prepared reports of that exhibit for the papers of the Scripps league. In addition to the Paris exhibit, they will visit the leading manufacturing centers of Europe, and report their observations and opinions. On their return, the reports will be compiled and published in the league papers, and also in book form.

Long-Standing

Blood Diseases are cured by the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine is an Alterative, and causes a radical change in the system. The process, in some cases, may not be quite so rapid as in others, but, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials:—

"For two years I suffered from a severe pain in my right side, and had other troubles caused by a disorder of the liver. After giving several medicines a fair trial, without relief, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was greatly benefited by the first bottle, and after taking five bottles I was completely cured.—John W. Benson, 75 Lawrence st., Lowell, Mass.

"Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect and I was confined to my bed for eight weeks. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than three bottles healed the sore. In all my experience with medicine, I never saw more

Wonderful Results.

Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my sight."—Mrs. Carrie Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I had a dry scaly humor for years, and suffered terribly; and, as my brother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume the malady is hereditary. Last winter, Dr. Tyler, of Jersey City, recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after using it for a few months I feel quite free from the disease, and no blemish upon my body for the last three months.—T. E. Wood, 146 Chambers st., New York City.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a dull, heavy pain in my side. I did not believe it at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. Finally, the latter part of this year, the disorder of the stomach and liver increased my pain so that I was taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared and I was completely cured.—Mrs. A. A. Furbush, Lowell, Mass.

LOCAL NOTES AND NEWS.

New sidewalk in front of the Bridge Street House.

The next meeting of the Michigan Press Association will be held at Muskegon, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, June 19, 20, and 21.

☞ Mamma (to her little boy): "Now, Bennie, if you'll be good and go to sleep, mamma'll give you one of Dr. Ayer's nice sugar coated cathartic pills, next time you need medicine." Bennie, smiling sweetly dropped off to sleep at once.

☞ Rheumatism is caused by an acid in the blood; therefore, external treatment affords no permanent relief. To eliminate the poison and make a thorough cure of the disease, nothing else is so efficient as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Give it a trial. Price $1. Worth $5 a bottle.

On Sunday the tug Martin started for the "Soo" with three scows loaded with about 100,000 feet of timber from Gould's mill, to be used in E. Allen's government contract there. On Monday night the tug Rawson started with the pile driver, for the same place. The driver will also be used, when necessary, as a timber crane.

"All is not gold that glitters," is demonstrated by the return from the land of promise of thousands of dispirited Oklahoma boomers. If those in search of homes would turn their attention to northern Michigan, they will find, if not a "land of promise," at least a paradise as compared with Oklahoma. Now here in Charlevoix county we have good land, pure spring water and a fine climate, and where every man who is not afraid to work can find profitable employment.

We were not present at the last meeting of the council, but it is currently reported that some members of that body were greatly offended at the recent items in the JOURNAL, and to gratify themselves secured the passage of a motion to accept an offer from the editor of the Sentinel to print the proceedings free, and instructed the clerk to furnish the copy to that paper. When the full, official proceedings are published, over the signature of the clerk, the JOURNAL's purpose will be accomplished, whether that publication be done in the JOURNAL or in some other paper.

Music, Flowers, and Goddesses.

The Detroit Journal, which has just divided $25,000 among the 24 Detroit charities, making $281.29 for each, (the net results of the four days charity ball, out of which it organized and recently conducted) is not satisfied with its first success, and is already planning for another and much greater affair for 1890. Write the floral idea is to predominate, this new and immensely popular features are to be introduced.

The first is a musical festival on a scale broad enough to require the combined talent of all the musical societies of Detroit, assisted probably by those of many of the cities throughout Michigan.

The second feature is an adaptation from the legends of ancient Grecian mythology, so represented, that ladies from each charity which will participate in the profits of the enterprise, will erect miniature temples in the exhibition building, and dedicate them to Flora, Ceres, Pomona, or some one of the scores of mythical divinities, and then people them with their own fair impersonations of nymphs, adorned with the exceedingly graceful ancient Grecian costumes which harmonize so well with flowers. After May 11th, the Detroit Journal will publish each Saturday an article on this subject to assist those who are to participate. This very enterprising newspaper has already secured the pledged assistance of the ladies, florists and musicians of Detroit. Room for double the accomodations has also been secured. The enterprise will be managed by W. H. Brearley, proprietor of the Detroit Journal.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our patrons, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. F. G. Hiers & Co., Druggists.

CATARRH.—Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are so generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 362 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

Sufferers from catarrhal troubles should read the above carefully.

Test of Death.

Many tests have been suggested to define whether or not life is extinct, or death has occurred. Chloroform is the most recent, and held to be of the most reliable, is called the anæmia-hypodermic test. In using this test the operator injects one hypodermic syringeful of strong solution of anæmia under the skin of the arm or some other convenient portion of the body. If the body be not dead—if there be the faintest circulation—the anæmia will produce on the skin, at the point where it was injected, a pink red patch, on the surface of which raised red spots will appear; if there be absolute death, there will be produced a brown dark blotch, which is definitely conclusive against any possible vitality.—Boston Herald.

Polluted Ice.

Users of ice must read up on the latest investigations of Kedzie, Prudden and Prudden, showing that ice taken from polluted streams is not purified by freezing. Kedzie tells us that if ice from streams containing rotting vegetable matter or sewbiual be used it produce diarrhœas. In 1875, at Byers, such an epidemic broke out in a large hotel, and was traced at last to ice taken from an adjacent pond. The water of this pond in summer was foul and stinking with putrescent matter. Organic matter, as well as bacteria, are not eliminated by any ordinary degree of cold. Too many of our creams are the recipients of this ice, and this is the ice age of civilization, and we must have it pure.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In Honor of Burns.

A Burns masquerade to celebrate the birthday of the poet is an annual custom in Leslie, Ingham, Mich. The 1889 celebration, twenty-four gentlemen, merchants and farmers, mounted and dressed to represent the principal characters in Burns' works, formed the street headed by a volunteer band and accompanied by a crowd of people. Burns himself appeared in the cortege, and Mr. Wilcox and Miss Cole, representing Tam and Maggie, the principal characters, were in the chariot, drawn by twenty-four horses. The procession was a mile and a half long. The Burns Club of Lansing, Mich., has decided to have a Burns masquerade next year, and have good music. It was decided to give the next one in Lansing, if selected.—Lansing Journal.

The jury in the Latimer murder trial at Jackson returned a verdict of murder in the first degree on the second ballot.

The Detroit Evening News proposes to send a delegation of 40 American workman, all first-class in their respective trades, to the Paris exposition to make carefully prepared reports of that exhibit for the papers of the Stripes league. In addition to the Paris exhibit, they will visit the leading manufacturing centers of Europe, and report their observations and opinions. On their return, the reports will be compiled and published in the league papers, and also in book form.

The Pending Fisheries Bill Again.

From the Petoskey Record.

We find our article last week on the pending fisheries bill has created a good deal of excitement among the fishermen who had supposed the main points in the bill to have been satisfactorily settled with the legislative committee.

Ever since Michigan became a state the people have suffered no inconvenience from lack of fish, though all this time each fisherman has been free to use such nets as to him seemed best.

It is very doubtful if any benefits are to be derived from legislation on this question, there is certainly no excuse for adopting at once measures so radical as to involve a practical revolution in the business and the financial ruin of many who are engaged in it.

As near as can be ascertained three-fourths of the nets now in use on the east shore of Lake Michigan are 3½ or 3¾ inch mesh. Still the fishermen are willing and desirous to co operate with the fish commission in any reasonable regulation as an experiment.

They held a convention during the winter and sent delegates to Lansing to confer with legislative committee. These result of these conferences was an agreement or compromise fixing 4¼ inches as the mesh for gill nets, and heavy penalties for the catching of white fish weighing less than 1½ pounds each.

Any change made now, while they are all busily employed in their fisheries, would be regarded as a breach of faith on the part of the state fish commission, and precipitate an unending warfare where good feeling and co-operation are necessary to any good results.

The increased size of mesh from 3½ and 3¾ to 4¼ is certainly sufficient to test in a practical manner the benefits (if there are any to be derived) of legislation on this question, and it will be time enough to change from 4¼ to 4½ when experience shall prove such a change to be desirable or beneficial. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the legislature will see to it that the theories of the (three) men who compose the state fish commission do not prevail over the life long experience of the thousands of our practical fishermen.

The Harbor of Greytown.

The most difficult feature of the Nicaragua canal is the restoration of the harbor of Greytown, which has been destroyed by silt deposit from the San Juan river. The United States survey allows $1,767,000 for this purpose, but it may cost $5,000,000. It is not more difficult, however, than was the construction of a harbor at Port Said, and the work will resemble it in character. The method of restoration is a question whereon opinions differ; that favored by the United States engineers being the diversion of the lower San Juan into the Colorado branch, which already carries to the ocean eleven-twelfths of the volume of the river. This can easily be effected, and once the harbor is isolated, it is intended to dredge it, and so run a breakwater 3,000 feet from the outer line of the harbor into the Caribean, with six fathoms at its seaward end. The breakwater may have to be subsequently extended seaward. The salt is a vehicle sand, easily handled, but difficult to locate permanently.—Overland Monthly.

Long-Standing

Blood Diseases are cured by the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine is an Alterative, and causes a radical change in the system. The process, in some cases, may not be quite so rapid as in others; but, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials:—

"For two years I suffered from a severe pain in my right side, and had other troubles caused by a torpid liver and dyspepsia. After giving several medicines a fair trial, without a cure, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was greatly benefited by the first bottle, and after taking five bottles I was completely cured."—John W. Bennett, 10 Lawrence st., Lowell, Mass.

"Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect, and it was confined to my bed for three months. My physician finally induced me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than three bottles healed the sore. In all my experience with medicine, I never saw more

Wonderful Results.

Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my sight."—Mrs. Carrie Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I had a dry scaly humor for years, and suffered terribly; and, as my brother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume the malady is hereditary. Last winter, Dr. Tyrne, (of Fernandina, Fla.) recommended me to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and continue it for a year. For five months I took it daily. I have not had a blemish upon my body for the last three months."—T. E. Wiley, 146 Chambers st., New York City.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a cough, heavy pain in my side. I did not notice it at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the stomach and liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared, and I was completely cured."—Mrs. A. A. Furbush, Haverhill, Mass.

☞ Mamma (to her little boy): "Now, Bennie, if you'll be good and go to sleep, mamma'll give you one of Dr. Ayer's nice sugar coated cathartic pills, next time you need medicine." Bennie, smiling sweetly dropped off to sleep at once.

☞ Rheumatism is caused by an acid in the blood; therefore, external treatment affords no permanent relief. To eliminate the poison and make a thorough cure of the disease, nothing else is so efficient as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Give it a trial. Price $1. Worth $5 a bottle.

On Sunday the tug Martin started for the "Soo" with three scows loaded with about 100,000 feet of timber from Nicholl's mill, to be used in L. E Allen's government contract there On Monday night the tug Rawson started with the pile driver, for the same place. The driver will also be used, when necessary, as a timber crane.

"All is not gold that glitters," is demonstrated by the return from the land of promise of thousands of disappointed Oklahoma boomers. If those in search of homes would turn their attention to northern Michigan, they will find, if not a "land of promise," at least a paradise as compared with Oklahoma. Now here in Charlevoix county we have good land, pure spring water and a fine climate, and where every man who is not afraid to work can find profitable employment.

We were not present at the last meeting of the council, but it is currently reported that some members of that body were greatly offended at the recent items in the JOURNAL, and to gratify themselves secured the passage of a motion to accede an offer from the editor of the Sentinel to print the proceedings free, and instructed the clerk to furnish the copy to that paper. When the full official proceedings are published, over the signature of the clerk, the JOURNAL's purpose will be accomplished, whether that publication be done in the JOURNAL or in some other paper.

Music, Flowers, and Goddesses.

The Detroit Journal, which has just divided $5,907.09 between the 19 charitables, said to have spent $281.29 for each, (the net results of the four days charity Floral Exhibition which it organized and recently conducted) is not satisfied with its first success, and is already planning for another and much greater affair for 1890. While the floral idea is to predominate, two new and immensely popular features are to be introduced.

The first is a musical festival on a scale broad enough to require the combined talent of all the musical societies of Detroit, assisted probably by those of many of the cities throughout Michigan.

The second feature is an adaptation from the legends of ancient Grecian mythology, so reproduced, that ladies from each charity which will participate in the profits of the enterprise, will erect miniature temples in the exhibition building, and dedicate them to Flora, Ceres, Pomona, or some one of the scores of mythical divinities, and then, people them with their own fair impersonations of nymphs, adorned with the exceedingly graceful ancient Grecian costumes which harmonize so well with flowers. After May 11th, the Detroit Journal will publish each Saturday an article on this subject to assist those who are to participate. This very enterprising newspaper has already secured the pledged assistance of the ladies, florists and ministers of Detroit. Room for double the accommodations has not been secured. The enterprise will be managed by W. H. Brearley, proprietor of the Detroit Journal.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell so well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits

CATARRH.—Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet containing this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 302 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

Sufferers from catarrhal troubles should read the above carefully. 16eow

Polluted Ice.

Users of ice must read up on the results of investigations of Kedzie, Pengree & Drudden, showing that ice taken from polluted streams is not purified by freezing. Kedzie tells us that ice from streams containing putrid vegetable matter or sewage is very deleterious. In 1878, at Rye beach, an epidemic broke out in a large hotel, and was traced to ice taken from an adjacent pond. The water of this pond in summer was found to be teeming with putrescent matter, organic matter, as well as bacteria, and contaminated by any contact or use of cold. Too many of our streams are the recipients of sewage, this is the price of civilization, and we must have it plain.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A PICTURE.

BY CLARA W. HOWARD.

To-night comes a picture before me,
As I sit in the firelight glow
Of a little brown cottage far dying—
'Tis a scene from long ago.

It carries me back to my childhood,
The same childish fancies I feel
As were conjured up by the firelight,
And the hum of the spinning-wheel.

I am back in the log-house kitchen,
With its fire-place deep and wide,
The back-log blazing brightly,
Queer shadows on every side.

Great sparks fly up the chimney,
The wind howls around the door,
While they will fall soon to-morrow,
Transformed into flakes of snow.

There, in the warmest corner,
Sits mother, her face in shade,
With a way on the spinning-wheel
Where fie dozes by starts and sits.
There, on the well swept hearthstone,
My brothers are playing a game,
Their merry laughs lighted up
By the blazing fore-stick's flame.

Grandma, knitting there in the corner,
In snowy kerchief and cap,
Grandma laying his pipe aside
To enjoy his evening nap.
Hush! the wind howls in the chimney,
Her work for the night is done,
And all the tasks were ended
With the setting of the sun.

My sisters are carding the fleecy wool
Into rolls for mother to spin,
She draws the wheel to the firside,
Her evening task to begin.
I can see her form in the firelight,
And the same dreamy fancies I feel
As when watching her tending a measure
To the tune of the spinning-wheel.

The wintry wind howls in the chimney,
And rattles the sashes doze,
Grandpa wakes from his dozing,
Calls "Sarah, the snow is a-comin,
What cared we for wintry weather?
And I the beast of them all.
Proudly enthroned on grandma's lap,
Unwinding her big blue ball.

Then pass the moments swiftly—
Grandma has finished her sock—
Lays her spin-jenny aside:
"'Tis nearly 9 o'clock."
Then little Sis, the pet, were asleep,
Tucked snugly away in her
Little bed in the corner, the drowsy lids
And pillows my dropping head.

To-night, by my lonely fireside,
I dream of the long ago,
And I sit in the firelight with grief and care,
Of my locks bespriukled with snow.
I am back in the fire-lit kitchen;
The same childish fancies I feel
As when mother's feet, in the firelight,
Kept time to the spinning-wheel.

The drowsy old clock on the mantel
Is ticking the hours away;
The embers are slowly turning
To ashes cold and gray.
Listening here to the wintry blast,
Thinking of those long ago,
Of that group, from the fireside vanished,
And the long silent spinning-wheel.

OWEN AND JASON BROWN

RECOLLECTIONS OF A VISIT TO THEIR CALIFORNIA HOME.

Climbing to the Summit of the Sierra Madre to Stake a Claim—Interesting Reminiscences of the Harper's Ferry Raid.

OWEN BROWN.

OWEN BROWN, son of John Brown, the hero of "Bleeding Kansas" and of Harper's Ferry, died at Pasadena, Cal., not long ago, aged 64 years. He was the third, in order, of John Brown's twenty children. He died as he had always lived, a single and a singular man.

Three years ago, writes Prof. L. B. Sperry of Carleton College, in the Chicago Inter Ocean, I landed for some time with his sister, Mrs. Henry Thompson, who was then living at Las Cacitas, a charming little place on the mountain side, about six miles from Pasadena, and only a few rods from the home occupied by Owen Brown and his brother, Jason. Being as share these interesting and notorious men, I made it convenient to be much in their company. I was anxious to study their character and habits, and also to learn from themselves certain inside facts about their participation in the Kansas troubles, and more especially some of the details of Owen's experiences in escaping from Harper's Ferry.

The first time I met Owen he had just returned from "staking a claim" on the very summit of the Sierra Madre range, at a point directly back of Las Cacitas, and 6,000 feet above the sea. I learned that he and Jason intended to make the ascent again soon, for the purpose of planting various seeds and cuttings to test the producing power of that altitude. A young clergyman named Fisher, from St. Paul, Minn., was also boarding at the Thompsons', and we two were accorded the privilege of accompanying the Browns on their second trip.

Standing by the door of their modest home, I asked, "How far is it from here to the spot you have selected?" "About two miles as the crow flies," he replied, "but not less than five miles as we must travel; and, to reach it, will require effort enough to take you at least twenty miles on an ordinary trail. I suspect that you and Fisher will hardly be able to make it in one day; but when you get tired we can camp for the night on the mountain side, and next morning we can finish the ascent."

A few mornings later, about 7:30 o'clock, our little caravan set out for the mountain top. Each of us carried on his back a bundle variously made up of blankets, provisions, drinking water, hatchets, seeds, etc.

Contrary to our expectation when we started, Fisher and myself were able to "pull through" in one day, and the setting sun saw us on the top of the mountain now known as "Brown's Peak." Charming spot! Delightful view! Sixty miles of seacoast and surf separating the ocean from a magnificent panorama of hill, valley, cities, hamlets, orange groves, orchards, vineyards, and, will drowns for the south west of us, and a confused medley of mountain peaks, ravines, forests, and shimmering cascades to the northeast of us. Such scenery filled Owen Brown's soul. He loved it tenderly and deeply. On such a spot he wanted to live and die and be buried.

Supper over, we hovered about the camp-fire till a late hour, talking of many things—but mostly of slavery. John Brown, Harper's Ferry, the war, and the events which immediately preceded it. Owen Brown was by nature reticent, but when he was in the vein he could be fully as entertaining as his father, and he was fully as well posted in the details of the Kansas troubles, and more especially some of the details of Owen's experiences in escaping from Harper's Ferry.

The first time I met Owen he had just returned from "staking a claim" on the very summit of the Sierra Madre range, at a point directly back of Las Cacitas, and 6,000 feet above the sea. Charming spot! Delightful view! Sixty miles of seacoast and surf separating the ocean from a magnificent panorama of hill, valley, cities, dezvous, and by various other methods of assistance, we expected to open the way for slaves in increasing numbers to escape from their masters, and be helped North. We expected that many who had been brought to us would secretly return and bring in others (with the assistance of friends) thus we hoped not only to liberate large numbers of slaves but to make slavery uncertain and unprofitable; and we hoped also to arouse—yes, to force to conclusion—the sentiment of the country, North and South.

"Father had not much hope from politics or parties; he believed that political action could not reach the life sentiment, and that public sentiment on the slavery question could be aroused only by striking collisions between slavery and freedom. One hit of contact, like the Oberlin rescue, he regarded as worth more than thousands of speeches or hundreds of volumes on the subject. Of course he feared that his method might lead to the use of firearms occasionally, but he hoped to avoid serious bloodshed. The conflict at Harper's Ferry was precipitated by treachery before we were ready, and father was compelled to act at once and unprepared. It had been arranged that the capture of the Ferry and its munitions should occur on Oct. 24, and assistance was on the way from the North, but it was precipitated on the 17th."

At the opening of the attack upon Harper's Ferry, Owen was at the house which was their base of supplies, about five miles away, in Maryland. On learning of the condition of affairs, he began getting the arms and supplies down to a schoolhouse about a mile from the Ferry; but, before this could be done, word was sent to him and his companions to escape as best they could, going down near to the scene of action, and finding that he could render no assistance to his father and his companions, who were then either shot or imprisoned in the engine-house, he and his companions, five in number, secured a small supply of blankets and provisions and "took to the woods." They began probably the most difficult and perilous flight for self-preservation that ever occurred in this country. They knew that they would be hotly pursued and carefully hunted, even with dogs, and felt sure that rewards would be offered for them and the country aroused. Captain Brown had impressed upon the minds of his companions that failure and capture meant to be hung for treason. The fleeing party, under the leadership of Owen, decided that they must keep on the mountains and in the woods; that they must travel largely by night and lie in concealment during the day; they must keep a constant and watchful guard at all times, and must build no fires; most of their food (after their little store should be exhausted) must consist of corn which they could forage from ungathered fields; they must neither shoot nor cook anything; and they must make their way well to the north and west in Pennsylvania or New York State before it would be safe to separate and take their chances (with fictitious names, of course) among strangers in the busy world. We expected that many who had been brought to us would secretly return and bring in others (with the assistance of friends) thus we hoped not only to liberate large numbers of slaves but to make slavery uncertain and unprofitable; and we hoped also to arouse—yes, to force to conclusion—the sentiment of the country, North and South.

BOOMERS FROZEN OUT.

THE OPENING OF OKLAHOMA—SUFFERING FOR NECESSARIES.

The Wild Rush to the New Eldorado—Hundreds Disappointed and Destitute—Into the Jaws of "Justice." Crown but Infested with Men Seeking Office.

[Arkansas City (Kan.) Cor.]

INFORMATION from Guthrie, A. T., the 23d inst., is to the effect that the cold wave has planted its seven-footed sole on Oklahoma. The city is still in high spirits and confidence is beginning to wane. The suffering of the 15,000 unsheltered and unprovisioned people is something that could not endured only amid such a furor. The Guthrie correspondents have been telegraphing the suffering the town and the country, but thousands more have poured in. There is a feeling of wild uncertainty and apprehension that amounts to distraction. There is no food, no water, no cover from the bitter cold of the nights and the withering heat of the days. The situation is appalling. The city is in a state of utterly incomprehensible confusion. Nothing is settled, every hour by the rival parties, as each secures a temporary ascendency. Not a building has been started, and but few tents have ventured to show their canvas. The city is a mass of wreck, ruins, and confusion. Nothing can be done in the way of building, and the cold and hunger of men is fearful.

The sight at Guthrie upon which the sun rose

this morning was surprising never before witnessed in the history of the world. The majority of the 15,000 people lay blankets upon the ground, either guarding their claims or slumbering in the hope of being able to hold them. Hundreds had been up all night, some had walked for miles in the cold, and some had spent the night in building houses, or rather in setting up the material for houses, which they intended to hold. The wind rose, but without cooling the air. It blew a hard, stinging sand into the flesh and filled the air with blinding alkali dust. To complete the general misery the sun came large, intensely cold, 15 people, fell the victims of exposure, and 100 were taken to the hospital and other tents and temporary houses.

The climate provokes an insatiable thirst, and water was the first supply to fail. There is no water in the city. The only water is strongly alkaline to drink. The surface water that takes its supply by a gravity pipe from a distant elevated spring affended the only potable drinkable water, and it is brackish. It was brought in with the first settlers, and the railway people called the military to protect it, fearing the most chance of gain. Guthrie is filling up with gamblers, thimble-rigpers and thieves, and the shrewdest and most unscrupulous schemes is practiced.

Marshal Nix, the newly appointed Marshal from Illinois, is here with his deputies, and has demonstrated his fitness by a wholesale raid on property. Nothing, however, can be done to remedy the rascally conduct of the Federal authorities, and their favorites until the courts are established. It was so evident from the first that controversy and bloodshed would be easy enough to stop runners of bloody collisions, that the report was sent out last night that three men had been killed near Guthrie. This proved utterly false. The story finally settled down to the fact that a Texas cowboy and a negro were given. The coroner's jury examined the scene, about three miles west of Guthrie, and found that the two men had divided the disputed claim and were sleeping in the same tent.

A MARSHAL INTERVIEWING A BOOMER.

Pistols were drawn twice last night and to-day in the town, but in each case one party retired before facing trouble.

Some substantial news fatalities in other parts of the country have occurred. At Caldwell, Marshal J. S. Vaughn, shot and killed Scott Collart, a wealthy resident of the Chickasaw Nation, who shot and killed over on the Kansas border by a man named Noland, who escaped.

Northwest of Caldwell, near Hunter, a young man named Martin was found by a patrol industrially shot through the head, and his horse, saddle, and accoutrements in the vicinity. Martin said that he had left his family on the Kansas side of the line, and, when the claims he had in mind. He had found it occupied by a man who had taken it, and he moved on and was shot and robbed. The dead man could not be identified. The patrol and Martin buried him, without coffin or shroud, in a shallow grave on the claim. When the case was reported to the nearest justice of the peace, he refused to issue a warrant for the arrest of the murderer, saying that it was a matter of international value. "My fee, madame," he quietly added, "is 500 francs." Opening the purse, Mme. la Comtesse took out the sum named, and, presenting it to Dr. Trousseau, remarked: "I am sorry you do not take presents, the purse contained 4,000 francs."

A NEW street superintendent ought to be able to pave his way into the good graces of his fellow-citizens.

GRAND PALACE HOTEL, GUTHRIE.

OKLAHOMA OR "PUNT."

A GENUINE OKLAHOMA SQUATTER.

A NEW TOWN THAT PROMISES TO BECOME FOPULOUS.

The Cunning of Swallows.

Birds are often said to possess instinct, as distinguished from intelligence, by which is meant, apparently, that such knowledge as they have is inherited, not acquired. "A bird always builds its nest in one way," it is said, but few statements could be less exact. Our common cliff swallow, known also as the eaves swallow and the "Republican," formerly built against the side of a cliff, and as a protection against the weather, but instead of being open at the top, was bottle shaped, the entrance being through a kind of neck at the side. Now that the country has become populous, however, this swallow has taken to nesting under the eaves of barns, where it is shielded from rain by the overhanging roofs.

Little by little, therefore, the wise bird has given up its more elaborate method of construction, till now you may see, side by side, nests that are simple mud saucers, nests that are built in the old fashioned bottle method, and nests half way between the two extremes, showing plainly that a process of adaptation is going on.

A Pennsylvania newspaper lately reported a very clever piece of work by a pair of these same eaves swallows. They had built their nest in the old style under the eaves of a barn, and when it was done an English sparrow took possession. The swallows made frantic efforts to dislodge the intruder, but could not drive her out. Then they went deliberately to work and plastered up the neck of the bottle with mud, burying the sparrow alive, after which they built another nest close by, and occupied it as if nothing had happened.—Exchange.

Don't Gaze in a Cat's Eye.

A gentleman on Blake street until yesterday had a very exalted opinion of the power of the human eye. He always claimed that a man could, by gazing into the eyes of a cat, fascinate or make the beast as harmless as a wax doll.

A grocer on that street has in his store a very large gray cat, named Thomas, that is not fascinated by a little bitter by any means.

The gentleman with the theory proposed to test it on this cat. A number of customers were present at the test. Mr. B. approached Thomas, who sat blinking near the cheese-box, and proceeded deliberately to gaze into his delion eyes. Thomas was evidently greatly affected by the human eyes so close to him, for he stood on his tail and suddenly reaching out one leg planted his claws into the face of Mr. B. Now with a wild, impetuous plant. This he did twice in rapid succession, and was about to get in his work for a third time, when, with an exclamation that sounded very much like an oath, the cat, Mr. B. struck the Thomas with his fist and knocked him off into the soft-soap barrel by the counter.

The magnetism of the human eye is a fact yet to be. Mr. B. now prefers the gentle influence of the catapult for real service.—Indianapolis Journal.

A Young Hero.

A boy about nine years old was bathing one day when, by some mischance, he got into deep water and began to sink. His cries attracted a man who ran to save him, but, lacking strength or skill, he also sank in the deep water. The river was full of two drowning brothers rose to the surface for the last time they saw a brother, the youngest of the family, running down the bank for the purpose of trying to save them. Then it was that the dying nine-year-old boy acted the part of a hero. Struggling he for self-death, he rose, cleared all his strength, and cried to his brother as above, "Don't come in, or father will lose all his boys at once!" Noble little fellow! Though dying, he forgot himself and thought only of his father's grief. He was a genuine hero. His brother obeyed his dying command, and was spared to comfort his father, when his two dead sons were taken from the river clasped in each other's arms. Boys, you are not called to be heroes in this way, but you are called to consider the feeling of your parents, and to study how to avoid giving them pain. Blessed are those children whose words and deeds make sweet music in their parents' soul.—Examiner.

Refused the Present.

The late Dr. Trousseau, a celebrated Parisian physician, had the reputation of being exceedingly sharp after his fees, though he always declined to take anything in the nature of a present from his clientele—perhaps because he thought the acceptance of such gifts might render it more difficult for him to exact his honoraria. Once Dr. Trousseau had been fortunate enough to cure the only child of one of the few rich members of the French aristocracy. When the child had become convalescent and had begun to pass by his last visit, with renewed thankful expressions and numerous speeches to the mother proved a small heaven, the mother produced a silken purse into Trousseau's hand. "Thank you, madame," he replied, "but, pardon me, I never accept presents," and he hurried out of her office, probably regarding both the purse and the appeals as things of equally pathematical value. "My fee, madame," he quietly added, "is 500 francs." Opening the purse, Mme. la Comtesse took out the sum named, and, presenting it to Dr. Trousseau, remarked: "I am sorry you do not take presents, the purse contained 4,000 francs."

A NEW street superintendent ought to be able to pave his way into the good graces of his fellow-citizens.

The Causes of Death.

Our readers are doubtless all familiar with the fabulous poisoning cases, which have recently come to light in Somerville, Mass., and elsewhere.

It seems that eight deaths have occurred from arsenical poisoning, and the question is, Shall we drop a few pages in the book of the murderers would have been detected, and their favorites until the courts are through? We see evident from the first that controversy and bloodshed would be easy enough to stop runners of bloody collisions, the report was sent out last night that three men had been killed near Guthrie. This proved utterly false. The story finally settled down to the fact that a Texas cowboy and a negro were given. The coroner's jury examined the scene, about three miles west of Guthrie, and found that the two men had divided the disputed claim and were sleeping in the same tent.

Disappointed Boomers Resolve to Invade the Cherokee Strip.

as witnesses, and one his horse across the intervening twelve miles and the two Canadian Rivers to Oklahoma City in forty minutes. He filed a homestead claim on the town site, and although the government claim jumper was there also, he succeeded in holding it against the claim confessed to the law. Every town site is being contested in the courts, and a stupendous lapse of legislation is looms.

A young man named Compte, who had filed on a claim in the Cherokee Strip, was murdered eleven miles northwest of the town. He was accompanied by a friend name unknown. The two had scarcely driven clears when a man, armed with a Winchester rifle, ordered them to halt, and without a word of Compte shoved fight, when the man shot him through the breast. The wounded man was dragged into the timber by his friend, and there died in half an hour. When the news reached Guthrie a posse of thirty men organized, and overtook the murderer about twelve miles north. The prisoner was brought back to Guthrie. Inquiry in the town seems to show that his name was probably C. V. Lacel.

Disappointed Boomers Resolve to Invade the Cherokee Strip.

[Arkansas City (Kan.) telegram.]

A meeting of Oklahoma boomers, disappointed in securing claims in the Territory, was held here. There was a large and enthusiastic attendance. Speeches were made denouncing the manner in which Oklahoma was settled. It was freely declared that large bodies of men served as United States Marshals in order to get into the country and select the best claims, and that this was unfair to a waiting settler. They came into the country home, and as they could not get them in Oklahoma they made a rush for the lands in the Cherokee strip. About five hundred men in this town have pledged themselves to go to the Cherokee strip and take claims, let the consequences be what they may. The government claim jumpers, who have driven back here from Oklahoma, and settled in the territory the first chance to get out, that must be moved on, and the government must protect the Territory is as great as in the north, and although the crowds are not nearly so numerous as in a more turbulent character.

A Texas named Dunn killed his best friend at noon on the southern line, with the soldiers

Plenty of Office-Seekers on Hand.

Candidates for city offices are canvassing Oklahoma City and Guthrie. Nearly every client twenty-five men are anxious to wave Guthrie as its first mayor. Prominent among these is ex-Illinois man who is well-known throughout the State, Gen. Jasper N. Reece, Tom Needles, the marshal, and a dozen others. Oklahoma is for a fair way to obtain recognition of her grievances.

The Causes of Death.

Our readers are doubtless all familiar with the fabulous poisoning cases, which have recently come to light in Somerville, Mass., and elsewhere.

It seems that eight deaths have occurred from arsenical poisoning, and the question is, Shall we drop a few pages in the book of the murderers would have been detected, and their favorites until the courts are through? We see evident from the first that controversy and bloodshed would be easy enough to stop runners of bloody collisions, the report was sent out last night that three men had been killed near Guthrie. This proved utterly false. The story finally settled down to the fact that a Texas cowboy and a negro were given. The coroner's jury examined the scene, about three miles west of Guthrie, and found that the two men had divided the disputed claim and were sleeping in the same tent.

Rose of Jericho.

A Pennsylvania botanical society has received a Rose of Jericho from Syria, of which species of flower it is said that when dry weather is prevalent it wraps itself into a ball, and is to all appearances dead. The wind blows it from the stalk, and it goes bounding along until it reaches a moist spot, where it unfolds its leaves, drops its seeds, and a garden of roses soon appears.

Deafness Can't Be Cured.

By local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by catarrh that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Very True.

Stern parent—Young man, I am astounded at your impudence. You seek to wed my daughter knowing her to be wealthy in her own right, while you haven't a cent.

Self-possessed youth—That's all right. What's the need of my having money when she has plenty?

WHEN a Turk dies, the legs are tied together and the arms stretched by the sides. The burial takes place as soon as possible after the death. The corpse is handled very tenderly, as the Turks believe any lack of tenderness would bring the curse of the dead man's soul upon them.

THE FIVE SISTERS.

There were five fair sisters, and each had an aim—
Flora would fain be a fashionable dame;
Schooled from infancy in selection to choose,
Coquettish Cora cared more for good looks;
A sou, anxious sister sighed after wealth;
Beautiful Sarah sought first for good health.

Cora's beauty quickly faded; Susan's eyesight failed from overstudy; Flora became nervous and fretful in striving after fashion, and a sickly family kept Anna's husband poor. But sensible Sarah took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and grew daily more healthy, charming and beautiful, and married rich.

Moral—To cleanse, purify and enrich the blood and insure a clear, blooming, rosy complexion, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

That Tired Feeling

Is experienced by almost everyone at this season, and many people resort to Hood's Sarsaparilla to drive away the lassitude and exhaustion. The blood is laden with impurities which have been accumulating for months, causes sleeplessness, and makes the mind fickle to think quickly, and the body to still slower to respond. Hood's Sarsaparilla is just what is needed. It purifies, vitalizes, enriches the blood, makes the head clear, creates an appetite, overcomes that tired feeling, tones the nervous system, and imparts new strength and vigor to the whole body.

"My appetite was poor, I could not sleep, had lost about a great deal, pains in my back, my bowels did not move regularly. Hood's Sarsaparilla in a short time did me so much good that I feel like a new man. My pains and aches are relieved, my appetite improved." GEORGE F. JACKSON, Roxbury Station, Conn.

"For years I was sick every spring, but last year took Hood's Sarsaparilla and have not seen a sick day since." G. W. SLOAN, Milton, Mass.

A short old man in a long gray beard appeared in the streets of Chicago on the afternoon of Christmas through Fulton market about noon and stopped at a wagon of grapes were displayed. "How you sell?" pointing to open basket. "Concords, Catawbas and Malagas, for half the price." The small man stepped behind the wagon and began to free his fruitfully pulled off a bunch in a basket of Concords, saying that he wanted Catawbas, and began on

The fruit vender, who was busy with a customer, now noticed the man's actions and exclaimed: "How much for grapes?" inquiringly, eating a Delaware. "Forty cents a basket." "Too much," said the man, throwing down two more Concords. "Are you a wholesale dealer?" "No." "Own a vineyard, maybe?" "No." "Where did you learn your trade? Where's your home?" "Well, see here, old man, I eat about a pound and a half of grapes every day, and I'll tell you what I do: I just go down to the market and buy a basket, and then I eat the grapes, and I don't want any more around here."—New York Sun.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Wilson.

Warm and sultry.

Richard Lewis, Ab Nowland, M. Hudkins and others have large fallows on fire.

Annie Keat of South Arm, began school in district No. 3, on Monday. Thirteen pupils enrolled.

Oliver Smith had his foot jammed badly between a dray and stump last week. He is able to be about again.

Wm. White of Boyne, called on J. R. Vance on business Monday.

Mrs. S. P. Smith and Mrs. Kerlskin of Advance, were present at the funeral on Sunday.

Eld Scofield preached at the Nicloy schoolhouse in South Arm on Sunday afternoon.

Al. Kinney, wife and children passed through here on Friday, on their way to Boyne City.

A bee was held on Saturday afternoon for clearing up the school yard in district No. 3. Not one-half of the district responded to the call, but the yard was cleared just the same.

Fishing seems to be the chief diversion now-o nights. Some go to Advance, others to Intermediate and return tired and successful.

Ed. Nowland has purchased forty acres of land from Mr. Hudkins, and afterwards he sold half of it to his nephew, Philo Nowland, who is chopping and clearing preparatory to putting in a crop.

Mrs. Cornelius Deitz died on Friday last after several years illness. She was an old resident of this county having came here 17 years ago. She leaves several children to mourn her loss, only three of whom were present at the funeral. The services were conducted by Eld. Grover on Sunday last, the text being Luke 16-25, "Son, Remember." A large concourse of people gathered to pay respects to an old friend and neighbor

Advance.

MAY 7.—Mrs. F. E. Miller is on the sick list.

Ira Magee has rented the Norton farm.

School commenced in the Beers district on the 6th; Miss Florence Price teacher.

A sailing vessel is here taking on a cargo of lumber for Mr. Platen.

Mr. Willis is painting his house, and with its gandy coat of green it looks splendid.

John Backenstose and family have moved into Advance. Mr. B. is intending to go to New York to spend the summer.

Jake Backenstose got his finger smashed while loading lumber on the vessel.

The steamer Florence made her first appearance at our docks last Friday, and commenced making two trips a day between Charlevoix and Boyne City yesterday (6th). She is a nice steamer with a splendidly fitted up cabin. We understand she ran on Reid's lake near Grand Rapids last summer, and was retitled last winter at Grand Haven.

An overflow of Platen's mill pond last Friday night caused considerable damage to the mill by undermining the flume.

Fires are burning in the woods in nearly every direction, causing damage in some places. We hear of quantities of wood being burned in the woods.

One of Mr. Keefer's horses dropped dead in the road near town the other day. He had owned the horse but two weeks. This is the second horse that Mr. K. has lost within the last four weeks.

Promptness.

First a cell, then a comfy, then consumption, then death. "I took Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption the moment I began to cough, and I believe it saved my life."—Walter A. Walker, Conductor, Wilkesbarre, Pa. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co., Druggists, Charlevoix.

Inwood.

MAY 8.—The shower last night livened things wonderfully.

Mrs. Cummings died at her home at the Soo last Friday. She was a daughter-in-law of Mr. Cummings of this place.

A Sunday school has been organized at the Porter school house with Mrs. Porter as superintendent.

George Olney is on the sick list.

The fire at and around Smithson's camp has caused a great deal of anxiety and excitement during the last two days, but as yet no serious damage has been done.

O. D. Hilton feels quite proud of his new orchard just set out.

John Wells and Albert O'Brien are drawing wood for McDermott in Hayes.

Rumors of weddings are in the air. Hon. Wm. Harris returned to Lansing Monday.

Miss Hincher commenced the summer term of school in the McGee district Monday.

Miss Carrie Hilton is in Ironton this week.

Dr. N. J. Perry sold Mr. Wilkinson of Atwood, a fine organ Saturday.

The Sunday school at Hilton's school house is progressing finely under the superintendence of O. B. Weed.

Henry Hilton spent Sunday in Hayes, visiting——friends.

A son arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred VanDusen, on Thursday, May 2, and Alfred is happy.

Although the frog may not rank as the most musical, it certainly is a noisy harbinger of summer, and its evening melodies are now heard throughout the land, reminding us that "there's music in the air."

Ironton.

MAY 8.—A very refreshing rain last night makes everything look fresh and beautiful this morning and has cooled down some of the forest fires which have been raging in this vicinity. The P. L. I. Co. lost considerable wood by the fires.

The funeral of Lance Campbell who died so suddenly Sunday morning of heart disease, took place yesterday from their residence. Elder Grover preached the funeral sermon to a large congregation. Mr. Campbell was well known and respected and his family have the sincere sympathy of all in their affliction.

A sad accident occurred yesterday morning in Ironton. George Southerly's little girl, about three years old took a teacup from the table containing some strong lye and drank a portion of it before discovering what it was. Vinegar and other remedies were at once administered, but she is in a very critical condition and but little hopes are entertained of her recovery.

Owen Hammond and Miss Daisy Allen, both of this place, were married Wednesday, May 1st, at the Congregational church, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. After the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the residence of the bride's parents, to a large number of friends. The happy couple are comfortably settled in Mr. Galbraith's house, he having moved into his new house. We wish them a long and pleasant voyage on the sea of matrimony.

Mr. Tuttle is spending a few weeks in Berrien county, with friends.

John Munro is driving piles at the ferry approach.

Atwood.

May 6.—Fine growing weather.

Henry Biglow moved to Smithson's Camp today.

Plenty of fire in the woods.

The Catholics will give an oyster supper Thursday night, the proceeds to complete the interior of their church.

There will be a dance one week from Friday night, and nothing but a dance.

D. Flanigan is putting up a frame for a saw mill.

Henry Kanagy has gone to Smithson's camp.

Mr. Lapeer of Harbor Springs is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Frank Cummings.

Boyne City.

MAY 6.—Glad to be able to give a good report of the weather.

Plum trees are beginning to blossom and garden planting is in order.

On Friday last the trim steamer, Florence, made her first trip from Charlevoix to Boyne and was warmly welcomed by our citizens.

Wm. White's saw mill shut down a day or two last week to put in some improvements and new machinery, but her whistle again disturbed our slumbers this morning.

Hon. Wm. Harris, while on his way to Lansing today, stopped in Boyne for a few hours, greeting his numerous friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kenney, of Echo, Antrim county, were the guests of Mrs. Kenney's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Jones, over Sunday.

We met Zachariah Morgan recently and his face wore such a smile we knew something had happened, and there had. It was a first grandchild, and he had been smiling four or five days.

Miss Sadie Jones commenced her second term of school in Echo, Antrim county, today.

Wm. J. Lewis has sold his meat market business and groceries to Wm. J. Pearson.

Wm. J. Lewis is building an addition to the Commercial House and has bridged the Boyne for the accommodation of his guests.

There are rumors to day of several losses by fire of wood and bark in this vicinity in the last day or two.

The "Little Nugget" company did as they promised in one respect. They kept the audience in a roar of laughter from the raising to the dropping of the curtain, in every scene. Those who did not attend missed a night's fun.

☞Dyspepsia causes depraved blood, which, in time, affects every organ and function of the body. As a remedy for these troubles, nothing can approach Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It vitalizes the blood, strengthens the stomach, and corrects all disorders of the liver and kidneys.

☞Never had a preparation a more appropriate name than Ayer's Hair Vigor. When the capillary glands become enfeebled by disease age, or neglect, this dressing imparts renewed life to the scalp, so that the hair assumes much of its youthful fullness and beauty.

Litney Sisters, (Mrs. M. Litney and Mrs. C. H. Litney) will open a stock of ladies' furnishing goods in the Wisal building, one door north of Litney & Carr's millinery rooms, in a few days. The goods are now on the road, and the full particulars will be given later.

The size of the audience at the "Little Nugget" entertainment proves conclusively that this town will not submit to a 50 and 75 cent rate for tickets. There was a lot of kicking on the street as soon as the prices were announced, and the reserved seat board showed that the kick meant business by the number of people at the doors. It will have to be an extra popular company to fill the house at 50 and 75 cents.

A Chicago telegram on May 12th says the Osogo arrived there at 2 a. m., making the trip from Buffalo, 871 miles, in fifty-eight hours and eighteen minutes. This is two hours and forty-two minutes better than her previous trip, and two hours and thirty-seven minutes better than the best record ever made, that of the Chicago on her last trip up. Some portions of the run was made at the rate of seventeen miles per hour.

At the meeting of the school house committee Tuesday evening, the committee voted five to three in favor of the Hess system. The Sentinel states that their vote has been reconsidered, and that the job will be let to the lowest bidder next Monday. At six o'clock last night the chairman of the committee knew nothing of any reconsideration of the vote, and he would like to know by what authority the Sentinel makes that statement.

INCENDIARISM.

An Unsuccessful Attempt to Burn the Residence of E. H. Green.

About 6.00 o'clock Sunday morning, E. H. Green heard the cracking of fire in his cellar, and on investigation found a pile of kindling wood burning. Having extinguished the first, he found three other places with fire, the kindling wood having evidently been saturated with kerosene. An alarm was given, but the fire was extinguished before the fire department arrived.

There is every indication that the fire was the work of an incendiary, but so far there is no clue to the perpetrator.

Death at Kalamazoo.

A most distressing accident occurred at Kalamazoo last Wednesday evening, resulting in the instant death of five ladies, most of them well known members of the Charlevoix summer resort. About 6.30 a street car was crossing the Michigan Central tracks, and was struck by a switch engine, demolishing the car and killing five of the ten occupants. The killed were

MRS. ALEXANDER HADDOCK,
MRS. M. E. WYETLES,
MRS GERTRUDE TILLOTSON,
MRS. GEORGE B. SMILEY,
MRS. MIDDLETON.

Those in the car who escaped with injuries only are

MRS. VANANTWERP,
MRS. S. A. GIBSON,
MRS. JONATHAN BARNES,
L. C. LULL,
DR. SUTTON.

All the victims are prominent in Kalamazoo social circles, and well known throughout the state, and almost the entire city is in mourning.

An investigation into the cause and responsibility is in progress.

Grand Floral Annual.

Our enterprising dry goods merchants, A. T. Washburne & Co., are preparing for their annual floral opening which occurs next week, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Monday, May 23, 24, 25, and 27.

It will be a treat to lovers of the beautiful as well as a chance to inspect the now fully complete stock. There will be the largest collection of potted plants and flowers ever displayed in Northern Michigan, and all will be on sale at a very low price. People out of town will be invited to pass by coming miles to see what a firm can do, who are chock full of business push and get there the stuff.

Band Concert.

The Charlevoix band, assisted by Chas. F. Dixon, of East Jordan, the Misses Blakely, of Petoskey, and Prof. Kuthnik, of Bay City, will give their second semi-annual band concert, at Bartholomew's opera house, Friday evening, May 17, 1889. Admission 25 cents, reserved seats 35 cents. Excursions will be run from East Jordan and Boyne City. Tickets at the drug stores.

Attractions at Bartholomew's.

Among the attractions booked for Bartholomew's opera hall in the near future are Alta Heywood, Scofield's Quinnette Banjo Club, and Pickett & Frost's Ladies brass band concert and theatrical company. Still others are to come, but the dates are not fixed. Charlevoix will be well supplied with amusements this year.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sun, Druggist, Tyrone, Ind., testifies: I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of rheumatism of 15 years' standing. Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony to this the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half a dollar a bottle at G. G. Hines & Co.'s drug store. 2

Removed.

On account of the change of postmaster, on next Monday the JOURNAL will be moved to the rooms over Nettleton's wagon shop, and will be ready for business there in a few days.

The Regatta Meeting.

From the Sentinel.

At a special meeting called by the chairman of the Regatta committee, Mr. Geo. Miller, Monday evening last a communication was received from Mr. C. W. Chauncey, secretary and treasurer of the Northwestern Amateur Rowing Association, proposing to hold their annual Regatta in Charlevoix waters, providing the people would raise the sum of $1,000 or $1,100. This amount goes for advertising the regatta from Maine to California, as crews will be entered from all sections of the country. The name of the association is a sufficient guaranty that if the required sum is raised one of the finest regattas ever held on Michigan waters will be the result.

A list was made of amounts it was thought could be raised. The two resorts were assessed $200 each, and Mr. Fred A. Smith was requested to correspond with the several railroad and lake transportation companies as to what aid could be secured from them. In the meantime, the amounts pledged by several citizens were considered so satisfactory, that Mr. Secretary Forbes was requested to telegraph Mr. Chauncey that the necessary money would be forthcoming.

It now rests with the people of Charlevoix to come forward and show their public spirit. Let none be backward, and good results will follow.

Democrats for June.

How people live in New York is a subject of general interest, and it is fully treated of, from the lowest hovels to the palaces on Fifth Avenue, in a beautifully illustrated article in Democrat's Monthly Magazine for June. It takes you, by way of illustrations and descriptions, from the squalor of the 5-cent lodging houses, through the various phases of life in the gorgeous modern flats and the palatial homes of the Astors and Vanderbilts. In this number is printed also "Amusements in January," which, differing so radically from our amusements, are amusing to read about, especially as the article is so finely illustrated. "How to form a Club," or "Many June," is necessarily well written, and in a chatty way gives much good advice. There are numerous other interesting articles and amusing stories, and a full-page water color of "Water-Lillies" is well worth framing. It is a beautiful number and will no doubt have an immense sale.

☞We notice a new departure in the treatment of disease that promises to revolutionize the medicine business. It consists in the collection of the specifics used by noted specialists of Europe and America and bringing them within the reach of all. For instance, the treatment pursued by special physicians who treat indigestion, stomach and liver troubles only, was obtained and prepared. The treatments of other physicians, celebrated for curing catarrh, were procured, and so on till these incomparable cures now include disease of the lungs, kidneys, female weakness, rheumatism, nervous debility and piles. Originated and used by specialists, being a positive cure for each disease, these preparations are the best remedies procurable. We advise all to send a two cent stamp to the Chase Medical Dispensary, 175 West Adams St., Chicago, Ill., and receive by return mail their interesting hand book. 26to

Triplets in Greece.

Some interesting data respecting the frequency of triplets in the human race are being collected and elaborated by Dr. B. Ornstien, late surgeon general of the Greek army. While on an inspection tour through western Greece he discovered the fact that triplets are more frequently found there than in any other portion of that kingdom. Great difficulty is experienced, however, respecting information as to the age reached by either or all of the children.—New Orleans Picayune.

A Wonderful Diamond.

A remarkable precious stone has been discovered recently. It was a diamond of the white color, weighing about four carats and handsomely cut, which had cracked into two equal parts revealing in its center another diamond. The interior stone was a pentahedron, with facets upon it as regular and perfect as if they had been cut by a skillful lapidary. So perfectly did the little diamond fit into its matrix that it was impossible when the three pieces of each combination were put together. The impossibility of putting two diamonds together in such a way by art is beyond question. It was the work of nature, but what natural law, or perversion of law, had such a amazing effect was far beyond even the theorizing of those who inspected the stone.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Apotheoses from the Study.

The philosopher's trouble is that, while he can give fifty years to evaluating life impartially, life has spent several thousand years in shaping his prejudices.

In moments of decision there is danger of mistaking the exhaustion of long spiritual struggle for resignation to fate.

Faith, like any virtue, has its test, and probably the reason for inexplicable evil.

An optimist is an unreflective individual with nerves at concert pitch.—Century.

Test of Death.

Many tests have been suggested to define whether or not life is extinct. A death test approved by some of the most recent, and held to be of the most reliable, is called the somnio-hypodermic test. In using it test the operator injects one hypodermic syringe of strong solution ammonia under the skin of the arm or some other convenient portion of the body. If the body be not dead—if there be the faintest circulation—the ammonia will produce on the skin, at the point where it was injected, a pink red patch, on the surface of which raised red spots will appear; but if there be absolute death, there will be produced a brown dark blotch which is definitely conclusive against any possible vitality.—Boston Herald.

Pollution Less.

Users of ice must read up on the recent investigations of Kedzie, Pengree and Prudden, showing that ice taken from polluted streams is not purified by freezing. Kedzie tells us that if ice from streams containing rotting vegetable matter or sewage is used it induces diarrhœa. In 1878, at Rye, such an epidemic broke out in a large hotel, and was traced at last to ice taken from a adjacent pond. The water of this pond in summer was foul, and stinking with putrescent matter, organic matter, as well as bacteria, not eliminated by any ordinary process of cold. Too many of our readers are the recipients of sewage, this is the age of civilization, and we must have it pure.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In Honor of Burns.

A Burns monument to celebrate the birthday of the poet is an annual custom in Leslie, Fifeshire. At the late celebration twenty-four pioneers, merchants and farmers, mounted and dressed to represent the principal characters in Burns' works, carried the street headed by a volunteer band and accompanied by a crowd of people. Burns himself appeared in blue coat, buff breeches and white stockings, and among Johnnie, Auld Mare Maggie, Souter Johnnie, Au

ANOTHER FORTY-NINER GONE.

Samuel Brannan, a Once Wealthy California Pioneer, Passes Away.

Samuel Brannan, one of California's pioneers, died at Escondido, San Diego County, Cal., at the age of seventy years. Brannan was chosen by Brigham Young to bring a colony of Mormons round Cape Horn to California. He reached there in 1848, but had only got well settled on Sacramento River, near Sutter's Fort, when Marshall discovered gold in Sutter's mill race. Brannan engaged in speculation and soon became wealthy. He lost his money, however, through carelessness induced by excessive drink, and when he died he had nothing left save land granted him by the Mexican Government as compensation for loss made during the Maximilian war. In the height of his fortune he was worth $2,000,000.

LIBBY PRISON IN A WRECK.

The War Relic Meets with Disaster While on the Way to Chicago.

A freight train on the Chesapeake & Ohio Road, which was transferring the famous Libby Prison from Richmond to Chicago, was wrecked seven miles east of Maysville, Ky., by the breaking of an axle of one of the cars. The remains of the war relic were profusely scattered about, and people flocked to the scene to secure old bricks and timber as mementos.

IRVING LATIMER GUILTY.

The Jury, After a Few Minutes' Consultation, Declares He Slew His Mother.

The jury in the Latimer murder case at Jackson, Mich., returned a verdict of "guilty of murder in the first degree." They were out but seven minutes. Latimer took the verdict with indifference, and calmly smoked a cigar on his way back to his cell.

What Constitutes Timber Land.

Secretary Noble has rendered an important decision in the case of James Hair, of Kiowa, Kansas, in which he reverses the rulings of the department during the last administration in relation to timber-culture entries. Hair's entry was not allowed because there were two cottonwood trees and four cottonwood sprouts on the land, the Land Commissioner holding that the words "devoid of timber" in the timber-culture act necessarily meant "without timber" or "destitute of timber." Secretary Noble says the intent of Congress in passing the act was to encourage timber-culture, and that it was not the purpose to deprive the occupants of the vast prairies of the West of the benefits of the act if there happened to be a single tree upon the section. He holds that the words "prairie land or land devoid of timber" within the spirit of the act meant land practically so.

Paris' Great Show.

The great French exposition, the greatest the world has ever seen, is open at Paris, France. The formal ceremony of giving to the people this magnificent show took place when President Carnot delivered an address and touched the button that set the vast machinery in motion. Only 1,000 people were able to see the real ceremony inside the grand vestibule, or to hear President Carnot's speech, which, however, was a very good effort. Probably 20,000 people went in on tickets. The scene was a magnificent one, and the crowd a prodigious one.

German Proposals for Samoa.

It is stated that Germany will consent that Malietoa be reinstated as king of Samoa provided the United States Government purchases the German plantations or guarantees the payment if Samoans purchase them. Germany will further waive her demands for the punishment of Mataafa if the relatives of the Germans who were slain are amply compensated. Germany will not claim political preponderance.

Washington Paragraphs.

Assistant Secretary of the Interior Sims has decided that appointments to service under the census act are not within the civil-service rules.

Maj. George D. Davis has been selected to succeed Col. Lasella as head of the commission in charge of the publication of the rebellion records.

Charged with Embezzling $12,000.

Lincoln Curtis, chief salesman for Congdon & Aylsworth, wholesale boot and shoe dealers of Providence, R. I., has been arrested, charged with the embezzlement of $12,000. His method was to ship goods to houses in New York and other cities without entering the shipment on the books.

A NOTED POLITICIAN DEAD.

W. H. Barnum, Chairman of the National Democratic Committee, Passes Away.

Ex-Senator William H. Barnum, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, died at Lime Rock, Conn. He had been confined to his bed but two or three days, but his death had been momentarily expected. He had been very feeble ever since his unknown fate in the Presidential campaign.

Senator Barnum was born in 1818, and received only a common school education. While a youth he began to display that ability for business which afterward made him the wealthiest man in Connecticut. He started in Lime Rock, Litchfield County, Conn., about forty miles from New Haven. Mr. Barnum's public political career began in 1866, when he was elected to the House of Representatives as a Democrat. He was re-elected the next year, but was defeated by the Moses Pitkin Wright faction in 1868. In 1869 and 1870 Mr. Barnum was a member of the Democratic State Committee, and was chosen chairman of the committee in the latter year. Upon the death of Orville H. Ingersoll, Mr. Barnum was chosen to fill the vacancy in the United States Senate occasioned by that event. He was appointed March, 1876, when he was succeeded by Orville H. Platt, who was then a young man. In 1877 Mr. Barnum resigned the chairmanship of the Democratic caucus. After the meeting of the Senate that year, it was discovered that there was a serious difference of opinion as to the propriety of his resignation. The Democratic Committee, however, had conferred to the candidate for his decision, when he selected as sure one, Senator Bayard, Senator Thurman and his friends, who favored the Senator from Delaware, and those from the Valley. As a political manager he was outdone and was, perhaps unsuspicious of it.

TENDING DOWNWARD.

Prices Go Lower and Collections Are Bad in Most Places.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s review of trade for last week is as follows:

The unprecedented interruption of business by unusual preparations and calculations for the week nearly a month in commercial or industrial affairs, and the unfavorable weather, gave a surface appearance of greater activity Thursday and Friday, but it is not too early to judge which way the wind blows, and the reports from other cities, though nearly all speak of a fair business, show no material improvement. The situation seems better at Milwaukee, satisfactory at Omaha, good at Cleveland and to most branches, but continued at a low rather dull at Kansas City and St. Paul, and very dull at Memphis, Atlanta, Savannah, Mobile, Iron, coal, and lumber trades. Collections are far from satisfactory at Milwaukee and Cleveland, and at Detroit, but at other times the situation seems fairly satisfactory. At New York it is reported that the failures have been unfortunately the most numerous since 1885, within reason. Reports about the wool trade are contradictory. A report that the Treasury may not decide the woolen worsted question for months, discourages some, while large quantities of goods ordered have been delivered, and more are called for by dealers. Otherwise the woolen trade shows a little improvement. Silks are quiet, but linens are quite active. A big business is done in coal and iron and tinnes. The paper trade is active. The slow movement of cotton goods continues, and Lower Wheat tended downward, bulling sold at 84c, Corn declined ¼ and oats 1 cents. Pork is unchanged, with lard and hogs a shade higher. Coffee and sugar are unchanged, but oil is up 1 cent, and petroleum 5 cents. Wool declined 2½ at Boston, and for the previous week.

HALF KILLED AN UMPIRE.

Defeated Ball Players on Long Island Probably Beat and Stab the Official.

A game of base-ball was played at Winfield, L. I., between the Athletics, of Long Island City, and the Excelsiors, of Winfield. The Athletics won. The defeated club took exception to the rulings of Umpire Robert Doyle, and as he was about leaving the ground one of the Excelsior club struck him over the head with a base-ball bat, knocking him down. Before his friends could interfere the rest of the defeated club joined in beating him. He attempted to defend himself, and during the fight was stabbed in low the left eye and through the right hand. The Athletes finally succeeded in driving his assailants away. Doyle was picked up and carried off. The refractory members of the Excelsior club wished him at the depot, thinking he would take the train from there to Long Island City. He is seriously hurt.

GOVERNMENT CROP REPORT.

More Rain Needed in Most Localities from Dakota to South.

The Government crop report for the week ending Apr. 30 says:

In the greater part of the central valleys and Southern States the weather has been favorable to farm work during the past week, or since the last report, in most sections. The temperature has been unusually high, and especially favorable for planting, which has been in full progress for days further advanced than usual. The rainfall has been light, but in some sections generally throughout the eastern, central and corn regions of the Mississippi, Ohio, and Missouri Valleys, except in Upper Michigan and Northern Wisconsin, where large excesses are reported, it has been sufficiently abundant to insure good growth of vegetation. Reports from the Texas coast northward to Dakota, Minnesota, and Northern Michigan also in the Ohio Valley, where the rainfall for the season has been greatly in excess, the reports indicate that the ground is in good condition. Some lowa there has been about 40 per cent of the normal rainfall, and in all of the States west of the Mississippi, from the west gulf northward to Dakota, the rainfall has been deficient, and there was scarcely an acre of corn and wheat which are reported in splendid condition, and corn in Illinois and Indiana, which is in good condition in rain-fall from Kentucky northward to Michigan, and Ohio, and Pennsylvania, which are greatly in need of rain.

THE CHOSEN FEW.

President Harrison Makes Known His Choice for Various Offices.

The President has made the following appointments:

Andrew J. Evans, of Texas, to be Attorney of the United States for the Western District of Texas, vice Thomas S. Maxey, who is appointed by the President to be Attorney for the United States for the Western District of Indian Territory, vice Isaac C. Parker, who has resigned. Mr. Evans is a brother of the Chief Justice of Arkansas, is a brother of the Clerk of the Supreme Court of Arkansas, and is related to the best election, and whose subsequent nonpartisan record has been such as to justify the service originally, and during the war, accepted from the Confederacy, and who has been a consistent Republican since the war.

AID FOR EVICTED TENANTS.

A Scheme on Foot to Establish a Factory in a Poor Irish District.

A number of prominent citizens of Boston, Mass., are contemplating a plan to help the evicted tenants in Ireland by establishing in one of the poorer districts of that country a factory where the evicted persons can find employment in making boots, shoes, clothing and underwear, the money to start the enterprise being raised by popular subscription among friends of the Irish cause in the United States. The originators of the scheme propose to go to Ireland personally to superintend the work of carrying it out, and they will first submit the matter to the judgment of Messrs. Parnell, Dillon, and O'Brien. They will be no attempt to do anything which could possibly lead the English Government to object to the plan.

TWO KILLED, ONE MAYBE KILLED.

A Serious Collision on the Northern Pacific Between a Passenger and Freight.

The Northern Pacific west-bound limited passenger train collided with freight No. 18 near Crystal Springs, thirty-six miles west of Jamestown, N. D., killing two men, one of the passenger, and Postal Clerk Slattery of Minneapolis, Dangerously injured, the Postal Clerk Lewis, Slattery had their legs and arms broken and were badly scalded, but will recover. The train was running on time a curve, and were only ten car lengths away when the danger was discovered. The engineers and firemen of both trains jumped, and all but Boss escaped without serious injury, but the mail, baggage-cars, and both engines and most of the freight cars left the track and were demolished. Three carloads of horses were killed outright.

CYCLONE IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The Town of Warsaw Badly Damaged—Many People Seriously Hurt.

Warsaw, in the eastern part of North Carolina, was struck by a terrific cyclone. Half fell with such rapidity and violence as to lie eight inches deep in thirty-six seconds. Many people were caught and almost bodily. Large houses were torn up so that they are not habitable. The seminary building was split open and nearly destroyed. The Presbyterian church was totally demolished. Trees were torn up and scattered like leaves. No loss of life is reported, but many people were seriously hurt by the flying timbers. Strawberries are the principal article of carry production there. Hundreds of acres were ruined. Exclusive of loss to these crops the damage will exceed $10,000.

BOUGHT A MONSTER GAS WELL.

The Standard Oil Company in Possession of the Finding Gas Territory.

The Standard Oil Company has just made a deal that has scared Findlay, Ohio, badly as a cyclone. The great company has bought the monster Mellott gas well, which is situate within the city limits, and is considered the biggest gas well in Ohio, if not in the world. The Findlay Gas Trustees and the Gas Board of Trustees were negotiating for its purchase. The Standard paid $1500 cash for the well and 18 per acre per annum for 500 acres of gas territory surrounding the well. This gives the Standard a hold on the finding gas belt for which it has long been scheming, and it will be able to control it well soon be at the mercy of the giant octopus.

SIXTEEN ICE-HOUSES DESTROYED.

Terrific Explosion of Dynamite During a Fire Near Port Jervis, N. Y.

A terrific explosion near La Porte, Ind., aroused citizens from their beds and led them to the immense ice-houses of the Washington Ice Company, on Stone Lake, near the city limits. In some mysterious way the tool-house had caught fire, causing a quantity of dynamite stored there to explode, setting fire to and destroying sixteen ice-houses and their contents, together with twenty Lake Shore freight cars. Charles Ahlis, son of the Superintendent, was fatally burned. Losses are estimated at $80,000, with only $9,500 insurance in local agencies, the balance being in Chicago agencies, where the companies' offices are.

Tips to Politicians.

On the 28th ballot, at Emporia, Kan., the Republicans of the Fourth District nominated Harrison Kelley for Congress.

A Washington, D. C., special of the 30 inst. says: The President has sent a telegram to Chicago asking Frank Palmer if he will accept the office of Public Printer. The appointment of Captain Meredith, also of Chicago, as Chief of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, will probably be announced at once.

The Drama.

Denman Thompson's new play, "The Two Sisters," will be seen in Chicago, at McVicker's Theater, another week. Milo Rhea, in her new play, "The Case Vidal," which has been received so favorably in the East, appears at Hooley's Theater. An acrostic of its title, written by Harry B. Smith, of Chicago, won the prize offered by Manager McVicker for the best story, in verse, of "The Tempest."

To Manufacture Cement.

A company of Englishmen has been quietly buying up the chalk bluff land along the Mississippi River, between Quincy and Louisiana, Mo., for the purpose of building a mill great mills for the manufacture of cement. An expert in the employ of the famous Portland, England, cement works is there experimenting, and he announces the cement equal to the Portland can be made from the chalk stone which abounds there.

McCullough Confesses the Murder.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS.

EVENTS AND INCIDENTS THAT HAVE LATELY OCCURRED.

An Interesting Summary of the More Important Doings of Our Neighbors—Weddings and Deaths—Crimes, Casualties, and General News Notes.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

—The Secretary of the State Board of Health has just issued his sixteenth annual report. The first part of the report consists of a compilation of meteorological conditions, and a contribution to the study of the causes of sickness, based on weekly reports of sickness by physicians in the State. Probably the most important article in the report is a paper by Dr. Baker, in which reports of sickness and meteorological conditions are so grouped as to show the relation of certain meteorological conditions to diseases of the lungs and air passages. This paper not only presents evidence concerning these diseases in Michigan but also in the United States armies, in the native troops of India, and in London, England, for a period of thirty years. These facts, gathered over wide areas, seem to show that influenza, tonsilitis, bronchitis, and pneumonia have their sets rolling cause, viz., the inhalation of cold, dry air. The paper explains the order of succession of these diseases from simple catarrys, or common cold, to pneumonia. Tables and diagrams are also presented showing the rise of the communicable diseases, which, as a rule, gain access to the body through the air passages, as influenced by changes in the atmospheric temperature, almost invariably rising after the temperature falls and falling when the temperature rises. Dr. Baker's explanation of this is that the albuminous exudations which result from inflammation of the air passages are more than usual supply a place favorable for the reception and reproduction of the specific germs of these diseases. Other articles in the report deserving special mention are a document giving rules concerning the prevention and the extinction of small-pox, a report on alleged nuisances in Michigan, and especially a paper on communicable diseases in Michigan during the year. The reports compiled in this last article show that in those outbreaks of scarlet fever and diphtheria in Michigan in which isolation and disinfection (as recommended by the State Board) were neglected, there were four to five times as many cases and deaths as in those outbreaks where these precautions were taken. The report is all the stronger because it is in harmony with the facts collected during the preceeding year. Together, they indicate a saving during the two years of 11,180 cases and 1,685 lives by restrictive measures in these two diseases.

—St. Johns now has ten saloons, from which the village receives a revenue of $2,000 and Clinton County's life amend.

—The most attractive spot is "Pine Ridge" cemetery at Bay City is the lot for old soldiers, known as "Soldiers Rest."

—The first annual convention of the Young People's Methodist Alliance of the State held a three days' session at Lansing. Over 200 delegates were present. Rev. Dr. Cullen, pastor of the Lansing Central Church, delivered the address of welcome, and Mr. D. Carel, of Chicago, responding.

—Richard Balargeon, an employe at the South Lumber Company's mills at Kalkaska, lost an eye by a flying splinter from the edger. Fears are entertained that the accident may result in the loss of both eyes.

—By the breaking of a seal platform at No. 3 shaft, of the Lake Superior mine, Ishpeming, Dec. 1, an instantly killed and Edward Nugent fatally injured. Both left large families.

—The funeral of Mrs. M. Meehan, of Marquette, were taken to St. Ignace from Marquette for burial. Mrs. Meehan's death was caused by a disease contracted while in the sick room of her husband, who died a few days ago to M. Meehan, of the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Railway. She was an estimable young lady, and belonged to one of the oldest families of St. Ignace, and her death will be mourned by nearly every one in that city.

—John Burns, a farmer living in Bridgeport Township, Saginaw County, stabbed and mortally wounded James McMichaels in a drunken quarrel. The affray occurred at the house of a man named Masters, and Burns first attempted to murder him. McMichaels interfered and tried to avert bloodshed, when an ugly looking knife was plunged into his stomach. The physicians give no hope for his recovery.

—Captain William A. Weatherhead, a well-known Mason and Grand Army man of South Lyon, died of consumption. At the breaking out of the rebellion he lived in Tecumseh, raised a company, and, in command of it, was assigned to the Eighteenth Michigan Volunteer Infantry. He served until the close of the war. He was a prominent South Lyon business man. He was buried with Grand Army honors.

—Ypsilanti is all excitement over the question of building a water works.

—The commissioners appointed to inquire into the feasibility of a bridge across the Detroit River at Detroit met in the latter city. Gustaf Lindenthal, of the New York Long Bridge Company, demonstrated to the commissioners that a single span bridge was impracticable, but advocated a three-span structure, the approaches to which would be about 3,000 feet long and 1,700 feet, and the estimated cost of which would be about $4,500,000. The height of the towers would be about six hundred and forty feet, but Don M. Dickinson showed that would with masts extending 105 feet were sufficient on the lakes, and in view of that he urged a winter draw bridge. W. K. Muir announced that the railroads were backing this project. William Livingstone, a representative lake man, opposed the entire bridge scheme as impracticable and destined to injure the vessel interests.

A LONG SEARCH REWARDED.

—After a weary search for twenty-seven years, a former Chicago man has at last found his family. In June, 1862, Fred Cummings, a contractor and builder of Chicago, and the possessor of a wife and five small children—three girls and two boys—marched forth to battle for the Union. At Chattanooga he was wounded and taken prisoner, being finally released. After eight months in Southern hospitals and prisons, he made his escape, rejoined his company before Atlanta, and served with Sherman to the sea. He wrote his wife on account of his capture, escape, and the subsequent campaign, but not one of the letters that never came. His wife, believing him dead, and having a large family to support, married again, moving to another part of Chicago. At the close of the war Cummings returned home. His wife and children were gone—no one knew whither. Heartbroken he left Chicago and for years sought them all over the country. When his money was exhausted he earned more and started on his search again. He came to Jacksonville, made considerable money and spent it all as before and returned to the West. A short time ago he went to the mining camp, and as he sat at the camp fire his attention was attracted by a scrap of paper blowing in the wind toward him. The greatest solace to one who delves in lonely places is news of the outside world, and Cummins eagerly snapped the scrap of paper and began to read it. It proved to be a fragment of the Detroit Free Press, and in found in it an account of a reception to be given by the Odd Fellows of Detroit. He saw among the names of those who were conducting the preparations for the reception that of John H. Cummings. This was the name of his son, who was a little boy when he left home. Cummings hastened to Detroit. He found that John H. Cummings was married and had a family of his own. The stranger peered eagerly into the young man's face, and thus stretching his arms toward him cried out: "John, John, don't you know your father?" The most cleared away, and father and son, who had not seen each other for over twenty-seven years, were clasped in each other's arms. That night Alfred Cummings slept under the roof of his son. Now comes the denouement. A few years ago the second husband of Mrs. Cummings died, and she has since lived in Toledo with her son, Charles E. Cummings. All three daughters are married. A remarkable feature in the case was held at Toledo, the father and husband, so long separated from his own, once more taking the place he left years ago. Fred Cummings is now 58 years of age but still robust. He will return to the West and resume his mining operations, having struck a rich lead.

—A public meeting was held at East Saginaw, at which it was proposed to celebrate the Fourth of July celebration, at which all towns in that section are to be invited to participate. A committee was appointed to commence the work of preparation.

—The Grand Trunk Railway Company has suspended Conductors Berry, Wilson, Holmes, Gratton, Mitchell, and Muir, for three occasions. They were all old employes.

—The Flint and Pere Marquette passenger and freight depot was destroyed by an incendiary fire, together with a quantity of tickets and other contents. Loss about $500; partially insured.

—The Alpena papers never let a week pass without calling attention to the fact that Alpena needs a good four mill.

—Some of the finest timbered lands in northern Michigan are to be found in Alcona County. They are open to settlement as from $4 to $10 per acre.

—The water power canal begins to appear alive with men at work on the excavation, says the Sand Beacon. Thirty other city 23 men were at work scattered from the river to the Little Rapids.

—Peach growers in the southwest part of Iosa County report that the prospect is that the Crawford peaches will be rather scarce, but there will be a large crop of the Chili varieties.

—The gas drillers struck Trenton rock at Wyandotte at a depth of 2,575 feet. The long agony will soon be over now, and it will be known whether Wyandotte is to have a flow of natural gas or not.

SOME LARGE FAMILIES.

TWINS, TRIPLETS, QUADRUPLETS AND SEXTUPLETS.

Iowa's Champion Leads with Twenty-eight Children—and Another Hawkeye Twins Three Dozen—Mother's Great Record—Wisconsin to the Front.

From the Chicago Herald.

DUBUQUE, Iowa, May, 1889.

Some interesting facts have come to my notice with large families have been made in this vicinity. Mother Merlin, who resides near Bellevue, in the neighboring county of Jackson, has twenty-three living the father of one of the largest families in Iowa. Twenty-eight of whom have been born in Jackson County, Iowa, and are living. This number does not include a twin, which was born at Tranhelm, Germany, in December, 1851, and is a robust, healthy man. He has been twice married. His first wife died in Germany. Twelve of the children who born him six children, three of whom are living. His second wife was Kundgundes Hummel, also a native of Germany, who is now living, aged 81. She has been the mother two children, seven of whom are living. The family is a very large one, and very deeply attached to his family, thoroughly domestic in his tastes, and, if his life be spared, thinks he will raise several other flaxen-haired, rose-cheeked children beside those he now has. The neighbors in Mother Mueller resides is largely populated by Luxembourgers, and among them is a very large families. The average family is large, however. Indeed, it is only than this number is considered small. One that might be cited is that of Nicholas Schmitz, who lives in Green Township, Jackson County, near Mother Mueller.

In the city of Dubuque are numerous large families. John Beekson, a painter, beads a family of twenty-four children, and is the father of eighteen children. His wife is a native of Iowa, of Dutch parents. Their residence is 1050 White street. John Bauer, a laborer, has twenty-three living of sixteen children. His wife is 43 years of age, and the mother of twenty-one children. Wilhelm Kraver, a well-to-do grocer of Dubuque, has twenty-three living of twelve wife, who is now 43 years of age and a young of reliable character. Peter Schmitz has a family of fourteen, and Jake Dodge, a peddler, twenty-three living. Joseph Goods is thoroughly happy surrounded by a large number of children. Mr. Goods is the father of thirteen children. Leo McDaniel, a peddler, has twenty living of 14 children. Peter Rechtenbach, a laborer, has twenty living of twelve children. Jacob Schmitz, a laborer, has twenty living of 14. Robert Miller, Adam Doerr, A. J. Pabst, Jr., Peter Schmitz, Nicholas Schmitz, Jr., G. Bidermeyer, Thomas Kennedy, Anton Schmitzer, Henry Hopper, L. L. Curtis are all the father of fifteen children, five of whom are living. Mr. Curtis is a native of Massachusetts. Peter Schmitz, Jr., Peter Schmitz, Jr., Peter Schmitz, Jr.,

Irving Latimer is in Jackson prison where he will remain for the balance of his natural life in solitary confinement. He is the only one in the prison for matricide.

President Harrison has been sick, Secretary Blaine has been sick, Secretary Windom has been sick, and Clarkson has gone away for rest. All their "sickness" have been comprised in the single one of "indling psis."

Pullman says this country must have protection or the laboring men will be ruined. Then he sits down and collects $25,000 of table ware from England. It is about time the people saw through the hypocrisy of such monopolists.—Democrat.

The 125 molders in Perry's stove foundry at Albany, who were fed on republican pay-envelopes during the campaign, now receive no envelopes at all. They have been laid off. What the high tariff men need to fear most of all now is the teaching which experience is giving workingmen in the light of their ridiculous and deceitful campaign utterances.—Springfield Republican.

The president and the secretary of the interior have called upon the United States officials in Oklahoma, charged in the report of the inspectors of the interior department with corrupt practices in connection with public lands in that territory, for any explanation or statement that they may desire to make relative thereto. The report of the inspectors will not be made public at present.

More Protection to Labor.

During the past winter more paupers were found in Detroit than ever before, and many who have lived here for years and always supported their families were forced to seek the city's aid or see their loved ones starve. A large number of Poles came direct from the old country, and though they live very cheaply, could not find work enough to keep their families in bare necessities. They then went to the lumber woods and other places in search of work, leaving their families here to be supported by the city.—Detroit News.

—which the Cass Democrat asks:

How do you woodsmen like this kind of protection to American labor? Can you compete with laborers whose families are supported by charity and still bring up and educate your children. Protection to labor is a fraud Open your eyes! Think a little.

Montana's Shrewed Little Grane.

The news that Montana cities and towns which gave large republican majorities for the first and only time had fall are giving democratic majorities this spring, will arouse a suspicion that the election of a republican delegate in November was part of a shrewed little game played on republicans in congress to get Montana admitted as a state. Montana has been steadily democratic by a large majority until last fall, when the unexpected appearance of a majority on the republican side secured her admission with Washington and the two Dakotas. Instead of securing the eight senators from the four new states, the republicans will have to fight for half of them with a good chance of loosing all while they are maneuvering to build up a victorious high-tariff party in the south.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

NOW.

Rise! for the day is passing,
And you lie dreaming on;
The others have buckled their armor,
And forth to fight are gone;
A place in the ranks awaits you,
Each man has some part to play—
The past and the future are nothing
In the face of the stern today.

Rise from your dreams of the future,
Of gaining some hard fought field,
Of storming some air fortress,
Or taking some giant yield;
Your future has deeds of glory,
Of honor God grant it may
But your arm will never be stronger,
Or the need so great as today.

Rise! if the past detains you,
Her sunshine and storms forget;
No claims so unworthy to hold you
As those of vain regret;
Rid or bright, she is lifeless forever,
Cast her pinions aron away,
Her look back save to learn the lesson
Of a noble strife today.

Rise! for the day is passing!
The few sound that you scarcely hear
Is the enemy marching to battle—
Arise! for the foe is here!
Stay not to sharpen your weapons,
Or the hour will strike at last,
When from dreams of a coming battle
You may wake to find it past.

THE SIGNAL SERVICE

Reasons Presented to Show Why It Should Be Non-Military.

The condition of the United States signal service bureau, which prepares the weather predictions, has long been a source of anxiety to those who are interested in the partisanship of one of our national science system. The predictions given by the officers of this corps, though of much value, have not approached to those entitled to criticise them, up to the attainable degree of perfection. The cost of the bureau is great, though it is even less than the country would be willing to pay for a satisfactory service. The United States spends probable more for this work than all the states of Europe, yet the weather predictions have on the whole been less successful than those in the old world. Although this bureau has been in operation for nearly twenty years, it has failed to develop a set of able meteorologists competent to define the laws of the weather on this continent, and to advance the science of meteorology. Although the bureau has gathered a great deiny of fact concerning the atmospheric conditions of this continent, it has not succeeded in doing any considerable amount of investigation. This, however, would have been more profitable if the practical work of predictions had attained the desired end.

The weather bureau developed from the signal service of the United States army. The original object of the corps, as its name indicates, was to serve for the purpose of communicating information between the several parts of an army on the march or in action. As a subordinate part of the machinery employed during our civil war, it did admirable service. If, when it assumed its new duties as a meteorological corps, the officers and men had been transferred to some one of the civilian divisions of the government work, there can be hardly any doubt that the corps would now have the foremost place among the scientific institutions of the country.

The United States is singularly well placed for the development of meteorological science, and this country has a measure of intelligence which well fits them for the nicety appreciation of such aids to their life as this branch of learning can afford. Unfortunately, however, the work has been placed in connection with the army. Noble as is the system of an efficient military organization, it is thoroughly evil when it is applied to work such as inquirers are called on to do. Even where, as in the weather bureau, certain parts of their acts must be performed with stubborn regularity, they can best be done under the conditions of a civilian, and not of a military corps. The military influence is of a necessity penetrative and dominant. If men are soldiers at all, they must be soldiers through and through, in order that the system may be reasonably perfect.

Under the present system of the signal service, the observers are men enlisted in the United States army; they are thereby essentially separated from all discussions which prevail in the non-military work of the state. Their first duty is not to prosecute natural inquiries, but to obey the commands of their superior officers. The life of an enlisted man in any army is not such as to be attractive to youths of character and ability, and it is therefore not surprising that few men of capacity have sought service as sergeants in the weather service. Thus, while Harvard university has sent more than a score of men to the work of the national and state geological surveys of this country, none of its graduates has sought a place in the lower ranks of the signal service. College chiefs have hesitated to advise men to seek such a position, while if the corps was on a civilian basis these chances in life would be extremely attractive to young men of ability. Therefore it seems that the best, if not the only, thing to do, in order to give the desired quality to the service, is to transfer it to some non-military division of the government work.—N. S. Shaler in Boston Herald.

Nothing hinders the constant agreement of people who live together but vanity and selfishness. Let the spirit of humility and benevolence prevail, and discord and disagreement would be banished from the household.—Colton.

Rich and Poor,

Prince and Peasant, the Millionaire and Day Laborer, by their common use of this remedy, attest the world-wide reputation of Ayer's Pills. Leading physicians recommend these pills for Stomach and Liver Troubles, Costiveness, Biliousness, and Sick Headache; also, for Rheumatism, Jaundice, and Neuralgia. They are sugar-coated; contain no calomel; are prompt, but mild, in operation; and, therefore, the very best medicine for Family Use, as well as for Travelers and Tourists.

"I have derived great relief from Ayer's Pills. Five years ago I was taken so ill with that I was unable to do any work. I took three boxes of Ayer's Pills and was entirely cured. Since that time I am never without a box of these pills."—Peter Christensen, Sherwood, Wis.

"Ayer's Pills have been in use in my family upwards of twenty years and have completely verified all that is claimed for them. In attacks of piles, from which I suffered many years, they afforded greater relief than any other medicine I ever tried."—T. P. Adams, Hot Springs, Texas.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for a number of years, and have found nothing equal to them for giving me an appetite and imparting energy and strength to the system. I always keep them in the house."—R. D. Jackson, Washington, Ind.

"Two boxes of Ayer's Pills cured me of severe from which I was long a sufferer."—Emma Keyes, Hillsboro, Mass.

Headache,

"Whenever I am troubled with constipation, or suffer from loss of appetite, Ayer's Pills set me right again."—A. J. Kiser, Jr., Rock Hower, Va.

"Ayer's Pills are in general demand among our customers. Our sales of them exceed those of all other pills combined. We have never known them fail to give entire satisfaction."—Wright & Hannelly, San Diego, Texas.

REMEMBER.

Swift the flocking clouds are flying
As the night shades sullen grow,
And the day leans falintly sighing
In the western sunset glow.
It is decades December!

Spring was prophet of sometimes,
Full of promise and of life.
Kin of summer days, whose sweetness
Thrilled within the traveler's sight.
(We were glad then you remember.)

Summer blooms were shy and fragrant,
As you gathered them, you mean
Yet the tetters were bold and vagrant
When the sowers came to sow
(We were and then you remember.)

When the reapers' scythes went swinging
All the flowers were banished to death!
Now no birds are warbling singing,
And the winter without
In the decades December.

With steadfast light and night so blended
The haunted winter day is passed;
The Midsummer blooms are long ended,
The summer cannot site aye but.
For the decades December.
Remember this, dear, oh remember!

A FADING FAD.

Rapid Decline of the Rage After the Grotesque in Decorative Art.

Within the past few years the rage for the lobster and grotesque in decorative art has declined. It is a fad, but a rage that was endurable on its own zeal. While it lasted, the sanctuary of home took on the attributes of a lobster emporium and the ugliest objects produced by pagan carvers in wood and marble were deemed worthy of the most honored places. People from the refined tastes of the past hesitate to thus transform their parlors, library, reception hall and dining room into so many museums in which very table freaks were the most treasured objects. The rage carried to our carvings, furniture, etc. Griffins in early times, and lobsters generally, was depicted in prominent places of the interior, until the apartments, in many instances, were nothing less than a solidified nightmare.

The extreme ugliness of these objects dominated the beauty of the appointments, and the refined taste exhibited in statuary, draperies of delicate hue and texture, paintings and engravings was lost sight of in the presence of some deformity in armor, or some Japanese warrior, life size, in solid wood, and as homely as the late Mr. Crowley of Central park. The motive at the bottom of this perverted taste was probably that pleasure of human nature which makes one covet, not his neighbor's goods, but something which his neighbor has not, and is likely to have. This motive existed for a short time only. When sufficiency was procurable by the buyer of average resources; when importers and manufacturers could provide luxuriousness at reasonable figures, the charm of ugliness was gone and the fancy of the favored fad took a different turn—a turn in a better direction. There is but a short market for entire objects designed for the adornment of the home. Instead, there is more refinement manifested in the requirements of buyers. The carvings that adorn a costly mantel or cabinet must possess grace, and if a caryatid or a griffin is introduced into form part of the permanent decorations, it is not insolent in its ugliness or aggression to the prominence of its position amid artistic surroundings. A hideous satyr acts as a foil for beauty, but a wealth of grotesquerie has been found oppressive and in poor taste. The change is a gratifying one to all lovers of the beautiful, and the end of the reign of deformities and freaks will be mourned by none save those that ransacked the slopes of China and Japan for something hideous enough to gratify the victims of the fad which is fading away.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Foot Wines.

The consumption of port wine appears to be increasing, for during last year 83,209 pipes were imported from Oporto, as against 71,311 pipes in 1887, and 64,715 in 1885. Port wine is unquestionably a pleasant and a most efficacious tonic, and Lord Eldon declared that it was the most wholesome beverage that the world contained, and, having been in the habit of drinking two bottles daily (usually wine of a very strong, dry, rough character) during the greater part of his life, he died at the age of 87 in full possession of his faculties. When George IV complimented Lord Eldon, after a Christmas dinner at the pavilion, on the strength of his head, the chancellor quoted, amid the general applause of an appreciative company, the famous old Irish maxim, "Keep your back from the fire, and don't mix your liquors," which had been communicated to him by Mr. Dundas, who received it from the jovial Duke of Rutland.—London Truth.

Mrs. Potter's Gowns.

Mrs. Potter's one overweening taste, and one on which she spends not a small portion of the $500 a week that she receives, is her gowns. She doesn't seem to care much how or where she lives or what she eats or what she drinks or about furniture, bric-a-brac or jewelry, but a fine dress or a new shade so captures her fancy that if she had to pledge all her other dresses to get it she would do so. Her private gowns, as well as her stage gowns, nearly all come from Europe.—New York Journal.

DEEP SEA DESOLATION.

Strange and Startling Sights Seen in the Depths of the Ocean.

Despite the fanciful pictures which some writers have drawn of the ocean bed, its desolation, at least in its deepest parts, must be extreme. Beyond the first mile it is a vast desert of slime and ooze, upon which is constantly dripping a rain of dead carcasses from the surface, which caresses supply the nourishment for the scanty fauna inhabiting this dismal region—in some places more than five miles from the surface—and the microscopy reveals that the slimy matter covering the deepest ocean bed is very similar in composition to the ancient chalk of the cretaceous period, while mixed with it here and there are minute metallic and magnetic bodies which have been proved to be dust from meteorites. At long distances a phosphorescent light gleams from the head of some passing fish which has strayed thither from a lighter and happier zone.

But it is not until we have mounted a good deal nearer to the surface that the scene changes for the better. We now meet with forests of brilliantly colored sponges, while the phosphorescent animals swimming about are much more numerous, and the nearer we get to the littoral zone more and more phosphorescent lights appear, till at length the scene becomes truly animated. When only 1,250 feet separate us from the sunshine we come upon the first seaweed and kelp (1,200 feet is the deepest limit of plant life in some), but we must rise still another 1,000 feet and more, and get as near the top as 150 feet before we find any reef building corals. As plants do not live in deep sea the deep sea animals either prey on one another or get their food from dead organisms and plants which sink down to the bottom.

Thus Harry says: "The sea, like the snow cloud with its flakes in a calm, is always letting fall upon its bed showers of microscopic shells." An experiment proves that a tiny shell would take about a week to fall from the surface to the deepest depths. Since sunlight does not penetrate much farther than the littoral zone there would be beyond this perpetual darkness but for phosphorescence. Many of the animals inhabiting the oceanic and abyssal zones have merely rudimentary eyes; but these blind creatures have very long feelers, which help them to grope their way along the bottom. Other deep sea animals, on the contrary, have enormous eyes, and these very likely congregate around such of their number as are phosphorescent, and may perhaps follow the moving lampposts about wherever they may go. And so bright is this light on many of the fish living up by the dredge that during the brief space the animals survive it is not difficult to read by it.

The reasons why fishes and mollusks living more than three miles under water are able to bear a pressure of several tons is that they have extremely loose tissues, which allow the water to flow through every interstice and thus to equalize the pressure. When the pressure is removed they perish. In the Challenger expedition sent out by the British government all the sharks brought up from a depth of a little less than three quarters of a mile were dead when they got to the surface of the sea.—Catholic Magazine.

A Little Particular.

It is said that a Portland shoe manufacturer being asked to assist in providing bread for the suffering poor, replied that he would contribute the extent of 100 sacks of flour and 100 bushels of meal to each man who might be found in Portland, who neither kept a dog, drank rum nor used tobacco, who was in need of bread—and that the person has not yet appeared to claim the gift. The Brunswick Telegraph tells this tough story and we ween we see the twinkle that twinkled in the editor's eye as he prepared the copy.—Lewiston Journal.

Wanted to Be Cared of Relatives for Long Journeys.

Children will be children, and yet it is the style that the railroad companies are thinking of adopting to the apparently inconsiderate of consigning children, by the merciless of train conductors, to perhaps half way across the continent, and turned over to their destination.

The conditions of railroad travel that to send a child in this way will not to lose the child in the out of ten. But railroad have developed, and with this fact parents and friends have it safe to put a tag on their children and send them off upon their way to find a new home for a protecting arm.

Pennsylvania railroad discontinuing this method said Assistant General Agent A. Pille. "The care and attention we too great. But notwithstanding the obstacles thrown in the way of consigning children still go, and, of course, we do our best to look out for them. It is not a job for poor people to come to the children that they want deposited the far west along our lines live with which we connect. Sometimes they are old enough to be with tickets and such money as they need on the way, but that is the exception.

The youngsters are very in practice is for friends to pay for us the entire expense connected with carrying their precious an old official connected with the passenger department of the Pennsylvania railroad: "Our stors are quite frequently asked after children that travel without parents or friends. But it is generally a short trip. The instances ch we turn over these minors unaccompanied are very rare in most notable cases of long journeys for friendless little ones are the immigrant homes. Poverty will drive parents to run great and they will send over from the country their children to travel years and land to friends in the country of the west. Perhaps before they will not hear of the hapsiness of the journey, trusting interest of strangers and the kness of railroad officials to the trip. VAST BEYOND COMPARE.

NEW YORK CELEBRATES IN A FITTING MANNER.

The Greatest Military Display of Modern Times—Brilliant Decorations and Fitting Display at Chicago — Observances Throughout the Northwest.

NEW YORK, May 1.—The town woke up more sleepily Tuesday morning than it did Monday, and with good reason. Its inhabitants, permanent as well as temporary, were tired, the latter even more so than the former. Still, the earliest streaks of dawn found many people in the streets, and these indeed were fortunate, for in all the range of meteorological chance a more perfectly morning could scarcely have been found. As the morning wore along the crowds in the streets became even greater than they were Monday. The hurry was even greater, for one and all saw the necessity of reaching points at the earliest practical moment.

The crush in the streets in the lower part of the city was so great that it was found necessary to start the parade somewhat earlier than had been intended. This was done in order that the line might be lengthened out and get in marching order, thus relieving at once the pressure in the lower wards and placing the head of the column in such a position that, when the President reached the reviewing stand, he need be subject to no delay. At precisely 10:25 Gen. Schofield gave the order, and the greatest military parade of modern times started. From Fifth street, the point from which the start was made, up Broadway as far as the eye could reach the sidewalks were literally blockaded with people, while the windows, doorways, and roofs of the buildings were simply a mass of humanity. As the gorgeous pageant began to move up Broadway all the patriotism in the mass, which had been pent up now for many hours, broke forth. Cheers rent the air, hankerchiefs and banners held in the hands of the people began waving and New York and its many thousands of visitors were happy.

The parade was led by Maj.-Gen. Schofield, accompanied by his staff and corps of aids. The right of the line was given to the West Point cadets, 400 strong, who were followed by the regulars under Maj.-Gen. Howard. The second division consisted of state militia. They marched in the order of the admission of the States into the Union, as follows: Delaware, 750 men, Gov. Benjamin T. Briggs commanding; Pennsylvania, 8,000 men, Gov. James A. Beaver commanding; New Jersey, 3,700 men, Gov. Robert S. Green commanding; Georgia, 350 men, Gov. John B. Gordon commanding; Connecticut, 600 men, Gov. Morgan G. Buckley commanding; Massachusetts, 1,875 men, Gov. Oliver Ames commanding; Maryland, 500 men, Gov. E. S. Jackson commanding; South Carolina, 450 men, Gov. John P. Richardson commanding; New Hampshire, 1,000 men, Gov. Charles H. Sawyer commanding; Virginia, 500 men, Gov. Fitzhugh Lee commanding; New York, 12,000 men, Gov. David Bennett Hill, commander-in-chief; North Carolina, 150 men, Gov. Daniel C. Fowl commanding; Rhode Island, 457 men, Royal C. Taft commanding; Vermont, 750 men, Gov. William F. Dillingham commanding; Kentucky, 550 men, Gov. Simon B. Buckner commanding; Ohio, 5,300 men, Gov. Joseph B. Foraker, commanding; Louisiana, 400 men, Gov. Francis T. Nicholls commanding; Mississippi, 600 men, Gov. Robert Lowry commanding; Michigan, 400 men, Gov. Robert Lowry commanding; Michigan, 400 men, Gov. C. G. Luce commanding; District of Columbia, 800 men, Commissioner Col. E. C. Blanut commanding; Florida, 200 men, Gov. Francis P. Fleming commanding; West Virginia, 300 men, Gov. J. B. Jackson commanding. Cheers were given in this division to Gov. Seay of Alabama, Gov. James P. Eagle of Arkansas, Gov. J. N. Cooper of Colorado, Gov. J. W. Fifer of Illinois, Gov. Hovey of Indiana, Gov. Larrabee of Iowa, Gov. Burleigh of Maine, Gov. Merriam of Minnesota, Gov. Francis of Missouri, Gov. Thayer of Nebraska, Gov. Pennoyer of Oregon, and Gov. Hoard of Wisconsin. The third division consisted of the Grand Army of the Republic and the Loyal Legion.

The scenes along the first part of the line of march beggar description. The city hall and the stands were packed almost to suffocation, and numerous ticket holders were unable to gain access to them. Broadway, as far as the eye could see, was a blaze of bunting and a sea of faces. Housetops, windows, telegraph poles, and lamp posts, private stands without number, and every possible vantage ground vied with the sidewalk crowds in point of numbers.

Just before 12:30 o'clock the President and other honored guests of the day were driven past the city hall stand in open carriages. The knowledge that they had started had been telegraphed along the line and the military bodies had been drawn up in salating columns on the east side of Broadway. The Presidential party was at last placed in position and the review of the parade began.

It took nine hours for the procession to pass. In the box with the President were Vice-President Morton, Chief Justice Fuller, Secretary of State Blaine, Mayor Grant, Gen. Sherman, Admiral Porter, Hamilton Fish, Ethelrige T. Gerry and ex-Presidents Cleveland and Hayes.

Services were held in all the churches, the principal services being held at St. Paul's church, where Washington attended on the morning of his inauguration, and which were attended to-day by President Harrison, Vice-President Morton, ex-Presidents Cleveland and Hayes, and many of the most distinguished people of the country.

Bishop Potter, in his address dwelt upon the trust and dependence which indused the first President after he had taken the oath to turn to the church and ask God for help.

At the close of the service at St. Paul's the doors leading out upon the west porch were thrown open and the dazzled, dense congregation which had entered the Broadway entrance passed out under the canopy which had been stretched to the Vesey street gate and took the carriages assigned them.

As soon as the Presidential party reached the platform a shout of applause arose from the assembled crowd. Archbishop Corrigan, wearing his scarlet robes, was on the platform. He was introduced to the President and Vice President, Gov. Hill, Mayor Grant, Dr. Storrs and several others.

Hamilton Fish, Sr., opened the exercises by introducing Ethridge T. Gerry as chairman. The latter said:

"Fellow-Citizens: One hundred years ago, on this spot, George Washington, as first President of the United States, took his oath of office upon the Holy Bible. That service volume is here to-day, silently attesting the basis upon which our nation was constructed and the dependence of our people upon Almighty God. In the words, then, of one of the founders of the government: 'With hearts overflowing with gratitude to our Sovereign Benefactor for granting to us existence, for continuing it to the present hour, and for now permitting on us blessings spiritual and temporal through life, may we with fervor beseech Him so to continue them as best to promote His glory and our welfare.'"

Mr. Gerry then introduced the Rev. Richard F. Storrs, who delivered the invocation in a very clear voice.

Clarence W. Bowen, secretary of the centennial committee, was next introduced. He read J. G. Whittier's poem, which had been composed for the occasion.

At the conclusion of the reading the Assembly gave Mr. Whittier three cheers and a tiger.

The Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, the orator of the day, was next introduced. He received a hearty greeting, and when this had subsided delivered his speech.

CHICAGO CELEBRATES.

Thousands of Patriots in Line—The Display and Decorations Superb.

CHICAGO, May 1.—Never before in the history of the city was Chicago more profusely decorated with the National colors and bunting than that displayed Tuesday in commemoration of the centennial inauguration of George Washington. Every business house and a larger portion of the residences displayed decorations of some sort. Down town the decorations were elaborate, the business men seeming to vie with each other in making the most presentious display.

The streets were a marching host of flag-bearers. The bedings allowed by the business houses turned thousands of young patriots loose. Business was entirely suspended. The whole population was busily burning the patriotic flame. Pictures of Washington were hung in window, fastened to flags, and wreathed in the National colors. He appeared in a thousand attitudes and wore a greater variety of suits than the knight of modern society. His wore his hair pompadour, combed flat, or a peruked bald-head. If humor has a place in the hearafter Washington must have been amused to see himself in yellow trousers and blue boots, with knee breeches and red stockings, and all the vanity and pomp of civic and military trappings. The older folk marched behind blaring horn and allan drum. Several societies joined the festivities in brilliant uniform and added the pomps of military parade. Banners of all nations spread their folds under the starry flag. Colleges of other countries joined the throng of patriot Americans, as a chatter of tongues rose over the city. At Central Music hall Robert T. Lincoln, the Rev. S. J. McPherson, and the Hon. John M. Thurston of Nebraska, temporary chairman of the last Republican convention, spoke. Farwell hall listened to Judge Tuthill, the Hon. L. D. Thomas, ex-Civil Service commissioner, and Rabbi Hirsch. At the Exposition building were the Rev. C. C. Albertson and ex-Senator Doolittle. The Board of Trade building rang with the voices of Robert McIntyre and the Rev. Dr. Gunsaulus. In Battery D Hickey, Roman catholic vicar-general, gave them an address of welcome, and the Rev. Dr. Fost of the Congregational church delivered the speech of the occasion. Flags floated from public and private buildings. The city was handsomely decorated.

At Danville there was a general observance of centennial day. All business was suspended in the afternoon, and the business houses and private residences were handsomely decorated with bunting. The large parade of military and civic societies was witnessed by an immense crowd. Speeches were made at the armory by prominent gentlemen, after which the Oddfellows laid the corner stone to their new temple with appropriate ceremonies. In the absence of Grand Master Underwood the Grand Commander W. R. Jewell of this city officiated.

At Monticello the day was ushered in by a salute of 100 guns. The bells were rung and steam whistles sounded for an hour. At 9 a. m. a grand union service was held at the Methodist Episcopal church. Prayers were offered and addresses delivered by the Rev. J. D. Fry and the Rev. M. Waller and others. The city was gayly decorated with the national color.

At Bloomington Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson delivered an address to an immense audience at the Second Presbyterian church. Other speakers of the day were the Rev. W. H. Wilder and Dr. James B. Taylor. The bells were rung and cannon fired.

At Elgin special services were held in all of the schools and in the evening an address was delivered by Bishop Fallows of Galena.

At Waukegan all business was practically suspended and the citizens celebrated. Charles Whitney delivered a patriotic address and the schools took up the occasion with joyful memorial exercises.

At Kankakee the centennial of Washington's inauguration was appropriately observed by the ringing of bells, church services, a monster parade, and patriotic speeches. Fully ten thousand people were in the city.

Throughout Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 1.—Great crowds attended the numerous centennial celebrations in this city. From 9 to 9:30 o'clock all the fire bells set merrily ballyrang in chorus, and whistles tooted in accompaniment. Union services were held in the three divisions of the city, and at 11 o'clock a monster meeting was held at the Academy of Music under the auspices of the Merchants' association and the chamber of commerce. The speakers were Mayor Thomas Brown, John Johnston, ex-Congressman G. W. Hamilton, and Gen. E. C. Winkler. In the afternoon the Fourth regiment, light horse squadron, and First light battery and the six turner societies, a thousand strong, marched to the Washington statue on the west side, where an immense concourse of people listened to addresses by local orators. A big demonstration was held on the south side.

At La Crosse the day was favorable and business was suspended. Religious services was board the oration of the Hon. John M. Langston, the colored delegate from Virginia who opposed the cession of Senator Sherman at the national convention, and the Hon. Peter Hendrickson of Wisconsin. Judge Harlan and the Rev. Dr. Barrows spoke at the Second regiment armory. On the lake front Mayor Cregier and Judge Prendergast held the audience at tent A, while Congressman Mason and Mr. A. H. Lane did a similar service at tent B. In many of the churches services in honor of the day were held. Catholic, Protestant, Hebrew, and unorthodox—all joined in a national thanksgiving observance. In the evening fireworks were displayed at the parks, and the town turned out to see them. The streets were glutted with sightseers, and the lake front was a solid jam. A banquet at the Union League club swelled the tide of oratory that rolled to the feet of Columbia's first ruler.

At Springfield the centennial celebration was highly creditable. A delightful day permitted a turn-out of all the military and secret societies in the city, who marched through the principal streets to the Capitol grounds. There thousands of people assembled to listen to an eloquent oration by Bishop Seymour and the exercises of prayer and song. In the afternoon the bishop delivered to the number of five thousand were marshaled for parade, passing over a raised platform on Capitol avenue, where the people could witness the presentation of medals. People Have Ceased to Be Surprised at Anything in Base-Ball—A Table with a Double Meaning—Interesting Gossip About the National Game.

CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.]

Surprises in base-ball are things of the past. Nobody, not even the cranks, is surprised at the outcome of anything that happens in the domain of the national game nowadays. Consequently no surprise of the sport is surprised, at the close of the second week of the playing season, to find the Philadelphia clubs occupying first position. It was a long race, with a strong organization of laggers trailing along almost in the rear, that it took to win it. It was pretty much the same last year and the year before. So, it was thought by the majority of people at first. They are not surprised, neither are they disposed to kick. They remember that the club three past two or three seasons turned out in the fall from last place to the bottom of the list at the close of the first month's playing season, before the summer's solstice had passed it was playing ninth, and had leading everything that

DETROIT'S INTERNATIONAL FAIR AND EXPOSITION.

A Magnificent Effort in Behalf of Art, Industry, Education and Amusement.

Combining a Wealth of Wonders with a World of Pleasure and Instruction—Representing a Grand Outlay of More Than Half a Million Dollars—Special Exhibits in All Departments and Curios from Many Climes—Sept. 17 to 27 Inclusive, the Ten Great Days of Display.

Memorable indeed in the history of Michigan's efforts in behalf of agriculture and its allied sciences will be the present season of 1889. For this is the year in which the great Wolverine state, with a dash of that enterprise which has made her name famous over the whole continent, will come before the agricultural community of the United States with an International Fair and Exposition.

PROOFS OF SUCH SINGULAR PROPOSITION that, with the exception of the famous Centennial of '76, it will positively surpass anything in the fair and exposition line our land has ever seen.

It is needless to speak of the generous influences which flow from such a gigantic project as that initiated at Detroit. Held at a season of the year when Nature arrays herself in her most gorgeous robes, when the harvests have all been gathered home, and when the industrious farmer is privileged to enjoy a period of well-earned rest, the fair has won a warm place in the hearts of those who esteem an attraction which combines interest with instruction, education with diversion.

MICHIGAN'S INTERNATIONAL FAIR AND EXPOSITION

will lead the world for beauty and variety of display, for uniqueness of features, and for grandeur and extent of plant. The grounds, comprising seventy-one acres of beautiful rolling land, adjacent to the city, are already penetrated by railroad, street railway, electric road, and by steamboat from the river. The site affords a delightful view of the beautiful Detroit river, the picturesque Canadian shore, the neighboring islands, the great commerce of the inland seas; far as the eye can reach, the proximate city, stretching forth its giant arms till they lose themselves beyond the horizon; Fort Wayne, with its martial sounds of drum and fife, its bloodcoated trooper moving to and fro, its frowning cannon peering from the bastioned redoubts, the immense warehouses, factories and elevators along the river front, sending up great volumes of black smoke, rewarding with the din of industry, and paying tribute to the wealth and prosperity of the beautiful city; the inviting shores of the famous Belle Isle park, blue in the dim distance, serve to complete as charming a scene as one could hope to view in many a long day's journey.

We present to-day a cut of the main building, which, with its companion structures, is being erected at the enormous cost of TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS.

It is the largest building erected and used exclusively for fair purposes ever built. In the form of a hollow square, the inner area is devoted to a series of beautifully embowered courts, in which, while visitors, busily pursuing the winding paths, cannot but lose himself in delight at the rare vista offered by this one small part of Detroit's great International Fair and Exposition. The building has luxuriant beds of foliage and flowers, whose redolent perfumes are wafted by the same breeze which bears to his ear the soothing spell of music's softest strains. At his feet, perhaps, a cooling fountain is refreshing the perfume-laden air, and, softly murmuring as it flows, invites to reverie and gentle somnolence. The hot glare of the autumn sunlight is tempered by a

MAGNIFICENT CANOPY OF TRANSLUCENT GLASS,

so that even upon the warmest days the whole court is the most cool and refreshing spot imaginable. The same delightful scene may likewise be viewed while strolling about the spacious galleries above, or while reclining at one's ease in the easy smokers' alcove.

A ramble about the seventy-acre grounds will at once reveal the bewildering prodigality of exhibits, the varied character of the attractions. A space fifteen acres in extent, regularly laid out in walks and drives, will be devoted to an immense display of agricultural implements, engines, wind mills and railways, sheltered under commodious private structures, or under gay tents fluttering with the flags of all nations. A gigantic building, 300 feet long, will be devoted to the interests of fowls and home pets. Did you ever hear a congregation of roosters crow? Leading the choir with a hoarse guttural crash in the big Brahma, the hundreds of less favored fowls joining in the chorus, while the little bantam, high on tiptoe and fairly bursting with sentiment, is doing his best to maintain his place in the race for the blue ribbon. You have heard a dog howling at the moon, or howled in sympathy?

SCORES OF A MOUTHFUL AT A MIDNIGHT TOMCAT.

But a tomcat, other canine, ambitious for the first prize, can easily outdo them all. It will be a magnificent exhibition of dogs. Here are prize scenes from all part of the country.

Among the very finest in the country are the stock buildings of Detroit's great Fair and Exposition. Each over 300 feet square, the four mammoth stalls enough that, were they placed side by side, they would extend over two miles. A large inner court is daily crowded with a display of magnificent stalls, contending for their prizes.

A piece of great interest to the people of fair-goers will be the art building, filled with its structure, 150 feet frontage.

RARE ART TREASURES FROM MANY LANDS. One hundred thousand dollars are represented in the display; and here one may gain a great amount of interesting and instructive information in the brief visit of one afternoon.

For have we as yet seen the world's greatest fair and exposition in its entirety? For, while the grand display is under examination, while the machinery hall is resounding with its immense array of engines, machines and scientific models, while the floral values is inviting them nds to come and revel in its fragrant bosoms, while the long line of agricultural and industrial halls, the dairy, the poultry yards, the art gallery and the various departments are in full movement—the real, the substantial, the grotesque, base tall, and a thousand contests of strength and skill, are being contested each day from dawn till dark.

Reader, do you want to see the grandest fair and exposition project in the United States, under the auspices of Michigan, the famous land of lakes? Do you want to witness, in connection therewith, some of the most ever prepared by an exposition management? Do you want to divert and instruct yourself with the bewildering magnificence of a fair and exposition costing $50,000, and offering in aggregate prizes one hundred thousand additional? If such is your ambition, but one course is to be pursued. Go to Detroit between Sept. 17th and 27th, inclusive, and see for yourself. Be prepared to see the most magnificent and gigantic spectacle you were ever permitted to survey. The great exhibit of the Detroit International Fair and Exposition Association.

The State Fair is Located Permanently at Lansing.

LANSING, May 13.—There was a full meeting of the executive committee of the State Agricultural Society which met at the Hudson house parlors this evening, and it was unanimously voted to accept the proposition of the Central Michigan Fair Association and the Lansing board of trade and permanently locate the state fair at Lansing, and the date for this year is from September 9 to 13 inclusive. The Central Michigan people donate their entire grounds subject to incumbrance and the Lansing board of trade provides for all incumbrances and the State Association becomes the owner of $50,000 worth of unincumbered property. The board of trade further agrees to have the street car line extended to the grounds and furnish a water supply free of expense. Mayor Turner guaranteed the necessary funds to make the preparation for this year's exhibition.

Harbor Springs.

From the Democrat.

The two test wells sunk by Mr. Shay at the machine shop, flow by actual measurement, 85,000 gallons of water per day.

W. H. Dewey who so successfully conducted the Harbor Point hotel two seasons ago, will have charge there again this summer.

Two cargoes of square timber have been loaded the past week, and the work of building the huge cribs for rafting is also going on.

The Cyclone is laid up at Charlevoix this week, putting in a new boiler. Her consort, the new propeller Nellie, is expected here soon.

Blisters and Bruises.

Dear reader, did you ever move? Did you ever move a printing office? We have, and we know a good deal more about the business than we did last Monday morning. If there are any blisters, bruises, or lameness visible in this week's paper, charge it up to moving day. We promise not to do like again—till we have to.

Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at F. G. Hines and Co.'s drug store as their giving away to their customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size $1. Every bottle warranted. 3

MICHIGAN MENTION.

Sundry Gleanings From Our State Exchanges.

A Detroit paper opposes one-cent postage on the ground that if it is adopted no one can tell without examination the difference between a letter and a circular.

The steamer St. Ignace now transfers freight across the straits at night which is a great advantage to shippers, as it reduces the time 24 hours both ways. Heretofore freight arriving at Mackinaw in the evening would not be transferred until the following day, causing a delay of 36 hours.

"Please give these people work, as they are all entirely destitute," was the language of a note pasted on the trunks of several Finlanders who reached Bay City a few days ago, fresh from over the ocean. The impression which has obtained that pauper immigration has been stopped is accordingly erroneous.

"There is some inquiry" says the Bay City Press, "for Norway siding and 2x12 Norway 18 feet long, but very little of it is to be found. The car companies of Detroit have bought all the best Norway logs and are having them manufactured for sills, decking, etc., leaving the top of the tree to go into bill stuff."

Col. Sellers, of the Cedar Springs Clipper, is a man of observation and experience. He says: "A man who never told a lie, a woman whose tongue never gets the better of her judgment, and a man who could publish a newspaper to please everybody, are the three social white elephants which would be leading cards in the circus of the world."

The railroad hand-car which has so long done service as a vehicle for section men, will soon be obsolete. The Kalamazoo car and velocipede works have just turned out a steam car, the same size and style of construction as the old-fashion hand car. The laborious hand power method of propulsion is displaced. The new car makes better time than the old car and is easily removed from the track, was given a trial test on Tuesday and found satisfactory.

The bill of representative Wachtel, to regulate fishing, which passed the house, fixes the size of the meshes of lead funnel and heart of trap nets, to not less than five inches in extension; the pot, crib of pocket, being the part in which the fish is finally captured, shall have meshes not less than three and one-half inches in extension. No pound, trap or other fixed net shall have meshes of less size than those above specified, and in all prosecutions the burden of proof in relation to the nets is thrown on the defendant. Inland lakes and rivers are excepted but not the rivers connecting the great lakes. The meshes of seines are not to be less than three and one-half inches in extension. All seines must be drawn upon the shore or upon a dock; drifting, dragging or towing nets is forbidden.

A bill prohibiting the sale of tobacco in any form to minors under 17 years, has passed both houses. It provides: Section 1. The people of the state of Michigan enact, That it shall not be lawful for any person by himself, his clerk or agent, to sell, give or furnish any cigar, cigarette, cheroot, chewing or smoking tobacco or tobacco in any form whatsoever, to any minor under 17 years of age, unless upon the written order of the parent or guardian of said minor. Sec. 2. Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $50, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a term of not less than ten days or more than thirty days, or both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

Unshared Prosperity.

The chief protection organ in this city has a dispatch from Fall River announcing that "manufacturers expect that the present year will be the most profitable ever known in the history of this city." During the past quarter "thirty-two corporations with a total capital of $17,933,000 have paid out in dividends to stockholders $487,560, an average of 2 71-100 per cent on the entire capital," or 10.84 percent a year.

This is a good showing for the protected cotton mill owners. The 40 per cent tariff, which gives them a practical monopoly of the business of furnishing cotton cloth to the people of this country secures to them a rich bounty.

But how about their operatives—the "American workingmen" of whom so much was said in the late presidential campaign?

The weavers in Fall River recently asked for a fairer share in the prosperity of which they help to operate. Their wages had been reduced 20 per cent since 1884, and but half of the cut had been restored. They asked as matter of justice, and as their benefit from the "great protection victory," that the wages of 1884 be restored.

The weavers were receiving an average of $8 26 per week for sixty hours' work—a less sum, considering the amount of cloth produced, than the same kind of work commanded in England.

Did the mill-owners consent to share their prosperity with their working people? On the contrary, they arrogantly refused even to receive a delegation of the strikers—falling back on their fat accumulations and deliberately waiting for the strikers to "starve out." They did starve out, and went back to work at the old wages in the "most profitable year ever known in the history of Fall River."

And this is how protection protects.—New York Times.

Epoch.

The transition from long lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is gratefully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the great alterative and tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of kidneys, liver or stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at F. G. Hines & Co.'s drug store. 3

NEW CIGAR STORE.

The Charlevoix Cigar Company Open a Retail Department.

On Tuesday evening the Charlevoix Cigar Mfg. Co. formally opened their retail department in the Lewis block with free music and free cigars. The Charlevoix band played several appropriate selections. The room is elegantly decorated, the finest decorations of all being the large stock of high-grade cigars, tobaccos, and smokers goods, in their rich wrappings and boxes. In addition to all the grades of their own make, the company will keep on sale the best popular brands of smoking and chewing tobaccos, and a full line of smoker's goods. The location is as good as any in town, and there is no reason to question the success of the enterprise. It will be "headquarters" for all the boys.

The manufacturing department is being removed this week, and in a few days will be running with a full force. Mr. McGibeny will superintend both departments.

The company are to be congratulated on their pleasant surroundings and good prospects.

The Band Concert.

Notwithstanding the storm, the Charlevoix Cornet Band were greeted with a full house last Friday evening. Their performance shows marked improvement in the work, and the class of music handled indicates that they will take an advanced position among the bands of northern Michigan.

A pleasing variety was given the entertainment by the selections of Mrs. McGibeny, Mrs. Green, the Misses Blakely, Smith, and Bartholomew, Mr. C. F. Dixon, and Prof. Kaltbain.

The full program is as follows:

Louis Gagnon Drowned.

On Monday evening, Louis Gagnon eight-year-old son of Chas. Gganon, was missing, and search was made until a late hour without success. On Tuesday morning his cap was found in the river back of Dr. Carlstein's, and a little later, Al. Gilger found his body in the water on the shore side of the revetment. Mr. Gagnon was at work at the Soo and was telegraphed for, he returned Wednesday morning. The body was taken to Sutton's Bay for interment.

Lewis Grand Opera House.

A large force of carpenters and painters are applying the finishing touches to this elegant new place of amusements, and next Monday night it is to be dedicated by the Star Theater Co. with "The Galley Slave," followed on Tuesday evening with "The Silver King." The great labor connected with moving the JOURNAL office this week has prevented us from preparing a complete description of the house, and it must be deferred until another week.

A Narrow Escape.

Col. W. E. Nelson, of Brooklyn, came home one evening feeling a peculiar tightness in the chest. Before retiring, he tried to draw a long breath but found it almost impossible. He suffered four days from pneumonia, and the doctors gave him up. Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption saved him and he is well to-day. Sold by G. W. Beaman, druggist.

It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by F. G. Hines.

Test of Death.

Many tests have been suggested to define whether or not life is extinct or death has appeared to occur. Of the most recent, and held to be of the most reliable, is called the ammonia-hypodermic test. In using it a syringe full of strong solution of ammonia under the skin of the arm or some other convenient portion of the body. If the body be not dead—if it be the faintest circulation—the ammonia will produce on the skin, at the point where it was injected, a pink red patch, on the surface of which raised red spots will appear; but if there be absolute death, there will be produced a brown dark blotch, which is definitely conclusive against any possible vitality.—Boston Herald.

Pollutant Ice.

Users of ice must read up on the recent investigations of Kedzie, Pengren and Prudden, showing that ice taken from polluted streams is not purified by freezing. Kedzie tells us that if ice from streams containing rotting vegetable matter or sewdust it will induce diarrhoea. In 1875, at Rye beach, an epidemic broke out in a few hotel, and was traced at least to a stream from an adjacent pond. The latter of this pond in summer was foul and stinking with putrescent matter, organic matter, as well as bacteria, most eliminated by any ordinary freezer of cold. Too many of our creams are the recipients of sewage. This is the 19th age of civilization, and we must have it pure.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In Honor of Hayes.

A Burns anniversary to celebrate the birthday of the poet is an annual custom in Leslie, Ingham. At the late celebration twenty-four prominent merchants and farmers, mounted and dressed to represent the principal characters in Burns' work, paraded the street headed by a volunteer band and preceded by a crowd of people. The procession stopped at the cost, where speeches and toasts were made by Mr. Johnson, Mr. Dobbins, Mr. Jackson, and others.—Lansing Journal.

A DOZEN KILLED.

Sad Fatalities at a Building Demolished by a Gale.

While fifteen or twenty men were at work in a new building in Tacoma, W. T., being erected for a hotel by Walter Eaton, a tremendous storm came up, striking the building with full force. The structure collapsed, carrying the workmen in the ruins. Citizens and laborers gathered around the wrecked building, and hundreds were soon at work endeavoring to rescue the imprisoned men. In a few minutes sufficient debris had been removed to get at some of the men, and the body of Walter Bates was first taken out. This was followed by two live workmen, and then a workman named McConnell, a new arrival from Kansas, was found dead. W. H. Snell, City Attorney elect, was soon after taken out so seriously injured that he can not recover. Three other bodies have been recovered, but have not yet been identified. Besides the workmen who were injured, the Rev. W. A. Mackey, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, who stopped to seek shelter from the rain, was severely hurt.

EXCLUDES THE CHINESE.

The Supreme Court Decides They Cannot Land in Southern Ports.

The Supreme Court has rendered an opinion in the case of Chae Chang Ping, appellant, vs. the Collector of the Port of San Francisco. This was a suit brought to test the constitutionality of the Scott Chinese exclusion act. Shortly after the Scott exclusion act went into effect Chae Chang Ping returned to the United States from China and endeavored to secure entrance at San Francisco. He had left the country armed with a certificate entitling him to return, but the certificate was declared invalid by the Scott act. The collector refused him admittance, and suit was brought in the United States Court for the district of California to test the constitutionality of the act, in accordance with the provisions of which the collector acted. The California courts upheld the constitutionality of the act, and from this the decision the case went to the Supreme Court on appeal. The court affirms the judgment.

Insane Asylum Abuses.

Investigation of the Cook County, Illinois, Insane Asylum at Dunning shows that in addition to being overcrowded the patients are insufficiently clothed, filthy, and covered with vermin; that there is a scarcity of attendants; that they have no suitable occupation, no amusement, and little exercise; the investigation being a reflection on the Board of County Commissioners, as well as the officials of the institution.

Fatal Accident on a Cable Road.

While descending an incline at Seattle, W. T., the brake of a cable car refused to work. The train obtained great momentum, and in rounding a curve a number of passengers were dashed to the ground. Mrs. Sophronia Wagner was killed, her 9-year-old child badly injured, and many other persons sustained severe wounds.

Endowing a Wisconsin College.

The sum of $25,000 has been promised to Beloit (Wis.) College, by a Chicago gentleman, for the erection of an academy building, in case the citizens of Beloit will contribute $10,000. It is understood that another Chicago man has promised $100,000 for an endowment fund if a similar amount will be raised in the city.

The President has authorized Mr. Matthews of Illinois to be First Comptroller of the Treasury, vice M. J. Durham, resigned. Mr. Matthews has been the private secretary of Illinois House of Representatives. He was elected in 1884 as a Democrat, but was a strong advocate of the protective tariff policy, and subsequently held the office of Collector of Internal Revenue for the Peoria District. He lives at Pittsfield, Ill. The President also appointed Frank C. Ainsworth, of Iowa, to be Commissioner of Pension Agent at New York City, and Samuel C. Kinney, of Kansas, to be Assistant Superintendent of the Carson City Mint. Irving G. Caldwell of Ohio and Richard W. De Lamatter of Kansas have been appointed Special Agents of the General Land Office.

DUN & CO.'S WEEKLY REPORT.

Consistency of Commercial Action Lacking Throughout the Country.

The condition of trade for last week, as reviewed by R. G. Dun & Co., is as follows:

It is the most prominent characteristic of the situation that throughout this country that the usual consistency of commercial action is lacking. Investment and speculation in the branches of business are highly satisfactory, and the prospect for the future is good. In other directions the outlook is not so good. On the other, the recent change of Administration, the uncertainty of legislation, and the slow development of manufactures at the South, have caused hesitation. The demand for fall goods has been unusual, but there has begun to decline. Prices are lower at Pittsburg than for some time, and lower than for three years at Philadelphia, and the demand for iron is very light, and manufacturers still complain of inadequate orders. The cotton market is unsettled, and prices have declined. While waiting for adequate information, future deputies upon the state of the dry goods trade, which is not so satisfactory. The cotton manufacture is active and healthy. The demand for woolens is good, and the prospect for a large business in the spring and summer is very good. A speculative movement in lesser grains and provisions, with the exception of rye, corn, lard, ribs, and oats, has caused a decline in wheat, which is now lower than for sixteen years. The corn market is weak, and sixteen cents lower than last week. The provision market is very active, and prices have advanced, lard and ribs being the most active. Oil has declined 10 cents, and sugar is lower. The demand for iron has been very light, and the production is reduced. In spite of some speculative advances the general average of prices for commodities is a little lower than it was May 2. The outlook in the South and Southwest is encouraging, and nearly since the recent rains the prospects are encouraging, with the season more advanced than usual and the acreage in wheat considerably increased. The business failures continue large, and amount with the first five provinces to 279 against 279 in the first.

THREE NEW CRUISERS.

The Navy of the United States to Be Further Augmented.

The Secretary of the Navy is about to advertise for proposals for the construction of three twin screw protected cruisers, authorized by the last Congress and to cost not to exceed $700,000 each. A submarine torpedo boat is still to be contracted for, and when that is done some eighteen ships will have been added to our naval forces, each one embodying all the latest improvements. The three vessels for which bids are now to be invited are exactly alike. Their length is to be 257 feet, beam 37 feet, depth 19.6, and draught 16.6. They will each be of 2,000 tons displacement and 5,400 horse-power, with a guaranteed speed of eighteen knots, and carrying a crew of 295 officers and men. The motive power will be two triple expansion engines. Of coal 200 tons will be the load, although the bunkers will carry 425 tons. An ovoid-rounded tower will be on the forecastle and forward of that a wooden pilot-house, and the vessel will also have an electric light plant.

CRUSHED IN A STREET CAR.

Six Women Killed in an Accident at Kalamazoo, Mich.

A shocking accident occurred at the West Main street crossing of the Michigan Central Railroad, at Kalamazoo, Mich. A street-car, containing eight women and two men, was crossing the track when a switch-engine dashed down upon it at a high rate of speed, and the driver, being unable to get the car out of the way, the helpless passengers were hurled to a terrible death. The human freight was mangled in a terrible manner. The killed and wounded are: Mrs. Alexander Sandbach, killed and body highly mangled; Mrs. M. E. Wateles, instantly killed and body badly mangled; Miss Gertrude Tillotson, Mrs. George Smiley, Mrs. Middleton, and Mrs. Van Antwerp, killed; Mrs. Gibson, injured in the head and other parts; Mrs. Barnes, badly injured in the head and other parts.

Both of the male passengers escaped and the driver jumped from his engine in time to avoid anything but a few bruises.

A CHANCE FOR GENIUS.

The State Grange of Illinois Wants a Straw Binder.

The State Grange of Illinois, through its Executive Committee, offers $10,000 to be paid to any one who will invent a machine or device to attach to reapers that will bind wheat and oats with straw. Said device may work and twist its straw direct from the reaper, or it may be a separate machine that will twist the straw and wind on large spools that may be raveled on smaller spools by the farmer and set in the ground with the grain in shock. Said money to be paid as soon as the device is proved to be a success. Should more than one person claim the above $10,000 on his invention the committee reserve the right to choose the one that to them seems most practical. The said patent to be issued for the use and benefit of the Illinois State Grange and legally transferred by the said patentee. This offer holds good until July 4, 1892.

TO THE CATHOLIC CLERGY OF QUEBEC.

Summary of Decrees Passed Condemning Bazaars, Theaters, and Excursions.

Archbishop Fabre has issued a circular to his clergy in which he gives a summary of the decrees passed by the Seventh Council of Quebec and approved by his Holiness the Pope and comments thereon. This circular deals with the means adopted for raising money for religious purposes and condemns bazaars, concerts, excursions, and dinners, even when for charitable purposes. It urges the establishment for separate schools and condemns tenement societies. It deals in the strongest terms with blasphemy and condemns theaters, circuses, amateur theatricals, snowshoe races, skating clubs, and excursions for pleasure.

THE DEATH OF NATHAN BRATTIZED.

The Colored Population of Richmond, Va., Witnesses a Grand Immersion.

As a first result of the impressive and revival going on in Richmond, Va., for three weeks in the colored churches 300 have been baptized in the James river in mass. The crowd in attendance was estimated at from 20,000 to 30,000. The reverse method of in procession through the streets, many of the women wearing white robes and some of the more opulent having on flowing gowns. The three ministers stood in the river, three in the gradient approaching them at a time, and the groans and shouts, the ecstatic ejaculations that rolled over the vast multitude were something of the kind ever before heard in Richmond.

THE CROP REPORT.

A Favorable Outlook in Northwestern States.

The weather crop bulletin of the Agricultural Department at Washington, says last season is twenty days in advance in the Northwest. The weather during the past week was favorable to improved crop conditions in Minnesota, Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, and the most of Illinois, and portions of northern Illinois. Some replanting in that section will be necessary, owing to the high winds, which uncovered and scattered seeds. The weather was favorable for corn planting throughout the east half. Dakota reporting an unusually large acreage and planting well advanced. The condition of the fruit crop is encouraging in all sections.

TWO GOLD MINES FOUND.

Thousands Flocking to the Newly Discovered Diggings in Dakota.

Great excitement has been caused by the discovery of new and rich placer diggings about forty miles from Deadwood, D. T. Prospectors have been pouring in from the east and west, and the most of them have found a small scale showed gold in quantities, which was kept secret for a time, hoping work this spring the secret got out, and now thousands of men are rushing to the new El Dorado. Deer Lodge is a little lower than it was May 2. The outlook in the South and Southwest is encouraging, and nearly since the recent rains the prospects are encouraging, with the season more advanced than usual and the acreage in wheat considerably increased. The business failures continue large, and amount with the first five provinces to 279 against 279 in the first.

THREE NEW CRUISERS.

The Navy of the United States to Be Further Augmented.

The Secretary of the Navy is about to advertise for proposals for the construction of three twin screw protected cruisers, authorized by the last Congress and to cost not to exceed $700,000 each. A submarine torpedo boat is still to be contracted for, and when that is done some eighteen ships will have been added to our naval forces, each one embodying all the latest improvements. The three vessels for which bids are now to be invited are exactly alike. Their length is to be 257 feet, beam 37 feet, depth 19.6, and draught 16.6. They will each be of 2,000 tons displacement and 5,400 horse-power, with a guaranteed speed of eighteen knots, and carrying a crew of 295 officers and men. The motive power will be two triple expansion engines. Of coal 200 tons will be the load, although the bunkers will carry 425 tons. An ovoid-rounded tower will be on the forecastle and forward of that a wooden pilot-house, and the vessel will also have an electric light plant.

CRUSHED IN A STREET CAR.

Six Women Killed in an Accident at Kalamazoo, Mich.

A shocking accident occurred at the West Main street crossing of the Michigan Central Railroad, at Kalamazoo, Mich. A street-car, containing eight women and two men, was crossing the track when a switch-engine dashed down upon it at a high rate of speed, and the driver, being unable to get the car out of the way, the helpless passengers were hurled to a terrible death. The human freight was mangled in a terrible manner. The killed and wounded are: Mrs. Alexander Sandbach, killed and body highly mangled; Mrs. M. E. Wateles, instantly killed and body badly mangled; Miss Gertrude Tillotson, Mrs. George Smiley, Mrs. Middleton, and Mrs. Van Antwerp, killed; Mrs. Gibson, injured in the head and other parts; Mrs. Barnes, badly injured in the head and other parts.

Both of the male passengers escaped and the driver jumped from his engine in time to avoid anything but a few bruises.

A CHANCE FOR GENIUS.

The State Grange of Illinois Wants a Straw Binder.

The State Grange of Illinois, through its Executive Committee, offers $10,000 to be paid to any one who will invent a machine or device to attach to reapers that will bind wheat and oats with straw. Said device may work and twist its straw direct from the reaper, or it may be a separate machine that will twist the straw and wind and Dosha Counties farmers planted cotton as many as three times and each time the plant has been destroyed by the worms. Merchants are apprehensive and business is paralyzed.

Wild Gale in the East.

A storm of unparalleled fury occurred along the Atlantic coast on the 9th inst. Many cities were badly damaged by the wind, and thousands of people were panic-stricken, especially in New York City. The storm was particularly bad at Northfield, Vermont, where over one hundred persons were killed and many injured.

Doings of the Santa Fe.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, held at Topeka, Kan., 62,531 shares were represented. Wm. B. Strong, of Boston, was re-elected President of the system. A resolution was passed transferring the President's office from Boston to Chicago.

A Millionaire Dies in Poverty.

—Andrew Mitchell died in the City Hospital at Baltimore, Md. He refused to send to his relatives for help, saying that he had led a roving life for many years and declined to be a burden to others. Mitchell had been buried it was discovered that his parents had died at New Haven, Conn., two years ago and had left him $1,000,000.

Plenty of Delicate Food.

From Jamestown, Dakota, it is reported that after a very disagreeable night had been hanging over the city had disappeared a precipitation of frogs occurred, hundreds of them being picked up on the principal street of that city. It is believed that the cold, which was of a peculiar formation sucked the hoppers out of the pond.

Killed by a Boiler Explosion.

The boiler in the shop of the factory of A. A. Foster at Racine, Wis., exploded, wrecking the building and severely injuring Andrew Foster, who died a few hours after being injured. The loss is about $10,000; no insurance.

NEWS OF THE DIAMOND.

THE BASE-BALL SEASON IN FULL HEAT.

The Battle of the League Clubs for the Pennant—The Chicago Club Likely to Make a Strong Fight—New York and Boston Struggling for First Place.

[CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.]

The base-ball season is in full heat, and from now on, until the winter frosts chill and paralyze the hands and fingers of the players, the noises created by the colliding of bat and ball, by the enthusiastic plaudits of spectators, and by the strident voice of the hard-worked, conscientious and much-abused umpire, as he shouts, "One ball!" "Two ball!" "Strike, strike!" "Out!" will be heard on many thousands of diamonds and many thousands of vacant lots throughout the land.

The Chicago Club, after playing four games with Pittsburgh, of which they won three in gallant style, has come East for a series of sixteen games. Returning home the last of May, they will reopen the campaign on their own grounds and play twenty-seven straight games.

The result of the four games played on the home grounds against Pittsburg has been highly satisfactory to the friends of the sport in this city. Judging from the work shown by the players, these contests indicate that Anson is not so much of a weak in this department as many have been led to believe. Knock, it is true, is in bad form, but the boy who which he pitched was not lost through his fault, but by an unfortunate error in between two of the outfielders. Tener, Gumbert, and Hutchinson pitched in the three games that were won by the home team, and all three showed by their work that they were well up in the ring, and capable of doing effective work. Young promises to fast developing into a batter, and, if he keeps his head and works in the right direction from which to judge, he will yet become one of the second leagues of the League. Every time he batted the bat he hit the ball, and, if he keeps on in the same line he made a three-base hit and two-base hits, and, if he can get a few more homers—but clean, long, hard hits down the foul line—he will be the man we are expected infielder cannot step into Williams' place, as he is a fast runner, and, if he keeps shall have recovered his old-time form and confidence. Dowse, of course, is doing the best he can, but that is scarcely good enough. Anson has to be wanted in the outfield, and, as Anson says, he has had to spoil a good outfield in a vain attempt to strengthen his infield. Pfeffer is pleading is well satisfied with the work of the team so far, and is strong in the faith that they will capture the pennant.

The Boston and Boston boys are battling for first place ever since the season opened, and the chances vacillate first in favor of the one and then in favor of the other. In the aggregate, they are stronger than last season. Harry Wright's Philadelphia boys are coming up fast, and Boston on the field, and made it warm for the Chicago, Pittsburg, and Philadelphia clubs, the base-ball world if the cults outranked both Boston and New York when the results, of the season's work of the three clubs, are compared. Manager Hanlon has lapped pound. Any team managed by Harry Wright is an unknown factor in a base-ball tourney.

Cleveland has surprised everybody by the strength of its team so far. The Indianapolis is also showing up strong, and Pittsburg will make it a dangerous team every time they meet them. Pittsburg is an unknown quantity. Manager Harry Wright is an unknown factor in a base-ball tourney.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS.

EVENTS AND INCIDENTS THAT HAVE LATELY OCCURRED.

An Interesting Summary of the More Important Doings of Our Neighbors—Weddings and Deaths—Crimes, Casualties, and General News Notes.

THE YOUNGEST EDITOR.

—The Chicago News recently called attention to two instances of editorial precocity as evidenced in the experiment of a New York youth of but 12 years, and another at Colorado Springs, Col., under that age. The latter claimed to be not only the youngest editor, but to publish the smallest paper in America. A state exchange makes a note of the matter and says: Ralph C. Apted, of Grand Rapids, is entitled to the precedence, or rather the advantage, over the New York editor, at least in the matter of age. He is but 12 years old and has published the Miscellany, a weekly paper, for about ten months past. He was younger, therefore, than the New York boy when he began editorial work, and has printed four papers to the New York boy's one. As to the Colorado boy's claim to publishing the smallest paper in America, a comparison might be necessary to decide, but if it is smaller than the Miscellany it is very diminutive. The Miscellany contains eight pages, about three inches in length and two in width. In the matter of typing it is the principal diminutive size of the paper, Detroit certainly has the advantage over the foreign offering. The Miscellany is a son of Deputy Police Superintendent Horgan, was under 11 years old when he began to publish the paper. It is issued monthly, two inches deep and four inches wide. He is now only a tiny over 11 years old. The contents are entirely original, and, judging from the specimen before us, the boy will have no lack of material for his paper. The specimen before us is dated "Ionia, Mich., April 6. No. 1, Vol. 2, the first anniversary number, contained ten pages, and, from the fact that the publication was begun in the three-base hit and two-base hits, and, if he can get a few more homers—but clean, long, hard hits down the foul line—he will be the man we are expected infielder cannot step into Williams' place, as he is a fast runner, and, if he keeps shall have recovered his old-time form and confidence. Dowse, of course, is doing the best he can, but that is scarcely good enough. Anson has to be wanted in the outfield, and, as Anson says, he has had to spoil a good outfield in a vain attempt to strengthen his infield. Pfeffer is pleading is well satisfied with the work of the team so far, and is strong in the faith that they will capture the pennant.

—Albert Charbeneau, a reputable citizen, was arrested at Bay City on the complaint of State Insurance Commissioner Raymond. It was charged that Charbeneau solicited insurance for a company which was not authorized to do business in the State.

—A dispatch to the Free Press from Ishpeming says that "a fend of gold of great value was made last week only a few miles from this city, but several miles from any other fend has been discovered before. One small specimen of quartz, weighing only six ounces, contained thirty small nuggets of gold, weighing nearly an ounce avoirdupois. The exact location of the find is being kept secret until the discoverers can secure the land, but when the news becomes public it will create great excitement."

—The last Michigan monthly crop bulletin is based on the reports of 800 correspondents, and shows the amount of wheat winter killed to be insignificant. The condition is placed at 96 per cent. in Southern, 97 in Central and 100 in Northern Michigan. One year ago it was 95, 67 and 99 per cent, respectively. In April 279,317 bushels of wheat were reported marketed, and from August 1 May 1 12,530,747 bushels. Deducting for seed and home consumption, there is yet in farmers' hands 2,380,757 bushels of the 20 crop. Clover meadows and pastures are improved for the last week. The prospects for a full average fruit crop are excellent.

—The Executive Committee of the State Agricultural Society met at the State capital last week and decided to locate the State Fair in Lansing permanently. The board has spoken in favor of the fair coming grounds to the State society. It is probable the fair will be held during the week beginning Sept. 9.

—Monroe Democrat: "Some boys discovered a hawk in the barn of Morris Bentley. It is true that they had a shotgun and went for it, and got it the first shot. A dead hawk doesn't generally bring much in the poultry market, notwithstanding the fact that they usually cost considerable when shot in a barn. This one was an exception to the rule, and after Mr. Dunling figures up the cost of the barn, granary, pig pen and fences he will find that it cost more than the hawk by the Executive Committee, this Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Foster, proposes of the league. He could be allied with the Chicago club, and, if enough members, each of whom should constitute himself a committee of one, for the purpose of enlarging the membership, would be a decided gain to the club. The meeting first of all became plain as to the immediate future of the league, it should be purely educational or should be a political organization. There was a marked difference whether the man resigns or is fired." Lecture to them, give them stirring addresses. They needn't be partisan talk. On the contrary, advocate only principles of tariff reform, regardless of party. Such an address will often reach men who would fortify themselves against arguments if into them called to them. Have a sound, strong organization here and some kind of a nucleus everywhere. The more quietly you can work and communicate with the nucleus the better. Be always on the alert for them. We don't care whether they know anything about us if we only know everything about them to make them amenable to sound doctrine."

The remarks of this Nestor of the medical profession in America were those again interrupted by rousing applause.

Attention was called by another speaker of the necessity of reaching the farmer through his favorite paper. Judge Brown made some humorous allusions to farmers' characters, stating that he had lived on the farm during his early life. "I was also a Republican for longer than a lifetime," he said. "Subsequently I got my politics from Horace Greeley and my reason—was little I have—from Beecher. While having been one of the most active Republicans I am now on and-and-out free trader." This declaration provoked hearty applause. Revetting to the farmer again Judge Bangs remarked that the farmer was slow to think. Every man, more or less, hated to think. Professional men had relieved farmers from thinking by simply coming to them with their opinions ready made. The agitationists did the thinking for the farmer. They deserved a great deal of credit for being relieved from mental work, was the accepting of ready-made opinions. Assigned facts given him by the protectionists.

VERY HUNGRY INDEED.

GREEDY REPUBLICANS CLAMORING FOR SPOILS.

Dissatisfied with President Harrison Because the Faithful Are Not Being Provided for—Democrats Sympathy for Dudley.

(Washington telegram.)

The Republicans have been wont to make a part of the Democratic appetite for the pie, and it is a matter of pride and fast growing dissatisfaction in the minds of many that the Democratic appetite is partly due to his apparent slowness in providing for the people who are the Republicans are really much greater than the Democrats. Republicans feel as slow as the President may seem to his previous followers, it is a fact that he is making appointments more rapidly than President Cleveland did. While the special session of the Senate lasted the Republican leaders and strikers bitterly denounced Harrison's tardiness, and yet at the close of the session an actual count showed that no had made more than one-fourth as many appointments as President Cleveland did in the same time. A great deal of work was done by the public while Mr. Stevenson turned out Republicans, and Charles Foster, the instructions to the commission differ little from those which were given to the Democrat postmasters a great deal faster. In their haste to make appointments the Republican officials do not even stop to look up the papers on file. Superintendent Bell has just written to the Superintendents of Mails in Baltimore that his resignation was accepted when he never had resigned. Of course it makes no practical difference whether the man resigns or is fired, but it shows how anxious they are in haste in making appointments is too great to allow an inspection of the papers to see whether a resignation has been offered.

And every day brings forward new evidence of the coldness of the Republican party toward Dudley. The contest in the men in politics who have yet much to get from the President are talking openly about him, but in their private conversations they show no affection for Harrison, and complain both of appointments not made and appointments made without consulting party leaders. Gen. Harrison has no hope from Dudley's friends in his party, but there is a growing impression that he is considering Dudley. Among Republican politicians there is much sympathy for Col. Dudley. The statement that he has done more in the past twenty years for the Republican State Government of South Dakota and enjoy all the advantages of official order and national well being such a Government is pleasantness.

DEATH OF GEN. HARNEY.

The Oldest Officer on the Retired List Expires at Orlando, Fla.

Gen. William Selby Harney, the oldest officer on the retired list of the army, died at Orlando, Fla., on the 25th inst.

Gen. Harney was born in Tennessee, Aug. 22, 1800. His father was an intimate friend of Gen. Jackson, and young Harney early evinced a military taste. He was appointed a Lieutenant in 1818 by President Monroe, and his first active service was against the celebrated pirate Laffite. In 1823 he went to Missouri to quell Indian outbreaks, and was stationed near St. Louis for some time. While at Council Bluffs, in 1829, he was promoted to a Captaincy. Captain Harney was a handsome man, and Miss Mary Hawk, was and was married Mary Mallarshy, an heiress. His three children are John M. Harney, Eliza Harney (Countess De Noay), and Ann Harney (Countess De Thury). Capt. Harney fought in the Seminole War and was made a Colonel. When the Mexican war broke out he commanded the Texas frontier. For disobeying orders of Gen. Scott he was court-martialed, suspended, and his rank temporarily suspended. The action was afterwards reversed, and from that time on his career was brilliant. He was a Brigadier General in 1847, and was stationed in Texas. When the war broke out he was appointed Commander of the Department of the West, with headquarters in St. Louis. He was promoted to Major General in 1863, when he retired. He accumulated a great fortune and started his friends two years ago by marrying his housekeeper. The family opposed the marriage, but the General had his way.

UNITED BRETHREN CHURCH.

The Quadrennial Report Shows a Gratifying Increase in Membership.

The world's quadrennial conference of the United Brethren church was held in New York City. Bishop Weaver's address showed an increase in the past quadrennial of 40,000 members in the church; 142 organized societies; nearly $200,000 in benevolent interests; over a half million in church property valuation, and a gain in the Sunday-school attendance of 37,000. The missionary contributions were $90,400, an increase of $30,000 over the previous years. It favored the non-prohibition clause in relation to membership in secret societies, which stand brought a minority report from Bishop Wright of Ohio.

TARIFF REFORM PLANS.

MEETING OF THE ILLINOIS TARIFF REFORM LEAGUE.

Best Way of Reaching Farmers—The Venerable Dr. Davis Maps Out the Work of the Illinois League—A Strong Argument for Continuing and Pushing the Work—Officers Elected.

When the first public meeting in the interest of tariff reform was held in Chicago, some time in May of last year, at Farwell Hall, there was much talk of the mugwump character of the promoters of the movement, and much more was said about the political character of the agitation. While the active designs of the tariff reform men disappeared in the excitement of last fall's campaign, the movement was not allowed to die from political apoplexy. On the contrary, the leading men in the League kept bravely abreast of the time, and after the election steps were taken

EXPLANATORY.

During the past week there has been a good deal of vigorous "kicking" because the JOURNAL was being moved into a room over a wagon shop. There are several questions involved, and their decision was the basis of our acceptance of these quarters. The first consideration was one of economy, and a reduction of expenses. This room costs for rent less than half as much as any other room on Bridge street could be had. The necessity of this economy will be apparent when we state that for three years the paper has been kept up to a standard above its own legitimate receipts, by the profits of the job office salary, every dollar of which has been expended in an effort to make the JOURNAL equal to the best county newspaper in northern Michigan. How well we have succeeded, our readers must decide. Every dollar of our salary has been so expended, and we are to-day, when all incumbrances are provided for, not one dollar richer on account of having been postmaster than we were when we took the office three years ago.

A second consideration is that the room is plenty large enough for our present business. Swallow & Lamphear did an excellent job of painting and kalsomining, and with eight windows on three sides it is a pleasant place to work.

Henceforth the paper must stand on its own merits. We shall make it as good as the business will warrant. Paper and help must be paid every week out of current receipts, therefore if cash is slow to come in, the amount of work on the paper must be gauged accordingly. If an increase of receipts should warrant the expense of more help, we shall be only too glad to increase the amount of space devoted to local news.

Come in and see us in our new quarters in the Nettleton building, opposite the Bridge street house, and drop a dollar in the editoral cash box whenever you can spare it,—if your account calls for it.

It's gone. The once doleful sound of the republican organs telling "what a great friend Harrison is to the laboring man." In about four years the same thing will arise. Laboring men, it will pay you to keep your eye on the workings of this administration.—Traverse Eagle.

THERE is but one thing needed to make the steamship City of Paris complete. She should fly the Stars and Strips at her topmast. Her owners are mostly Americans; she is a creation of American enterprise; her wonderful swiftness is a matter of justifiable national pride; but she carries the flag of Great Britain. To build such a vessel in this country would subject the person undertaking it to a fine of $50,000, or, what is equivalent to a fine, that much added expenditure. Is it any wonder that out of a total foreign tonnage of 12,956,159 tons in 1888, American vessels only carried 2,913,998 tons or a little more than one fifth?—Philadelphia Record.

TOOS parents to-day who are most ready to blame the public schools for the life failures of their children are commonly those who have troubled themselves the least about their home training, and consequently have supplied the schools, at first, with unfit material, and afterwards have neutralized the school training by the careless, slipshod habits allowed in the home. No schools can do their work unless the homes do their part as well, and, perhaps in no country and at no time has the duty of the home ever been so much in need of enforcement as in America to-day.—New York Evening Post.

MEMORIAL DAY 1889.

Program of Exercises for May 30, as Arranged by Baxter Post.

The committee in charge have arranged the following program for the exercises for Memorial day:

Marshal of the day, Past Commander E. H. Green; orator, Commander Byron See. The assembly will be sounded by the bugler of Baxter Post promptly at one o'clock P. M. Then the Charlevoix Cornet Band will play a selection and the procession will form in the following order: Charlevoix Cornet Band; Schools; Good Templars; Knights of Labor; Cigar-makers Union; Orangemen; Village President and Council; Oddfellows; Masonic Sons of Veterans; Womans Relief Corps Visiting Posts in order of senority; Flower Car; Baxter Post; Ambulance; Citizens and carriages. The procession will move to the cemetery where they will enter the grounds in reverse order the band playing a dirge.

At the cenotaph after a selection by the band, prayer by the Rev. W. H. McCartney, and the address by Commander See, the usual ceremonies as laid down in the Grand Army ritual will be followed, including salutes; after which the W. R. C. and their committees will decorate the graves. That being done all will again assemble around the cenotaph where the band will lead and the whole assemblage will join in singing America. The procession will then form by reverse order except the carriages and return to place of starting and be dismissed. A cordial invitation is extended to all old soldiers to assist in honoring the occasion. All who may wish to contribute flowers are requested to forward the same to the residence of Dr. Carlstein as soon as the 29th, so that the committee can get them properly arranged Bartholomew's opera house will be headquarters, where Baxter Post will assemble at ten o'clock for escort duty. Should the weather be inclement a service will be held in the hall.

Ask for Ayer's

Sarsaparilla, and be sure you get it, when you want the best blood-purifier. With its forty years of unexampled success in the cure of Blood Diseases, you can make no mistake in preferring Ayer's to any other. The foremost of modern blood medicines, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is still the most popular, being in greater demand than all others combined. It is highly concentrated—the only $1 Sarsaparilla worth $5 a bottle.

Sarsaparilla

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is selling faster than ever before. I never hesitate to recommend it."—George W. Whitman, Druggist, Albany, Ind.

"I am safe in saying that my sales of Ayer's Sarsaparilla far exceed those of any other, and it gives thorough satisfaction."—L. H. Bush, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills are the best selling medicines in my store. I can recommend them conscientiously."—C. Bickham, Tamaroa, Rosiland, Ill.

"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla here for over thirty years and always recommend it when asked to name the best blood-purifier."—W. T. McLean, Druggist, Augusta, Ohio.

"I have sold your medicines for the last seventeen years, and always keep them in stock, as they are staples. There is nothing so good for the youthful blood" as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Robt. L. Parker, Fox Lake, Wis.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla gives the best satisfaction of any medicine I have in stock. I recommend it, or, as the Doctors say, I prescribe it over the counter. It never fails to meet the cases for which I recommend it, even where the doctors' prescriptions have been of no avail."—C. F. Calhoun, Monmouth, Kansas.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Price $1; six, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

The entering wedge of a complaint that may prove fatal is often a slight cold, which a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral might have cured in the commencement. It would be well, therefore, to keep this remedy within reach at all times.

The prevalence of scrofulous taint in the blood is much more universal than many are aware. Indeed but few persons are free from it. Fortunately, however, we have in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the most potent remedy ever discovered for this terrible affliction.

For some time threatening letters have been sent to a Bohemian named Janusheck, living near Horton's Bay, and he has been warned to leave the community. Last Wednesday night unknown parties shot and killed a brood mare belonging to him, and valued at $200. Reward is offered for the arrest of the offenders.

An invention that is being used for sending coins through the mails, consists of a piece of paper about above the size of an envelope. In it are holes the size of a silver quarter, a half dollar and a dollar, with red paper seals, ready to pass across each hole. A coin can be put in and sealed, inclosed in an envelope and sent through the mail in safety.

The report comes as a support to the recent action of the school committee, in the adoption of the Hess system of warming and ventilation, that the Hide Park Ill., school board have adopted the Hess for a new building, although they already have the Rutan in operation, and their building was one examined by the first committee which made a report in favor of the Rutan.

A new stone-and-timber crosswalk was put in on south side of Clinton street across State, on Monday. At the time the old plank crosswalk was put in, that was taken out to-day, a stone-and-timber crosswalk was put in on the north side at the same crossing, where it would have practically the same wear as the one on the south side, and it is yet in good condition, demonstrating beyond question that they make the most substantial crosswalk, and last considerably longer than the old-fashioned plank crosswalk.

RETROSPECT.

BY E. C. CLANE.

The sun in his chariot has gone down the west,
The bird on the spray has sunk in their nest;
The flowers on the beach have closed their sweet eyes,
And the faraway stars shine bright in the skies.

Now darkness has gathered over mountain and plain,
And on the soft breeze come the sounds of refrain,
While hallowed memories steal over the soul,
Awakening emotions we cannot control.

Now memory wanders away to the
The pleasures of childhood, of manhood and strife,
Of hopes long deferred, of reverses sustained,
Of trials well-borne, of victories gained.

O night, in thy quiet and somber array!
How like to life's journey the last close of day,
When the spirit, grown faint from sorrow and toil,
In silence relinquishes the tenure of life.

But the darkness of night is succeeded by day,
And the gloom of the grave will pass quickly away,
And we rise and rest to the weary ones given,
In the home universal—God's beautiful heaven.

HUNTING UP AN HEIR.

BY RUTH CHESTERFIELD.

It was a cold evening. The clouds which had been all day black and threatening were now beginning to send their snow flakes through the air, and John Hatchet was hurrying home to his supper at a headlong pace. John worked in Mr. Armstrong's great iron foundry—at low wages, it is true, but, as John said, "A little is better than nothing."

There had been a strike among the foundry hands, but John took no part in it; he kept steadily on at his work, and tried to persuade others to do the same.

"Times are hard," he said, "but what's the use of making them worse?" And that day when the strikers came in a body, led by Hans Schneider, and attempted to stop the works, John said, "There'll be bloodshed first."

And his former comrades, knowing him for a resolute fellow, after some parleying, concluded to depart, but threatened to return another day with arms in their hands.

"Very well," said John, "we'll be ready for you." They never came, however.

But, as I was saying, John was hurrying along home at the top of his speed, looking neither to the right nor to the left, so that he would not have seen the old man leaning against a lamp-post if he had not first run plump against him, and nearly knocked him over.

"Hallo!—beg pardon! All right my grandfather!" he exclaimed, as with one strong arm he restored the old man to his center of gravity.

"My stars! I thought you'd finished me," gasped the old man, embracing the lamp-post.

"I came pretty near it, that's a fact," said John. "But seems to me you shouldn't be out such a night as this; your folks ought to take better care of you."

"I haven't any folks," said the old man.

"Well, you'd better be at home any way."

"That's easy said; but I haven't any home either."

"Where are you bound then, grandfather? If your lodgings are near by I'll help you there, for you appear to be about used up."

"So I am; but I haven't a place to lay my head unless you take pity on me."

John hesitated. A strange vagrant wasn't just the most desirable guest, but he was evidently old and feeble, and John's kind heart was touched, so he said: "Well, come along with me. I'll give you a night's lodging, and to-morrow I'll see what can be done."

The old man needed no second invitation, and in a few minutes the two reached John's house. No sooner had he opened the door than five children and a dog rushed to greet him, while his wife, an easy, rosy-jolly little woman, exclaimed, "Why, John, what makes you so late? Supper's been ready to go on the table these fifteen minutes; the muffins won't be fit to eat."

"I'll risk 'em," said John, laughing. "See here, Debby, I've brought some company home to supper. I found this old gentleman out in the storm, and no better place to bring up at than the lamp-post, so I took him in tow, and here he is."

"He's welcome, I'm sure," said Debby.

"Why, his teeth chatter with the cold—or would if he had any, poor man—and not a bit of an overcoat. No place to go, did you say? Why he'd have frozen to death before morning."

"Aye, and starved too," said the man, looking longingly toward the table.

"To be sure! How thoughtless of me to stand here jabbering when I dare say you didn't have any dinner to speak of."

"I've had nothing to eat for two days, ma'am."

"Mercy on us! And to think such things should happen in a Christian land, John! Isn't it dreadful? Sit right up to the table, Mr.—what did you say his name was, John?"

"My name is Dill—Joshua Dill, ma'am."

"There used to be Dills up in Pansumpsic. I wonder if he's one of 'em?" said Debby.

"Never mind that now," said John; "give the poor man his supper, and you can get his family history afterward."

"Those Dills were sort of relations of mine. It would be funny if he was one of 'em, wouldn't it?" persisted Debby, as she heaped the old man's plate with eatables, which he devoured, unembarrassed by the curious and eager gaze of the five children and the investigations of Pooto, who from the first had regarded the stranger with evident distrust.

For this Pooto probably had no better reason than that the man was poorly clad; for the dog, as you know, is a natural aristocrat, and will drive away the man who approaches your door in rags and a slouched hat, while he suffers the man in broadcloth and a stove-pipe to pass unchallenged. Is it that, by some subtle instinct, he divines that rags and filth are apt to be the wearer of ill-doing, and neatness and thrift the reward of well-doing?

But good little Mrs. Hatchet did not at all sympathize with this view of the case, and rebuked Pooto for his want of hospitality. As a rule, the more wretched a human being was the more she took him into her motherly heart. Accordingly she was greatly delighted when she found that her present guest once had relatives in Pasumpsic, and she and all the five children at once took to calling him "Grandfather Dill."

"Only think, John," said she, when the old man had gone to bed, "he says his folks came from Pasumpsic. No doubt he is some relation to us."

"It would be a great comfort to find yourself forfeith cousin to a tramp," said John.

The next morning Grandfather Dill was as old from the effects of his exposure that he was unable to rise, and what with the hot herb teas with which Mrs. Hatchet scalded him inside, and the mustard plasters with which she flayed him outside, it was another week before he was able to sit in the great arm-chair in the corner, and begin to talk about resuming his wanderings again.

For this, however, he was mainly feeably too feeble, and John went to the town authorities to get them to take him off his hands. They at with one accord declared that he was none of their paupers, and that they never already overrun with tramps, and that the only thing they had justified in doing was to forward him to Littleton, where he stated that he belonged.

But Mrs. Hatchet was not to be so easily decided that he should not be moved in his present condition, and John quite agreed with her. So Grandfather Dill staid on and on till it became evident that he never would take the journey to Littleton, or any other journey but the last long journey which awaits us all.

Meantime, John's conduct elicited various comments from his townspeople—some praised and some blamed.

Hans Schneider said:

"I al'ays thought John was a fool, and now I know it, burdening himself with a pauper in these hard times. He'll come to the poor-house himself yet, see if he don't."

As Grandfather Dill grew weaker he had, or seemed to have, some strange fancies. He often muttered the name of "Prissy," coupled with the words, "She shan't have a cent of it!" And at last one day he asked John to bring a notary to make his will.

"I am going to make it in favor of you and your wife," said he; "you've both been good to me, and to me was a Dill, or her mother was; and as for 'Prissy'—there he stopped.

"Who is Prissy?" asked John.

"Nobody; I don't know any such person. Bring the notary."

At first John put him off, for he did not wish to offend the notary by asking him to come out in the storm—and it was but the old man was so persistent that for the sake of quieting him he finally acceded to the request, and he will be dry made, signed, sealed, and delivered.

"If there is any truth in this, you're a rich man," said the notary to John.

After this Grandfather Dill seemed satisfied, though he failed rapidly; but a few minutes before he died he murmured, "Poor Prissy! Perhaps she wasn't so much to blame, after all."

That the property so liberally bequeathed to him existed anywhere but in Grandfather Dill's imagination John did not believe, and but for the notary would scarcely have given the matter another thought; but the notary said the old man had given the items of the will with great precision, which was in itself an indication of its truthfulness, and that it was very easy to find out whether there was anything in it or not. For his part he thought it worth looking into.

John said it was his opinion that the old man had nothing but the rags on his back, but still, as Mr. Armstrong was about to send him away on a business commission, he could easily take Littleton on his route, thereby "killing two birds with one stone," as he jestingly observed.

To his unbounded surprise, and to the equal surprise of the Littleton people, he ascertained through a lawyer that the seeming pauper was indeed the owner of thousands.

He was considered a fool in the town, nor was it known that he had any elsewhere. He was not a native of Littleton, however, but had come, it was believed, from Pomfret; so to Pomfret went John.

None of the younger generation remembered any Dills, but some of the older ones knew that there had once been such a family, though they had long since lost all knowledge of them.

"If anybody can tell you about them old Granny Mellion can," said the landlord of the Eagle Hotel. "She knows everything. She's a regular 'History of Pomfret' in one volume." And so it proved.

"Do I remember Mr. Dill—Joshua Dill?" said the old lady. "To be sure I do. He was one of our leading citizens once, but after he quarreled with his daughter he was all broken up."

"Then he had a daughter?"

"Yes; a stubborn, headstrong piece as ever lived, and wild and heedless besides. He couldn't do anything with her after her mother died. At last he got so angry at something—I never rightly knew what—that he said she's scolded her worse than common, and she threatened to go off and leave him to himself. He told her to go if she wanted to, but she should never come back if she did.

"He didn't expect she'd go, but she went, and nobody knew that they ever saw each other again. Mahala Hunt, that kept house for him, told the story, and she ought to know, for she was intimate to see him after she'd gone. He's dead and buried, and the last of his family. As a rule, the more wretched a human being was the more she took him into her motherly heart. Accordingly she was greatly delighted when she found that her present guest once had relatives in Pasumpsic, and she and all the five children at once took to calling him "Grandfather Dill."

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE

THE House met at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the 6th inst., as a committee of the whole. The Wells party of Lenawee, complicating the use of the Hilsen voting machine, received an adverse committee report. The bill authorizing the appointment of a guardian by Judges of Probate in counties having a population of 25,000 or more, was reported by the committee, a bill passed the House, amendatory of the whole which is the same as one taken up on the part of several families to secure control of great tracts of valuable low lands in Lake, Mason, and Oceana. The Lowe bill, providing for the taxation of bank stock ratable on a wholesale scale, with exceptions for this purpose, and limits the amount of bank one capital stock to $100,000, passed. The Governor approved a bill to prevent tonnage discrimination on the Sault Ste. Marie Ship Canal. The House concurred in the Senate bill appropriating $12,500 for an amusement hall at Coldwater Soldiers' Home. The Senate met at 8 o'clock in the evening, but did no business of importance.

THE Senate passed the Detroit boulevard bill on the 7th inst., just as it passed the House the August bill, prohibiting the sale of tobacco to minors under 16 years of age, which the House had passed the House. A bill was also passed making appropriations for a state agricultural college and a pioneer school and museum at Ann Arbor. The House passed the Senate bill to repeal the act for the formation of school districts in Grand Rapids Township for the purpose of relieving the Senate of its responsibility for homogeneity; increasing the salary of the Librarian and Assistant, House bill fixing the compensation of the Warden and Superintendent of the Upper Peninsula Reform School at the rate of $1,000 and $600 respectively, a resolution was offered appropriating $1,375 for the expenses of the inauguration of the Governor and military to the New York Centennial, and a bill was passed by the Senate and Military Affairs, the student at the Orchard Lake Cadets at the celebration was commanded by resolution. An effort for morning sessions failed. The House passed bills authorizing the Ionia Soldiers' Home to erect a hospital building, and for the relief of Lucy Ann Ely, providing for final compensation for services in the office of the Wayne County Probate Court; to prevent the spread of contagious and infectious diseases, appropriating 90,000 for the support of the State Public School, and to provide for the support of the County Agricultural Public School. A bill to pension Judge Swift, of the Detroit Recorder's Court, at $6,000 per year, was killed, as was a resolution appropriating $50,000 for the Michigan Soldiers' Home. The Senate concurred, reducing the tax on the foreign fire insurance companies, was lost and reconsidered and the bill tabled.

As a member of the Committee of Arrangements," said the caller at the hotel, "I want to find out what terms you can give to delegates to a convention to be held in this city next week. We shall need accommodations for fifty or more persons."

"Our regular rates are $3.50 per day," responded the landlord, "but for a party of fifty I can, of course, make a considerable—" By the way, what kind of a gathering is it to be?

"It is the regular annual State convention of the Vegetarians' Association."

"My terms," said the landlord, emphatically, "will be $6 per day."—Chicago Tribune.

Not Afraid of the Sun.

A bright youth, undergoing examination a few days ago on admission to the Cadet Corps, was asked whether he found himself confronted with the sun, and if so, how he shielded his eyes on their way. In a burst of gratitude these last-named individuals invited the donors to name their son, when, without reflecting upon the helplessness of the little victim, they loaded him down for all his future with the name of "Grover Harrison." If the little fellow does not work at cross purposes all his life it will be because of the truth of the old adage that "there is nothing in a name."

Healthy Eaters.

"Sir, I am sorry to say that you are served slowly, but with intelligence and politeness. No "duchesses" in the great cities of the North or the fashionable resorts of the South.

"Those good negroes are such cheerful, open faces! They seem so glad to be alive, and they look so good-natured that it does one good to see them. When they look at one another they laugh. When you look at them they laugh. If a negro sees another negro black than himself he is delighted. He calls him 'dah,' and looks on him in a patronizing way. If he sees a light-colored man, he calls the whites so when they roll them in their own droll fashion; then he runs out white teeth constantly on view, framed in thick retroussé lips; the swaying motion of his walking with broad toes and head thrown back; the musical voice, sweet, but sonorous, and so pleasing compared to the horrible twang of the lower class people in the North, all make up a picturesque whole. You forget the color and fall to admiring them.

"And how amusing they are!

At the Everett Hotel, Jacksonville, Fla., I one day went to the wrong table.

"You've come to de wrong table, sah," said the colored waiter. Then, indicating the negro who served at the next table, he added: "Dat's de gentleman dah waits on yes, sah."

I immediately recognized my "gentleman" and changed my seat. The fact is that all the negroes are alike at a glance. It requires as much personal study to tell one from another as it does to distinguish one French gendarme from another French gendarme. —Jonathan and His Continent, Max O'Rell.

Washing Out the Stomach.

A medical journal reports that the young men of Washington, when invited out to dinner, carry the preparations of their toilet so far as to wash out their stomachs with a stomach pump. If this the Record remarks "It might even be regarded as an act of courtesy to the host to bring to his table a stomach that has been scrupulously laundried, and which lies in neat and antiseptic emptiness folded beneath the diaphragm." The British Medical Journal favors cleansing the stomach before meals in a less vigorous or heroic fashion, viz.: By drinking freely of water. Of this it says: "It washes away the mucus which is secreted during the intervals of repose and favors peristalsis of the whole alimentary tract. The membrane thus cleansed is in a much better condition to receive food when converted into soluble compounds. Food coated with tenacious mucus matter must necessarily be slow of digestion, and so especially in the morning before breakfast a good glass of water makes a hygienic preparation for breakfast."—Powder Health Monthly.

What's In a Name!

A son was born to an immigrant and his wife on a Southern Pacific train, and generous passengers made up a purse to clear the impecunious parents on their way. In a burst of gratitude these last-named individuals invited the donors to name their son, when, without reflecting upon the helplessness of the little victim, they loaded him down for all his future with the name of "Grover Harrison." If the little fellow does not work at cross purposes all his life it will be because of the truth of the old adage that "there is nothing in a name."

1870. City of Boston, disappeared; Cambria, wrecked on Irish coast.
1872. Atlantic, wrecked on the coast of Nova Scotia; Tripoli, wrecked on the Irish coast.
1873. Manhattan, wrecked off Long Island; Metropolis, wrecked on the coast of Nova Scotia; Wisconsin, wrecked on the Scotch coast; Ville du Havre, run down by the Scotland; Pomeranian, wrecked on the Irish coast; Northern Michigan Insane Asylum, authorized by act of Detroit to lease land for the improvement of its sewer. The Governor and Legislature will be asked to appoint a big notaries public; to provide for a municipal court in Detroit; to pay the Sheriff of Wayne and Judge Jerome the salaries of Circuit Judge Jerome. The Governor appointed John Ferguson, of Ionia, a commissioner to Saginaw Creek; Ferdinand W. Nordhauer, member of the Board of Control of the Soldiers' Home, vice Capt. Alfred Lambert; Lieut. M. Longyear, of Marquette, member of the Board of Control of the Upper Peninsula School, and Thomas Applegate, member of the Board of Control of the Ionia School.

THE Senate complied with the House "request" for the use of the Senate Hall, which was defeated by a vote of 10 yeas to 19 nays. Senator Ferguson introduced a resolution to amend the constitution, so as to provide that cities may secure authorizing East City to incur a debt of $100,000 for the purpose of building a new City Hall, which was passed by the Senate not at 8 o'clock in the evening, and she knew he was looking for Prissy."

"Prissy!" said John.

"Yes; her name was Priscilla, you know. But Prissy never came, and by and by he seemed to give it up, and other that the only object he had in the world appeared to be to save and hoard money. And it didn't do him any good, either, for he wouldn't even allow himself enough to eat, nor Mahala either. At last she said she couldn't stand it any longer, and she left him, and by and by he died out and was nobody knows where."

"And his daughter?"

"Oh, most likely she's dead! There's been a good many stories about about her, but some say that they didn't amount to much."

Then John thanked the old lady for her information, and having in his turn told her what he knew of Mr. Dill they parted.

When John reported to Mr. Hatch, lawyer, the very strange information he had gathered at Pomfret that gentleman said: "It isn't of the slightest consequence, sir; all the relations in the world couldn't upset the will, which is perfectly legal."

John smiled. "I suppose the best way to settle the matter of Prissy's being or living would be to advertise, wouldn't it?" he asked.

"Doubtless it would; but what do you want to ascertain for? You'll only make trouble for yourself."

"It seems to me the right thing to do," said John, "and as I don't understand much about such matters I will get you to attend to it for me, and send me word if you hear anything."

"Of course, I will attend to it if such are your orders; but mind, sir, it is not my advice, and I decline to be held responsible for the consequences."

"I hold no one responsible but myself," said John.

The news of John's fortune reached home before he did, and he at once became a very important personage in the little village. The only dull in his friends flocked around him with congratulations, but those who had formerly overlooked the poor mechanic entirely suddenly discovered that he was a man of extraordinary merit. Mr. Brown strong expressed joy at his good luck at the same time he said: "I don't see how I am to get along without you."

"Perhaps you won't have to," said John. "I mean to keep right on with my work as long as I can."

As for Mrs. Ratchet, she declared it was a fairy story. She would have a new silk dress before another Sunday. "Who would have dreamed when you brought that old man home that it would end like this?"

"It hasn't ended," said John.

"There, that's just like you! Bad luck! Debby: "you've never excited a thousand pounds." Debby just like dancing and clapping my hands."

And John's exercising a pirouette which was the means of bringing her foot down upon Pooto's tail. He ran under the table with a yelp, and she dragged him out and petted him, saying: "Never mind, Pooto; you shall have a beautiful new collar with a silver label, so you shall."

"Debby," said John, "if anything should happen that this money should turn out not to be yours after all, would it be such a terrible disappointment to you?"

"Oh, John, what do you mean?" said Debby.

"Grandfather Dill had a daughter," said John. "Do you remember his last words?"

"Yes—let me see. He said, 'Poor Prissy! Perhaps she wasn't so much to blame after all.'"

"Well, Prissy was his daughter. If she is alive her father's money is rightfully hers."

"In spite of the will?"

"In spite of the will," said John.

"But she may be dead. I hope she is. O Lordy! I didn't mean to say that." And Debby clapped her hand over her mouth as if to keep back the wicked words. "But to think of being as poor as ever again after all our plans and hopes. Why couldn't you tell me there was a doubt about it in the first place?"

"Because you went on so you didn't give me time," said John. "Besides it isn't really settled that we give up the money even if Prissy is alive."

"How is anybody going to know what you mean?" said Debby, impatiently, as mimicked my Dills, but some of the older ones knew that there had once been such a family, though they had long since lost all knowledge of them.

"If anybody can tell you about them old Granny Mellion can," said the landlord of the Eagle Hotel. "She knows everything. She's a regular 'History of Pomfret' in one volume." And so it proved.

We ask the reader's special attention to the following testimonials, as bearing on the question of the genuineness of the guaranteed to take one bottle of Warner's Safe Cure, and see what a change for the better Cure and has entirely recovered. We think it proper to add that I was troubled with my kidneys for over two years, but am now free from all kidney troubles, and feel as well as I ever did. I cheerfully recommend your Safe Cure.

CARY YEAS, Aurora, Ill., Dec. 29, 1888.

For nearly a year I suffered from Gravel, and was under the treatment of a doctor. I took a great deal of medicine, but it all did me no good. I then began taking Warner's Safe Cure, and after using one bottle of it I began to pass the gravel in small lumps, and took half of it. The gravel stone left me, and I began to feel like a new man. I consider it a blessed gift to my life.—MAS. DOLAY MCCOY, Ottawa, Ill.

Mr. Marion Mills, Dec. 29, 1888.—I have been troubled with my kidneys, which incapacitated me from work, when the friends of a friend had a wonderful cure by the use of Warner's Safe Cure, and I was induced to try it. I was Christian, and I can say in all sincerity that it has done me more good than any other medicine I have taken. I recommend it to all my friends.—MRS. CHRISTIANA BOLTON, Mills, Ill.

Mr. Marion Mills, Dec. 29, 1888.—I have proved a bottle of Warner's Safe Cure, and find it a valuable medicine. I shall use it in my family when I need a medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended.—REV. J. H. MILLER, Mills, Ill.

Not So Very Different.

"Have you heard of Smith lately?" asked one traveling man of another when they met on the train.

"Yes; he and his brother are in Kansas."

"They were both of a literary turn of mind, I remember. What are they doing?"

"Bill Smith is doing some work for an Eastern magazine, writing fairy stories."

"And Jim?"

"Jim is editing a real estate paper."—Merchant Traveler.

Ethereal wife (rapturously)—Oh, George! Mrs. Van Dorcent has bought the elegant sapphires which have been on exhibition at Stiffaney's. She paid $12,000 for them. Oh, darling! I have never before nor since seen such rich blue as they are!

Husband—If you could have seen Mr. Van Dorcent, as I did, just after his wife told him of her purchase, you would not say that, dearest. He was infinitely more blue than the sapphires.—Jewelers' Weekly.

SSS THE WELL TOOT The world ought to know of the wonderful cures of Scrofula by Swift's Specific. Some time ago I noticed in a paper a copy of an advertisement of a cure of Scrofula from the first bottle of S. S. S. I had tried everything else for months since I got taken down with the disease, and had no sign of return of the Scrofula disease. Now, I know that S. S. S. is the best medicine for Scrofula. Yours truly, M. A. DAVIS, Atlanta, Ga.

TO THOSE WHO know what S. S. S. has done for them, it is a pleasant duty to be considered friends. Our experience with the treatment in regard to Blood Diseases, has proved to us that S. S. S. is a safe and reliable remedy. Yours truly, MOS. ADAM BOTWELL, Atlanta, Ga.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., May 23, 1889.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Boyne City.

MAY 20.—Circus court begins tomorrow.

Frankie Sudman, while wrestling a few days ago, dislocated his elbow joint, the fore-arm turning back. His mother set it, and the boy is again in school.

The steamer Clara Belle, took sixty passengers to Charlevoix to take in the band concert on Friday evening.

Frank Moon, son of David Moon, while felling a tree was struck by it in such a way as to fracture his skull. He has been speechless since, two or three days.

Wm. Boswell the photographer, who has been visiting his family in Clare for a few weeks, has returned and is again ready for business.

Mrs. Andrew Mitchell while returning from Charlevoix a few days since, was thrown from the buggie and broke her ankle.

We finished planting our corn and beans to-day, and if the correspondents and editor of the JOURNAL will visit us next August we will treat them to succotash, Jack Frost and the weather permitting.—[We will be there.—ED.]

The Clara Belle commenced her her daily trips to Harbor Springs yesterday.

Mr. Mat. Cunningham is called to Eastern Ontario, Canada, by the illness of his mother.

For fear that your other correspondent's will forget to mention it, I inform you that we have had several fine showers lately.

East Jordan.

From the Enterprise.

A meeting of the directors of the Charlevoix county Agricultural Society has been called at the secretary's office, East Jordan, May 24th at 10 o'clock a. m., to make arrangements for the annual fair for 1889.

The first cargo of bark left East Jordan on Friday by the schr. Cuba. Shipped by W. L. French.

Mrs. Chas. G. Lewis, who is at Boyne City visiting her parents, brought a baby boy to light on Saturday. Both are doing well, and Chas. is happy.

The str. Cummings is doing good business between here and Traverse City. She is a first class boat, and the route is a very serviceable one.

Farmers and others should bear in mind that in four month's time our annual Fair will be upon us, and they should already begin to think of what they are going to exhibit.

A. E. Hays has disposed of his residence on the corner of Fourth and Williams street to James Ingalls, of Alba, and expects to leave for Kansas by June 1st.

On Friday evening last, Mr. A. D. Cruickshank, of Charlevoix, entertained an appreciative audience at the town hall with a lecture descriptive of his travels in old and New Mexico and Arizona.

Chas. Lovett rolled 144,000 barrel hoops in one week of 57 hours at the Wilson hoop factory. His highest daily record was 27,000 in 9½ hours.

Advance.

The Oneida loaded with wood for Peter Karlskin last Saturday, and will be back soon, after wood for A. B. Steele.

John Healey has been selling potatoes to Mr. VonPlaten at 12½ cents a bushel. When potatoes are as cheap as that they are hardly worth eating.

F. E. Miller gave an exibition at Advance last Friday night which was not very well attended on account of the rain, but those who were there report it as being very interesting.

Our former fellow townsman, A. E. Hayes, we understand, has returned from an extended trip out west. He has visited Oregon and Oklahoma but does not fall in love with the country at either place. He will probably locate in Kansas.

Our drought has at last been broken Within the past few days heavy rains have fallen which starts the grain and grass growing nicely and makes the farmer rejoice at the prospect of plenty of hay.

Ironton.

MAY 22.—Corn planting has come to a stand still, waiting for warmer weather.

While returning from his work Monday evening John Stewart found the body of a man floating among the logs and brush on the arm about a mile south of Ironton. He notified Supt. Miller, and Tuesday morning Justice Noyes held an inquest over the body. The verdict was that the deceased came to his death by drowning. The body was identified as that of James Polly, who so mysteriously disappeared last December while in company. He was working for Mr. Stripp, and was on his way home from Charlevoix when last seen. He about 30 years old.

During the thunder storm Friday night, lightning struck the barn of John Dunlap who lives about two miles east of Ironton, killing both of his oxen and several chickens, but doing no injury to the barn.

The Friant brought some of Mr. Gilbraith's goods Monday, and while he was trying to get a large box of dry goods from Bedwin's dock into a boat, the box fell into the water and before it could be recovered the goods were badly damaged.

Mr. Ed Jackson has received his commission as postmaster and we understand that the office will change hands Thursday, the office to be at Mr. Jackson's residence.

The tug Sheboygan Stevenson is disabled and we hear that she will not be repaired this season. The company have hired the Avery to take her place. Several large cargoes of pig iron have been shipped from Ironton during the last week. The furnace seems to be doing good work this spring.

It is the fashion now in Ironton for everybody to have "Detchman's measles."

Wilson.

Plenty of rain has enlivened the crops; also mankind.

Supervisor Hudkins has just finished his assessment.

Mrs. Thos. Shepherd Sr. was on the sick list, but is recovering.

Mr. Kuhns of Dear Lake, was at church at Afton on Sunday last.

J. R. Vance is loading a vessel with lumber for Tonawanda, N. Y.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hostler has recovered.

Eld. Walsley of Echo, preached at Afton, Sunday morning and evening to good congregations.

Rev. H. C. Scofield is breaking his two-year-old "Topsy" before a road cart. Don't get to "racing" Elder.

The official report is six births and two deaths in this township in 1888.

A young daughter arrived at Ab. Nowland's on Tuesday May 14. All are doing well and happy.

Messrs Healey, Warner and Schofield have some young colts, of which they are justly proud.

Atwood.

MAY 20.—Crops are growing splendidly. The outlook for good yield is better now than it has been for two or three years.

Some fine rains last week.

The dance appointed for last Friday night was adjourned till the 21st on account of the rain.

Dan Flanagin is loading a vessel at Antrim.

Chas. Empey killed a young horse last week that had broken its leg the week before.

Frank Deline of Ellsworth, is visiting his grand parents at Atwood.

A Sunday-school concert at the M. E. church on the evening of the 26th.

Echo.

Rather chilly.

All nature rejoiced and was glad to see the rain.

Eld. Tracy preached at Finkton on Sunday last.

There is quite an interest at the Sunday school at Churchill's corners; Norvill Churchill superintendent.

The infant child of Ed. and Medora Downey was buried on Thursday last. They have the sympathy of all in their bereavement.

Eld. Walley has been organizing "Try Companies," in this township. This is a society for children and is an excellent thing for them.

She is "Grateful."

"I saved the life of my little girl by a prompt use of Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption."—Mrs. Wm. V. Hartman, New York. Sold by G. W. Beaman, druggist. 1

Burgess.

Miss Maud Scott is on the sick list, threatened with typhoid fever.

Miss Mary Scroggie of Charlevoix is visiting her sister, Mrs. Wm. Gray.

Loren Hamlin is attending court at Boyne this week.

Platt Webster is sick with the mumps.

Alex. Ross has been on the sick list the past week.

The sheriff was after one of our prominent citizens in haste yesterday.

Levi Lewis has contracted with W. H. Downer to deliver 30 cords of bark on Pine Lake.

Ellsworth.

MAY 21.—A. W. Ballou is in town to-day on business.

C. S. Campbell is clearing a few acres of land for a park.

L. Deline has a carpenter at work on his new building.

H. Cameron of Boyne Falls is helping Mr. Fulton at the mill.

There are plenty of black bass in the lake now, and much sport in catching them.

Dr. Wane of East Jordan, was here Sunday and spent a few hours on the lake.

CATARRH.—Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications by any person of the average age in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

Sufferers from catarrhal troubles should read the above carefully. 20eow1y

PROBATE NOTICE.—State of Michigan, county of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the probate court for said county of Charlevoix, held at the probate office, in the village of Boyne City in said county on the 20th day of May A. D. 1889. Present, Wm. L. Mayne, judge of probate. In the matter of the estate of Mary Ann Lewis, late of Ellsworth township, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Maggie M. Avery, widow of said deceased, praying that administration of said estate be granted to Maggie M. Avery, or some other suitable person. It appears to the court that the time for proving the will of said deceased should be limited, and that a time should be fixed for the hearing of said petition, that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the probate office in the village of Boyne City, in said county, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted; and it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

TAKE A RECEIPT.

Whenever a payment is made on subscription in wood or produce, we want every person so paying to call at the office and get a receipt for the same, as that proper credit may be given on the books. Unless this is done, mistakes are liable to occur, which we almost sure to follow. Please remember it.

SPIRIT OF THE POLITICAL PRESS.

THE voters were assured last fall that if they would only elect Harrison, wool would be much higher, and sugar would be lower, but it is perfectly safe to say that the price of sugar has advanced even more than it now seems likely the price of wool.—Mason Democrat.

THE wool season approacheth and it is to be hoped the prices will be as high as the republican press and orators gave the voters last fall to understand they would be if they only elected Benny Harrison. They elected him all right and now they want the greatly increased prices for their products. It is truly to be hoped they may not be disappointed.—Mason Democrat.

POSTMASTER GENERAL WANAMAKER is inclined to go back on that part of the republican platform calling for a one cent letter postage. He thinks the service should be improved first. The trouble is the energies of the department are not being used in improving the service, but in changing its political complexion. In the hands of honest officials there is no reason why both penny postage and better service should not be instituted.—Evening News.

CARNEGIE, the millionaire, whose income is reported to be at least one and a half millions a year, more than any man ought to accumulate in a life time, has served notice on his workmen in the steel manufactories that the scale of wages will be cut from 10 to 20 per cent. Those workmen can now probably answer the question, "How does a protective tariff benefit the laboring man? Experience often teaches a dear lesson, but most people will learn in no other way.—Kalamazoo Gazette.

REV. DR. E. D. WHITLOCK, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church of Toledo, and one of the leading Methodist divines in Ohio, created a sensation in his sermon Sunday by using language similar to Bishop Potter at the centennial sermon in New York. He said that patriotism is being prostituted for party spoils, that gold had paved the way to congress, to the senate, to the cabinet, and even to the presidency. He said to a correspondent that Vice President Morton had undoubtedly purchased his way to office by wealth, and that Postmaster General Wanamaker's money had given him his position, although Wanamaker did not contribute it for that purpose.—Cadillac Democrat.

POSTMASTER CARPENTER of New Bedford, Mass., was recently removed by the hypocritical administration on a false charge of incompetency, which he has had the opportunity to disprove. An investigation which was requested was not granted. The failure of the postmaster-general to do an act of simple justice has called out a stinging letter to him from L. Le B. Holmes a member of the republican city committee of New Bedford. He calls attention to the promises of the republican party and of President Harrison, remarks that as a republican he ought to feel and does feel humiliated, points out the flagrant injustice which has been done in violation of pledges and says: "If this is the spirit of civil service reform, civil service reform should be denounced by all honest men. The old way of removing an official because he was not of our party was more honest and decent. If the administration is pursuing all over the country the course it has pursued in this locality, the republican party will be defeated at the next election, and deservedly." Postmaster-General Wanamaker should explain to Mr. Holmes that the word in competent, as used by the postoffice department with regard to an official, simply means that he is a democrat. He can point to the performances of Assistant Clarkson and General Sis perintendent Bell as fully bearing him out in his statement. To give it emphasis he can direct Mr. Holmes' attention to the fine record which democratic postal clerks who have been removed had made in the service, to Bell's letter to a dismissed clerk, that the only objection to him was political, that the railway mail service, after a postponement, nominally passed under the civil service rules on the 1st inst., but that notices dated April 30 still serve to decapitate democratic clerks. Mr. Wanamaker should lay special stress upon these notices to railway mail clerks as illustrative of the spirit in which the republican party fulfills its pledges.—Free Press.

WE bet forty great apples that Congressman Allen wishes at least half the time now that Cleveland had been elected. The office-seekers are making life a burden to him. And as there are at least five or six candidates on an average for each office, he must inevitably make four or five enemies to one working friend. The calculation of how much this increases his chances for re-election must occupy most of the few waking moments not occupied in hearing and reading applications for office and denunciations of the other fellows that want the same office. But it has been decided that under this administration "public office is a private snap," and the congressman is to deal out the provender. It is very much like feeding hogs.—Hillsdale Democrat.

THAT Clarkson has been given the power to do as he will regarding the 55,000 fourth-class postmasters, and that he will exercise it for "the good of the party," seem to be assured. Democrats will be brought speedily to the block and republican holdovers will be regarded with suspicion. This section of the department is to be run on the most approved principle of spoils division. "They go," says the first assistant postmaster general. And to that end the hours of labor in the department have been extended, in order that applications for office can be more expeditiously filed and acted upon. While politics rules in the most numerous branch of the postoffice, Mr. Wanamaker shows unmistakable disposition to introduce business methods in the other branch. While Clarkson appeases the spoilsmen, Wanamaker will appease the reform elements—perhaps.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

The New Normal School.

Representative Wachtel has presented the following resolution in the House:

WHEREAS, There is an urgent and growing necessity for normal school facilities for the education, training and proper preparation of teachers for the schools in the northern portion of the state, and the capacity of the state normal school at Ypsilanti being overtaxed, and in view of the fact that the distance and consequent difficulty and increased expense to candidates desiring to avail themselves of such advantages from the northern portion of the state, many of whom are in moderate circumstances, practically deprive such pupils of the advantage of such schools, therefore be it

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives, That the chairman of committee on education and state normal schools of the house and senate, compose a committee and are hereby appointed to investigate the subject of the necessity of such school, and to prepare a report thereon to be submitted to the next session of the legislature, which report may give such statistics, information and facts as may be obtained by such committee bearing on the subject, with any suggestion or recommendation they may see fit to offer as to the necessity, capacity, location and character of the proposed northern state normal school.

How Doctors Conquer Death.

Hammond says: "After a long experience I have come to the conclusion that two-thirds of all deaths from coughs, pneumonia and consumption, might be avoided if Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption, were only carefully used in time." This wonderful remedy is sold under a positive guarantee by G. W. Beaman, druggist. 1

DR. CRONIN'S BODY FOUND.

His Mutilated Corpse Discovered in a Chicago Suburb.

Dr. Cronin, the missing Irish leader of Chicago, was murdered. His body has been found in a cajeb-lamb in Lake View, a northern suburb of Chicago. It has been fully identified by his friends and acquaintances. There are six deadly wounds on the head, including three skull fractures. The evidence of his murder are plain, evident and unmistakable. The body when found was naked. Every shred of clothing that might lead to the identity of the dead man had been removed. Through some oversight, or perhaps through the superstition of the murderers, an Agnus Dei, an emblem of Catholic devotion that hung around the neck of the man, was left untouched. The body was discovered at Fifty-ninth street and Evanston avenue, in Lake View, by three workmen who were cleaning sewers. The Superintendent had discovered the day before that the water in the sewer was not flowing freely. An investigation was ordered, and the working force making the investigation came on the body.

The Southern Presbyterian Assembly Has No Use for Evolution Theories.

The Southern Presbyterian General Assembly, at Chattanooga, Tenn., spent considerable time in discussing the Charleston Presbytery's action on the Woodrow evolution case. Much warmth was exhibited in some of the speeches. The final result was that the Presbytery was practically established by a large majority for its utterances against Dr. Woodrow's evolution teachings. In 1890 every farmer in the United States will be visited by a census taker and asked to give the statistics of his farm crops, stock, etc., for the previous years including the present one, 1889. To be prepared for the census taker, begin now to keep an accurate account of all farm operations and keep it up throughout the year. In this way only can the agricultural statistics of the census report have any practical value.

DAVID ENSIGNE of Detroit, has been removed from the position of topographer of the postoffice department, which he has held for nearly three years. The removal was made without any kind of notice, and had not even the pretense of offensive partisanship, for Mr. Enright was never active in politics. Mr. Enright has performed the important duties of the office of topographer with great fidelity and ability and brought the topographer's office up from a very loose condition to promptness and efficiency. He will leave many friends in Washington and a splended record in his office, from which he is removed for no other reason than that his son is an active democrat. This is another brilliant exhibition of "Honest John" Wanamaker's civil service reform.

Scribner's for June.

Scribner's Magazine for June marks the beginning of a new enterprise not less notable than the Railway Series commenced a year ago. It is the series of popular articles on The Practical Applications of Electricity, a subject which has become chief importance in the scientific, commercial and industrial worlds. The opening article, by Professor C. F. Brackett, of Princeton, is entitled "Electricty in the Service of Man." It is an introductory paper which sets forth, in a clear, precise way, some of the common methods by which the more important electrical phenomena are produced, the laws which they reveal, and the principles involved in measuring electrical quantities such as Volt, Ampere, and Ohm—terms which have lately come into general use, though not popularly understood. The principles so lucidly explained in this article will be fully applied in the rest of the series, which will describe Modern Telegraphy, Electric Lighting, Household Devices, etc. The illustrations in Professor Brackett's paper show some of the best apparatus in a thoroughly equipped modern laboratory, and include a number of rare portraits and several figure-pieces.

Among the writers already secured for this series are announced C. L. Buckingham, chief electrical expert of the Western Union, President Henry Morton of Stevens Institute, Dr. M. I. Pupin, Sturr, a prominent author on electricity in medicine, and A. E. Kennelly, chief electrician in Mr. Edison's laboratory. Each paper will be elaborately illustrated from sketches and photographs, which it it has been possible to make through the unusual privileges granted this Magazine by the leading electrical companies.

Wanamaker's Wicked Partner.

People are still praising Postmaster-General Wanamaker for his cheering assurance that the postoffice department shall be conducted on strictly business principles. In the meantime Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson is swinging his ax, and the heads are falling in rows under the swish of its sharp blade. Mr. Clarkson is evidently Mr. Wanamaker's wicked partner. Clarkson has his own ideas of business, and he carries them out also.—Boston Herald.

A Colonel to English Farmers.

Wire barbed fencing has proved to be a godsend to English farmers. They are using it around their fields quietly to annoy and prevent fox hunters from trampling their crops. They say nothing of the sort, of course, only keep on putting up the barbs as a convenient and cheap fence. The horses and hounds are often injured by these fences. There is no law to prevent the use of the wire, and not likely to be. So a revolution is wrought; the manners of English barristers and parsons and gentlemen by the bits of twisted wire invented for us on our western prairies, where timber is scarce.—San Francisco Chronicle.

LEWIS GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

A Credit to Dr. Lewis, to Charlevoix, and to Northern Michigan.

On Tuesday evening, May 28th, Lewis' Grand Opera House was formally opened and dedicated by the Star Theater Co., with the "Gallery Slave."

As all our people and most of Northern Michigan know, this house has been in process of transformation since last fall, Dr. Lewis having had a large force of men at work most of the winter, and all the spring.

As enlarged, the building covers 50x100 feet, and is supported by strong foundation walls of stone. The walls are veneered with white brick, and the timbers, especially in the roof, are very strong.

The style and finish of the front is elegant. The two stores are lighted with fine plate glass, the upper sash being of colored glass in a variety of tints. The upper floor is lighted by three large oval-topped windows, the upper part of each being also of colored glass. Over the entrance is a balcony of sufficient capacity to accommodate a band for open air concerts, on the evening of any entertainment, or any other time.

The basement rooms are not yet finished.

The first floor consists of two stores, 20x100 feet, the south room occupied by Alick Rosenthal with a stock of dry goods, carpets, clothing, etc., which would be the pride of any city. The north room is occupied by the Charlevoix Cigar Mfg. Co., the front with a retail department (mentioned last week), and the balance with the manufacturing department,—an enterprise that brings thousands of dollars every year to Charlevoix.

The entrance to the hall is between the stores, and is not obstructed with outside doors. The ticket office is at the top of the stairs on the right.

The office of Dr. Lewis occupies the front space north of the stairway, and there is another small office on the south, with hallway and entrance to gallery between,—the main gallery being above these offices.

The auditorium is 50x68 feet, and 22 feet to ceiling, seated with elegant opera chairs from the Grand Rapids School Furniture Co.

The proscenium arch is 21 feet wide by 15 feet high, and is a study for lovers of rich material. It is finished in natural wood, and contains some handsome panels. In the crown of the arch is a Masonic Keystone, richly polished and gilded.

On either side of the arch are four private boxes, also finished in natural wood and tastefully draped and carpeted. The gallery extends from the boxes on either side to the east end of the room, and is seated with comfortable chairs.

The stage occupies a space of 22x50 feet on the west end, and is furnished with a full outfit of scenery and stage fittings from the house of Slossman & Landis, of Chicago, all handsome in design and rich in color and finish.

From the center of the ceiling hangs a 16-light Wheeler reflector, and there are also numerous side lights. The stage is lighted with Slossman & Landis patent foot-lights.

As means of exit, in addition to the broad main entrance, there is a stairway leading down from the front of and under the stage, and another from the rear, to a walk which extends from the street around the north side and west end of the building.

The whole, in arrangement and finish, is a structure to which all Charlevoix can point with pride, and for which Dr. Lewis deserves the praise and patronage of our citizens. It is but one more evidence of the solid substantial growth of Charlevoix.

The Star Theater Company.

At the opening of the Lewis Grand Opera House Tuesday evening, the Star Theater Co. presented the "Gallery Slave" to a crowded house and in a most satisfactory manner. Every character was well supported, and the realities of life were faithfully represented.

On Wednesday evening the company played "The Silver King" to a house almost as full as on the opening night. At the close of the last act, E. H. Green read the following resolution, which was adopted with a cheer:

Resolved, That the thanks of this audience are due to the Star Theater Co. for the highly appropriate and impressive manner in which the several characters of the "Galley Slave" and "Silver King" have been rendered by them. Also to Dr. Lewis for the courage, enterprise, and indomitable energy he has evinced in constructing and furnishing this magnificent edifice, so commodious and fitting for the display of histrionic art.

Tonight will be presented that mysterious and interesting character of "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde."

A Narrow Escape.

Col. W. K. Nelson, of Brooklyn, came home one evening feeling a peculiar tightness in the chest. Before retiring, he tried to draw a long breath but found it almost impossible. He suffered four days from pneumonia, and the doctors gave him up. Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption saved him and he is well to-day. Sold by G. W. Beaman, druggist.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., May 30, 1889.

LOCAL NOTES AND NEWS.

Decoration day.

☞Baby carriges cheap, at Emma Todd's.

James Whitley has moved to Chicago to live.

The Florence gave an excursion to East Jordan last Sunday.

M. Litney and wife returned from Chicago last Thursday night.

A light frost in this vicinity last Saturday and Sunday morning.

Mrs. E. H. Green has gone to Manitowoc, Wis., to visit relatives.

☞S. M. See & Sons are selling baby cabs at prices which cannot be beat.

F. G. Hines & Co. and Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co. have put in a telephone.

Miss Maggie Enos went to Connecticut last Saturday, where she will attend school.

Brick-laying was commenced on the walls of the new school building last Thursday.

Dr. Crouter returned last Friday from a trip to southern Michigan on lodge business.

The Boyne Citizen has an egg that measures 6⅞x7⅞ inches, and wants to find a larger one.

Mrs. Spain has been quite sick again for several weeks, and is still confined to the bed.

Clinton Whitmoyer hurt his crippled leg one night last week, and is laid up in consequence.

☞Emma Todd has a good new sewing machine for sale for $15.00. Call at the store and see it.

Geo. A. Gage fell and hurt his back quite seriously one day last week, but he is again at business.

☞Baby carriages, all kinds and all prices. Don't buy till you see my stock. EMMA TODD.

☞Four pounds currant jelly for 25 cents. Four cans apples for 30 cents. A. E. MASON.

W. B. Taylor left at our office last Thursday two heads of lettuce, fine samples of the crop he has for sale.

Charlie Hemmings, of the telephone office, went to Chicago on the Lawrence last Saturday to stay two weeks.

The Charlevoix cornet band will hold a dance at Bartholomew's opera hall on June 12th, afternoon and evening.

Roswell Mudge is opening a stock of confectionery, fruits, canned goods, etc., in the old stand north of Fox & Miller's shoe store.

☞"Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer is the most reliable article in use for restoring gray hair to its original color and promoting the growth of the hair.

John Wagner and wife returned home from Perrinton last Friday, accompanied by Miss Topsy Winans, and Miss Mary Wagner who expect to remain here during the summer.

At the Congregational church Sunday, June 2, morning service, "Bearing the Burdens of Others," evening, "Better Highways and the King's High-way." Come and welcome.

On Monday the Clara Belle made her first trip to Harbor Springs. She will continue on that route the remainder of the season, leaving here at 6. 30, in the morning and returning at 6 in the evening. This will give our people a chance to visit Petoskey or Charlevoix and have ample time to do either place before the Clara Belle returns.—Citizen.

The Charlevoix common council does not wait for a damage suit before ordering repairs to sidewalks. A large number of crosswalks have been rebuilt during the past two weeks.

F. E. Wood and J. B. Parsons have formed a partnership, to be known as F. E. Wood & Co., for the manufacture of candy for the wholesale trade, and have rented the rooms over J. Milo Eaton's office.

M. J. Stockman comes this week and demands a share of the patronage of the readers of the JOURNAL, and in another column mentions some of the features of his large stock of hardware, stoves, etc. Look him over and give him a call.

☞Savages expect to imbibe bravery by drinking the blood of their brave enemies. A more enlightened method of vitalizing the blood is by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It braces up the nerves and gives strength and fortitude to endure the trials of life.

On Wednesday evening the steamer Lou A. Cummings gave an excursion from East Jordan, arriving in time for the entertainment at the opera house, and remaining until the close to accommodate all who desired to witness the play of "The Silver King."

☞Slight derangements of the stomach and bowels may often be corrected by taking only one of Ayer's Pills. Through not having the Pills at hand, your disorder increases, and a regular fit of sickness follows. "For the want of a nail, the shoe was lost, etc."

We are informed that the Florence will draw off this route and run to East Jordan. This we are sorry to hear. The trade between this town and Charlevoix really demands a boat to leave each town in the morning and the Florence is one of the nicest steamers for this line that has yet been on the route. It is of great importance to Boyne City to have a boat come over from Charlevoix in the morning.—Citizen. [The East Jordan business is already overdone, and the Florence will return to Grand Rapids.]

A Scrap of Paper Saves Her Life.

It was just an ordinary scrap of wrapping paper, but it saved her life. She was in the last stages of consumption, told by her physicians that she was incurable and could live only a short time; she weighed less than seventy pounds. On a piece of wrapping paper she read Dr. king's New discovery, and got a sample bottle; it helped her, she bought a large bottle, it helped her more, bought another, and gave the remainder of the bottle away, and now enjoys health, rosy, plump, weighing ten pounds. For fuller particulars send stamp to W. H. Cole, druggist, Fort Scott, Kansas. Trial bottles of this wonderful discovery free at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store. 4

It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by F. G. Hinesdk Co.

A man on his own farm, well cultivated and kept, well stocked, with good modern dwellings and barns and out buildings, master of both time and acres, tied to no hours by the calls of bells or whistles, free to come or go according to the necessities of none but himself, mostly within his own fields, performing his healthful labors within sight of the smoke of his own chimneys, is surely as rich in the genuine sense of the word as any man can be. He has nothing to fear and nothing to envy. Of one thing he is sure all his days, and that is is a sufficent living; and that is what other men are not sure of without a single pang of doubt or apprehension. There is his land; and the inanimate machinery of his establishment; and for the rest he looks in profound trust to the bounty of heaven. Instead of this unworthy and demoralizing anxiety to get rich, if the average farmer, once being solidly established, would resolve to enlarge and exalt his life as it is, to make more out of that, to enjoy as much as possible of what there is to be enjoyed, to adorn and beautify his home—that only paradise on earth—within, without, he would find all his daily tasks easier, even to the extent of being delightful; he would feel rich, where now with more money, he feels poor all the time, and would rid himself of a false tyrant in the form of increasing parsimony that holds his nose to the grindstone till he is flung into his grave. If the farmers only knew it they would be the richest men on earth.—New York Herald.

Empeepsy.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to live enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you good digestion and oust the demon dyspepsia and install instead empeepsy. We recommend Electric Bitters for dyspepsia and all diseases of liver, stomach, and kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle, by F. G. Hines and Co., druggists. 4

STOVE POLISH IS THE BEST.

GATHER THE FLOWERS,

AND SCATTER THEM UPON THE GRAVES OF OUR DEAD HEROES.

Memorial Day and Its Significance—An Annual Event Hallowed by Sacred Memories—The Tendency of the Custom Is in the Line of Peace and National Brotherhood.

Scatter the Flowers.
CATTER the flowers, my child,
Scatter the flowers where the sifters lie;
Gather the flowers on blue and gray
Scatter the flowers.

Over the graves of the heroes who fell
On the tide of the battle was hot and high,
And the breath of the cannon like thunder from hell.
Scatter the flowers.

What matters it now what colors
They shall meet their Judge in
The court on high—
Fly the pain and the grief they bore—
Scatter the flowers.

Thank God that you know not the terrible strife
We know in those awful years gone by;
Thank God for the boon of a peaceful life.
Scatter the flowers.

Scatter the flowers, O, why should we Cherish the hate of the years gone by!
Over the grave of their enemy
Scatter the flowers.

Scatter the flowers, my child, to-day!
Scatter the flowers where the soldiers lie;
Scatter the roses on blue and gray
Scatter the flowers.

R. E. PARTLOW.

Memorial Day.

WE SCAN the changing seasons bring the Nation's anniversary,
When our gifts of tears and flowers are strewn on graves of her
Fallen sons in Blue and Gray.
Field and garden yield their treasures, lending fair of beauteous
Each a message of remembrance bearing
To the lowly bearers
Emblems are they of the fallen, whom the golden
Lady silver mist
Sleeps, the years of manhood's prime—
Glorious years, whose splendor brightens the Hillsides of time!
Still their spectre hands have swayed us, reaching up and from the grave, from
And they still shall guide the nation which they
For they did the hands of Union, and from chaining son to son
Left our slavery forever floating over a land redeemed and free;
And we, their children, are waiting, tho' their
Same to burial sheets,
Liberty's shrine is keeping where the fire of freedom glows.
But, alas! the mounds grow thicker with each
And they sleep side about beside us when the last sweet May was here.

Soldiers of the great Grand Army! You who cure steel side by side
With the comrades who are sleeping beneath the Ye who marched through battle bullets and stood face to face with death,
Yet escaped from his embraces, though you felt his fiery breath,
By the love you bore the comrade who fell by your side that day,
By the hand shared with you the marches and the fray or the fray,
Guard the memory of the fallen—keep it free
from every stain;
Let no hand of malice defame them, and no
traitorous heart scorn;
Yours the triumph and rejoicing and the victor's crown of bay,
Theirs the suffering and the silence, and the Yours the joys of war and labor, but beneath your smoking feet
Lie their memories a pride and valor, and their hopes as fair and sweet.
Heart of hearts was theirs and daring, hands
that held a sacred trust,
And they fought, and bled, gladly, nor are only boasts of dust.
Since you marched with them to battle, shared their danger and their rest,
You are heirs of all their glory—let them not have died in vain!

Soldiers of the Silent Army! You whose ballots told days shall shine
On the calendar of years with a radiance divine,
You whose counsels guided the mother of our course through storm and wreck
Binding her to truth and freedom when the skies were veiled and dark
You whose sightless eyes behold us, and whose shadowy forms are thick
Hovering about us, to bless our slumbers and our waking, heavenly guides hear!
By the sky which arches o'er you, bright with summer's loveliest blue,
By the smiles that greet you, as, flying you, smilingly through their hearts of cheer,
By each grave you visit, lovingly clinging to the earthy forms you were,
By each forget that looks with anguish when you fail to rise no more,
By each hope that faded with you from love's
By each life whose light departed when you laid your shadows to day,
By the honor that you gave us, free from every spot and stain,
Never while the crimson life-blood courses
swiftly through each vein,
Shall we, your children, your enfranchised hear a tyrant or a slave.
While its soil supports a footstep or its depths
all not a grave!

NINETTE M. LOWATER.

A National Yearly Pilgrimage.

DECORATION Day! The inspiration of the occasion is the inspiration of flowers and peace and beauty. In a time when the glory of the land is in danger of being overlaid with blooming flowers, every flower stands alone a lily of the valley, with its odors and its voices, its lessons and its ministries of God's past goodness and a prophecy of His continued mercy.

On the twenty-first Decoration Day of history the roll of the Republic's dead included Lincoln, Garfield, Hancock, Grant, Logan, and Sheridan. Not in a time when the passions, prejudices, and surviving hatreds of the great war follow over the fields that trembled with the tread of marching millions, the glory and pride of peace accomplished most thrill his heart, coming from every section of the land, to lay the flowers on the graves of his dead who died in the battle-field—the grave.

The occasion of a great national centennial has prepared the public to commemorate this year's Decoration Day as never before. The intelligent manner in which the Decoration Day exercises have been made with historic and patriotic environments, and the 30th of April and the 30th of May, 1899, will be long remembered days in the memory of those who were in the war, and the last of the veterans of the great war follow the pathway of the silent camping ground. The spirit and genius of the commemoration that Logan set upon as a national annual event become more vivid and sentiment, more fond, the thrill, as the slower step, the bitter load, the memories of the dead, and the joy of the victory tell their tale, then they, too, will slumber under patriotic of true jewelled flowers.

Decoration Day has become a national yearly pilgrimage, but, unlike that of the devotees of Islam, it has no shrine of one creed, the journey is a peaceful one, and the through a break-city of peace, the weapons of war are turned into ploughshares, and the tramp of the armed and weapons and armor, the tramp of the armed and the sandals of the pilgrims, the pilgrimage is not one of strife or fanaticism, but of love and peace, while at its end stands the immortal shrine of liberty.

Decoration Day has evidently proved the fact that the survivors of the war have not considered their work at an end, with corner grasses and underbrush. All around the city are signs of vandal.

"Such war, such waste, such fiery trails of
Of land."

Nature, however, is busy repairing the ravages of war. The rain and the sunshine and warm air are smoothing the earthworks and filling up the ride pits.

In this Vicksburg city of silence, with more inhabitants than in the living city, there are twelve thousand graves, each one marked with a white stone, which bear numbers instead of names, being unknown. The bones of these unknowns were gathered from battlefields, near and remote, and brought in by comrades. A great number of the graves were found in the country, in thickets, in ravines, and in the woods. The graves were indeed and that comes nearest to the idea of beauty, and laid side by side with the bones boys of the northland who died in the hot, cold dead, in the cold and rain, with scant food and with fever and ague, and in battle. Peace and pity, love and tenderness, have brought together the boys of the blue and the gray, and in the head of each grave, only three thousand eight hundred and twenty-five are inscriptions, which include those of the unknown dead, and the rest are of the rank. The inscriptions are, and in most of the cemeteries, were furnished by a Scotch Iowa firm, the inscriptions are made to the dead that lie beneath.

At Chalmette Cemetery, just below New Orleans, there are 12,000 graves, 5,000 of which are unknown. The Indian mound contains the remains of the known dead of Chalmette. This cemetery covers fifteen acres in a half square, and is a part of the site of the battle-field on which Jackson defeated the British in 1815, saved New Orleans during the war of 1812-14, and which was the battle-ground on the 8th of January every year by the people of the Crescent City. The cemetery will cross the line of another battle-field, the Lake Ponchartrain, and on which the cotton bales were placed to give shelter to the heavy cannon of the rebels of the battle of Lake Ponchartrain, which drove the Union fleet back. Here the ground is as level as the water kept from submerging it and the cemetery is above the level of the water in the earth; there the water is above the level of the earth, and the dead are buried in vaults, which are four in number, each a half mile in length, in the receiving tombs of graves, in each sheet of the and walks, and flower beds and evergreens and flowers, and the cypress and the trees are fragrant and the flowers are in bloom, and the birds sing and the bees hum, the thick-leaved magnolia from the heavy trees, the ivy and the vines, the magnolia and myrtles, the light swaying branches of the cypress, the live oak, the cypress, the trees, the hopes, the tender holiness of a great national Decoration Day.

LINCOLN STATUE, LINCOLN PARK, CHICAGO.

Vicksburg, Miss.

"On Fame's eternal camping ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And glory guards with joyous round
The bivouac of the dead."

HIS verse, from a Confederate officer, seems to sent in memo and set forth the spirit of the Gadsby sentiment in eighty-one national cemeteries, where sleep those who died that "under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth." The largest cemetery established by the Government is Arlington, on the Potomac River. There are 16,000 headstones in the cemetery. It was a cemetery—a place that was set apart for burial—before the war. Arlington is the most beautiful of the national cemeteries, and, however sadly its thoughts may go back over the fields that trembled with the tread of marching millions, the glory and pride of peace accomplished most thrill his heart, coming from every section of the land, to lay the flowers on the graves of those who died in the battle-field—the grave.

The occasion of a great national centennial has prepared the public to commemorate this year's Decoration Day as never before. The intelligent manner in which the Decoration Day exercises have been made with historic and patriotic environments, and the 30th of April and the 30th of May, 1899, will be long remembered days in the memory of those who were in the war, and the last of the veterans of the great war follow the pathway of the silent camping ground. The spirit and genius of the commemoration that Logan set upon as a national annual event become more vivid and sentiment, more fond, the thrill, as the slower step, the bitter load, the memories of the dead, and the joy of the victory tell their tale, then they, too, will slumber under patriotic of true jewelled flowers.

the same volume with the development of sidetrieity and stone, for those who are buried and the monuments which have changed the world. And yet, amid all this country of mighty deeds, the American conflict stands pre-eminent for its influence upon the world. It was not a war of conquest, it was not a war of aggrandizement, it was not a war of government, it was a war of a people, to strengthen the old regime, and the sublime heroism, the fortitude of Decoration Day. The pilgrimage fills the ruins of cannon wheels and fields of carnage have become fields of peace, and the worship of the custom of Decoration Day is wholly in the spirit of peace. The spirit of peace is the spirit of the Decoration Day. The spirit of peace is the spirit of the ceremony of Decoration Day. The spirit of peace is the spirit of the ceremony of Decoration Day. The spirit of peace should promote national unity and good feeling in the yearly pilgrimage of the nation, gray to the shrine of those who were once in arms against it.

Graves both in vicinity and remote, "Fallen for that," and the three million colonists of the Revolution, merged into the great Republic of today, see new stars added to its galaxies and new stripes to its banner, and the Decoration Day pilgrimage of the nation, which in 1890 amounted to over one and 50,000,000 on one day, and 50,000,000 on one day, and 50,000,000 on one day,

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Wilson.

A little snow on the 28th.

Richard Lewis is over near Boyne City peeling bark.

Mrs. Andrew Nowland of Boyne Falls, is visiting relatives here for a few days.

Mrs. Isaman has the neuralgia, also Mr. Lewis is on the sick list.

Ed. Grover and family went over to Clam Lake on Saturday last to hold grove meeting.

F. L. Smith has built about 40 rods of new fence,—board and rail,—on the road this spring.

Some of the young folks attended Catholic services at the Bohemian church on Sunday last.

David Shepherd accompanied by master Forest and Miss Stella visited at Thomas Shepherd's beyond East Jordan over Sunday.

A son and heir arrived at Ed. Nowland's on Thursday last and Ed. can't be touched with a ten foot pole.

Thanks, Mr. or Mrs. Boyne City correspondent, count on us; succotash is our favorite dish.

Frosts on Friday and Saturday nights cut plums and cherries also garden stuff that was planted early on low lands. Those that have deferred putting in garden are ahead yet.

Geo. Bowen, one of our G. A. R. veterans attended the memorial services at East Jordan on Sunday afternoon.

Advance.

MAY 22.—It looks considerably like winter this morning.

Godfrey VonPlaten went to Chicago last week on business.

Ed Phillips has gone to Detroit to stay this summer, this climate here being too warm for him.

David Willis has been quite ill but is now on the gain. Mrs. Willis is also on the sick list.

The Germans had preaching last Sunday at the school house, and in the evening there was also preaching by Rev. Mr. Aldrich.

Mr. LaCroix is building some wire fence on his farm, and making other improvements.

The frost of last Friday night appears to have been quite severe back from the lake, in some cases killing the young twigs on the beech trees, but here it did no damage.

P. B. Newton is perhaps the most scientific and philosophical farmer in the county, and with Tom Morrison for "third pusher" is doing some fancy farming on the Hayes farm.

Eveline.

We're on deck again.

Considerable rain of late.

Mrs. James Tuttle returned home from Williamston last week, where she has been on a visit for several weeks.

A. E. Hayes of East Jordan, was in town last Friday.

Crops in this vicinity look good since the late rains. Much garden truck is up and growing nicely. The prospects are now that farming will be a success this season.

John Dunlop purchased an ox team one day recently of E. L. Burdick, of East Jordan, to replace the oxen killed by lightning a couple of weeks ago.

The finding of James Polly on the 20th has caused much talk throughout this place, as he was well known, having been a resident of this place for a number of years. He came from Canada here.

Yes, brother Boyne, we'll be right there in August.

Echo.

Rain on Monday and snow Monday night.

Ed. McGregor preached to a large congregation on Sunday evening at Echo.

John McMillian made a flying trip to Wilson on Monday last, in the rain.

School in the Vance district is progressing finely; 16 pupils enrolled.

Mary McMillian returned home last week accompanied by Mrs. Papineau and daughter who will visit relatives here for a few days.

Ironton.

May 29.—Everything was covered with a white frost this morning,—the most severe that has ever been known at this time of year, and it is feared that fruit will be badly damaged.

The board of review was in session in Ironton last week.

Mr. Hicks, of Horton's Bay, has moved his family to Ironton. Mr. Hicks is a blacksmith and intends starting a shop here before long.

Will Robinson and family returned to Ironton last Saturday from the south where they went two or three years ago for the benefit of Mrs. R.'s health. Their many friends are glad to welcome them home again.

It is reported that Ironton must either have a railroad or lose the furnace. Why don't that road hurry up? We expected that we would see the cars running by this time when it was first agitated, but are getting most discouraged.

Atwood.

MAY 27.—We were visited by a very heavy frost Friday morning and another Saturday. Clover was injured in some places.

Misses Emma and Ida Byers are home from their long visit in Ohio and Indiana.

The Sunday school concert Sunday evening in the M. E. church was a success. A new feature in the concert was singing by families. The infant class did themselves honor by their singing. Five lessons were reviewed by different members of the school. Concerts will be a feature of the future.

A nice shower last night and today.

☞We notice a new departure in the treatment of disease that promises to revolutionize the medicine business. It consists in the collection of the specifics used by noted specialists of Europe and America and bringing them within the reach of all. For instance, the treatment perused by special physicians who treat indigestion, stomach and liver troubles only, was obtained and prepared. The treatments of other physicians, celebrated for curing catarrh, were procured, and so on till these homoeopathic cures now include disease of the lungs, kidneys, female weakness, rheumatism, nervous debility and piles. Originated and used by specialists, being a positive cure for each disease, these preparations are the best remedies procurable. We advise all to send 2 two cent stamps to the Chase Medical Specialty Co., 179 West Adams St., Chicago, Ill. and receive by return mail their interesting and book. 7589

Constipation

Demands prompt treatment. The results of neglect may be serious. Avoid all harsh and drastic purgatives. The most best which is to weaken the bowels. The best remedy is Ayer's Pills. Being purely vegetable, their action is prompt and their effect always beneficial. They are an admirable Liver and Stomach pill, and everywhere endorsed by the profession.

"Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by our people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."—Dr. J. E. Fowler, Bridgeport, Conn.

"I can recommend Ayer's Pills above all others, having long proved their value as a cathartic in myself and family."—J. T. Hess, Lethbrille, Pa.

"For several years Ayer's Pills have been used in my family. We find them an for constipation and indigestion, and are never without them in the house."—Moses Grenier, Lowell, Mass.

"Four boxes of Ayer's Pills cured me of liver complaint."—E. L. Pilsbury, Hanover, N. H.

"I have used Ayer's Pills, for liver troubles and indigestion, during many years, and always found them prompt and efficient in their action."—L. N. Smith, Utica, N. Y.

"I suffered from constipation which assumed such an obstinate form that I feared it would cause a stoppage of the bowels. Two boxes of Ayer's Pills effected a complete cure."—D. Burke, Saco, Me.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years and consider them an invaluable family medicine. I know no better remedy for liver troubles, and have always found them a speedy cure for dyspepsia."—Jos. Quinn, 30 Middle St., Hartford, Conn.

"Having been troubled with costiveness, which seems incurable with persons of sedentary habits, I am glad to say that Ayer's Pills have served me better than any other medicine I have arrived at this conclusion only after a faithful trial of their merits."—Samuel T. Jones, Oak st., Boston, Mass. 1

KILLED BY A CYCLONE.

Half a Dozen Persons Known to Have Lost Their Lives and Others Injured.

In a disastrous cyclone that passed over Clements, Chase County, Kansas, Capt. Brown and his daughter were killed, his wife had a leg almost torn off, and his son had an arm and a leg broken. It is reported that six or seven other persons were killed, but the wires are down and no reliable information can be obtained. John Pattile, conductor of a stock train, who passed through Clements just after the cyclone, was in plain sight of part of its destructive doings. The cloud looked square-shaped, like a house with the lower portion surrounded by a white cloud, looking like steam, which seemed to rise from all around the main dark cloud. As it came through the timber it cut a clean swath, apparently destroying everything in its path, and when it struck the Cottonwood River it looked as if it was cutting through the river, piling up the water on both sides. He saw Capt. Brown's stone house demolished, another with the roof and one side torn off, and still another lifted and carried off from its foundation. The storm crossed the railroad in three places, and seemed to have made a partial circle, going over nearly the same path a second time. Its path was about fifty yards wide, and there is little doubt of much damage and more deaths having occurred further from the road.

GRAND LODGE GOOD TEMPLARS.

The Whole World Unites in the Great Temperance Work.

The Eight Worthy Grand Lodge of the World of the Independent Order of Good Templars is in session at Chicago. W. W. Farnsel, Right Worthy Grand Templar, of Glasgow, Scotland, presides. The other officers who answered to the roll-call were Dr. Oronhyatekha, of Ontario, Canada; Mrs. Brookbank, of Indiana; Miss Forsythe, of Massachusetts; Rev. J. Cogle, Illinois, and Rev. W. S. Lanc, of Nova Scotia. Almost every State in the Union is represented. This order is the largest international temperance organization in the world and contains over one hundred grand lodges having jurisdiction over as many separate counties, States, and Territories. Under these grand lodges are an aggregate of 10,114 local lodges, with 670,000 adult and juvenile members.

MANY THOUSANDS MADE HOMELESS.

More than a Thousand Houses Burned in One of the Cities of Japan.

A fire occurred on May 3 at Gokoso-Akitake, Japan, destroying over 1,000 houses. The fire originated about 10 o'clock at night in the residence of the Shiota Gombiro and was not extinguished until 6 o'clock of the second morning. Over twenty persons were burned to death, and nearly one hundred injured. Ten thousand people are homeless. The Emperor headed a list for financial aid for the sufferers with a personal subscription of $1,000.

Rhode Island's State Officers.

In joint assembly the Senate and House of Rhode Island appointed a committee to count the votes for general officers. The committee reported no election by the people, except for Attorney General, and the Assembly elected and inaugurated the following Republicans: Herbert W. Ladd, Governor; D. H. Littlefield, Lieutenant Governor; S. H. Cross, Secretary of State; Samuel Clark, Treasurer.

The Presbyterian General Assembly.

RIOTING IN OKLAHOMA.

The Military Called Upon to Protect a Home-Holder.

At Guthrie, Oklahoma, E. A. Weed, claimed to a lot also claimed by Mr. Hayes, engaged a large force of men and began to erect a building over and around the other claimant. The aggrieved party was soon confronted by a large party of friends and allies, and soon a crowd of 500 persons was gathered. The two factions soon became engaged in a wordy quarrel, at a preconcerted signal the frame of the building, which was built of the floor, beams and foundation sills, was picked up by the crowd and carried into the street. In doing this, part of the man carrying the frame stumbled over a pile of lumber, and the men and timbers were piled in a confused mass. While the disturbance was at its height, United States Marshal Nix arrived and commanded the crowd to disperse. Meeting with opposition, he sent for the troops. There was much excitement and several fights, but as soon as the troops were seen coming the assembled element quieted down, and soon the carpenters were at work, with the building turned in a hollow square around the site of the proposed structure. One man, named John Gilchrist, was shot by a soldier for not obeying the sentinel's orders.

BUSINESS IMPROVING.

The Outlook Is Better in Almost All Lines of Trade.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

The reports are more encouraging. There are decided indications of improved trade, a better feeling in the branches of industry and trade which have been depressed, wool, cotton and wool look better, and a better feeling is shown in the cotton goods trade, with signs of increased confidence in the business outlook. Orders have been received from abroad, which by growers are much above the markets, but they are not numerous. The fall in the price of the staple has stimulated the demand, and reports as well as receipts now indicate a much larger cotton crop. The crop reports from the South are generally favorable, and the acreage is larger. There are without exception, reports from interior cities of improved business, and from Boston it is everywhere in sufficient supply. The Western reports are generally favorable, and in Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul there is sufficient supply. The Northwest reports are all encouraging, and in Minneapolis and Duluth the outlook is extraordinarily favorable crop prospects, which are also felt in speculation. There is a good improvement apparent in Kansas. The demand for money is fully up to the average. It is evident that gold does not go out now largely. No special stringency is anticipated. The balance number 228 as compared with 200 last week and 207 the week before, and 202 of that week the figures are 203.

NO MONEY FOR THE SOLDIERS.

The Pension Appropriation for Next Year Insufficient.

The pension appropriation acts for the current fiscal year, appropriated $88,000,000, including $8,000,000 to meet a threatened deficiency. Chief Bell of the agents' division of the pension office, says it is true that the amount has all been drawn from the Treasury, but that more than $16,000,000 remains in the hands of the pension agents with which to meet the quarterly payments which fall due on June 4. It is thought that this amount will nearly suffice until July 1, when the appropriation for the next fiscal year will become available. Mr. Bell says that the appropriation for the next fiscal year, $89,000,000, is too small, and that there will be a deficiency of about $15,000,000. Gen. Black, he says, did not ask for enough money to prevent a deficiency even on the basis of expenditures then existing.

THE CROP OUTLOOK.

General Rains Improve the Prospect for Wheat.

The recent rainfalls over the northern portions of the winter wheat region, and throughout the corn and wheat regions of the Northwest have improved the growing crops in those sections. The weather has been favorable for all growing crops throughout the Northwest and the central valleys. The crop prospects have been greatly improved in the States of the Ohio Valley by the timely rains, but some damage resulted to fruits in this section from late frosts. Throughout the States of the corn and wheat belt the weather has improved the condition of the principal crops, although frosts caused some damage to early corn and vegetables in places.

DEATH OF LAURA BRIDGMAN.

The Famous Blind and Deaf Mute Ends Her Interesting Career.

Laura Bridgman, the famous blind and deaf mute, died at the Perkins Institution for the Blind at Boston after a short sickness. For more than fifty years she has been a living example of what could be done in the way of instructing those thus deprived of their physical senses. She was an object of deep interest to philanthropists and scientists. She was born at Hanover, N. H., Dec. 21, 1829. When she was 2 years old severe illness deprived her of sight and hearing, and consequently of speech. Notwithstanding this, she acquired a good education and spent a happy childhood.

FIVE PERSONS BURNED TO DEATH.

The Residence of a Minister Destroyed and He and Four Children Perish.

The residence of the Rev. F. C. Clarke, near Virginia Beach, in Princess Anne County, Va., was destroyed by a midnight fire. He and two daughters and next to the oldest son are a siren visiting his own relatives, and all were burned to death by the flames. His wife, Miss Ella Bridgood, the governess, and two children escaped. The origin of the fire is unknown, though it is thought to have been the work of an incendiary. Mr. Clarke was pastor of the London Bridge Baptist Church, and was a preacher of note.

JULIA WARD HOWE'S BIRTHDAY.

Congratulations and Presents Sent by Her Numerous Friends.

On the occurrence of her 70th birthday, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe received at her home in Boston the congratulations of scores of friends that seventy years of time had restored so lightly upon her. Beautiful flowers in profusion and a food of letters from all over the country attested the interest felt in this woman, whose work in behalf of her sex has brought her so prominently before the public.

ORE-HANDLERS STRIKE.

A Big Fleet of Vessels at Marquette, Mich., Lie Idle in Consequence.

Every ore-handler in Marquette struck for an advance in pay. Nearly 300 men went out, and a big fleet of ore-carriers, with a capacity of 12,000 tons, was tied up. The strikers are from $1.75 to $2 a day, and employed by the railroad company. The company refused a 10% increase, and demand for an increase in pay for overtime and double pay for Sundays.

Sioux Will Ratify the Treaty.

John Grass, principal chief of Sioux Dak., the leading chief of the Sioux Nation, and White Swan, second chief of the Sioux, conversing about the Sioux bill, say that it will be ratified. Only one objection is made to the treaty, that it does not give the Nation the south bank of Cheyenne River, but the Indians will sign, as the bill provides for the payment of cash, and they want money more than land.

An Unexpected Baptism.

While a colored pastor was celebrating the rite of baptism at Jamaica Bay, Long Island, a platform on which were congregated between 100 and 200 persons gave way and they were all precipitated into the water. A scene of intense excitement ensued, but active help was given and all were rescued. Later, when the reversed gentleman proceeded with the ceremonies.

An Important Land Decision.

May 17th, in the United States District Court at Los Angeles, Cal., District Judge Ross decided in favor of the plaintiff in a land contest, and in favor of the Government against the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to annul patents issued to that company for lands in Los Angeles County. This ruling affects the title to over 100,000 acres within twenty miles of primary limits, of the grant to the Southern Pacific.

A Large Fleet to Be Built.

It is reported that a company composed principally of railroad men connected with the Pennsylvania system is to build a fleet of twelve steel steamers to run between Buffalo and Duluth. Each boat is to cost in the neighborhood of $225,000. It is said the new company has a capital of $12,000,000.

Struck Blind in the Pulpit.

The Rev. J. C. Myers, while preaching at the Christian Church at New Liberty, Ind., was struck by lightning, the bolt coming down the chandelier. Mr. Myers' sight was completely destroyed, and it is feared he will never recover it.

Disastrous Conflagration at Reno, Nev.

A fire, which will cause a loss of between $250,000 and $300,000 occurred at Reno, Nev. Twenty-three buildings were consumed.

SUSPECTS IN CUSTODY.

HELD FOR COMPLICITY IN THE CHICAGO MURDER.

An Ex-Philadelphian Who Had Made Threats Against the Doctor Locked Up—Detective Also Behind the Bars—Report that He Was Murdered as a Spy.

[Chicago telegram.]

The police of Chicago have placed under arrest Patrick Coughlin, formerly of Philadelphia, but lately of Chicago, for suspected complicity in the murder of Dr. Cronin. No one is allowed to see him.

Mr. McGeehan came to Chicago about two months ago. He is a blacksmith by trade. He left a lucrative position in Philadelphia some seven weeks ago. He also, it is said, left a wife and an interesting family in that city, and since he came to Chicago he has done little work. He sought employment at Pullman, obtained, it, and worked a few days. The major portion of the time, it is alleged, he spent in saloons, where he was a loon companion of the enemies of Dr. Cronin and a suspect of Cronin's most malignant antagonists.

His disappearance from Philadelphia attracted attention. It is said of him that he was one of those who opposed Dr. McCalsey and Dr. Cronin, and eulogized those who opposed them. He came from the same part of Ireland where a noted leader of the old Clan-na-Gael organization was born. He boasted of his friends with that person.

Who they are and what ties he came to Chicago McGeehan has associated with the enemies of Cronin and that he expressed an enmity for the doctor, even going so far as to make threats against him. It is said that his remarks reaching the ears of Cronin a few days before his death, Mr. Geehan. These statements were made by several prominent Irish-Americans who were told of McGeehan's detention, they also said that Dr. Cronin and McGeehan one day opposite his office on Clark street, and challenged him to repeat the statements he had made concerning him Cronin in a Randolph street saloon. McGeehan, they say, made a halting apology. These men say that Dr. Cronin's friends were in fear of McGeehan has tried to impress on his friends that he was sent out by the Clans to Cronin's home in Le Caron's evidence. He was put down as one of the men whom Le Caron said would be executed if their names were published.

The persons who gave the foregoing, in relation say that McGeehan answered to the description given by Mrs. Conklin of the man who drove the buggy from the house on North Clark street the night of Cronin's disappearance. They say he also answers to the description given of Mr. Williams brothers given by Mrs. Carlson, the other alleged brother-lover. He also resembles to a bartender, a former Philadelphian, who has been McGeehan's good friend and chum since the latter came here.

A Philadelphian now temporarily residing in the city, said who was instrumental in bringing about the arrest of McGeehan, said in reference to the matter, "I would have been wrong not to arrest McGeehan. He was constantly uttering threats against Cronin, and of all the persons who were hostile to the doctor he was the worst. He has been associated in business with those opposed to Cronin and who regarded the former leader in Irish societies as little less than a god. He made the acquaintance of Coughlin, and Coughlin is one of those persons who are partisans of the obnoxious faction of the Clan-na-Gael in Chicago. When Dr. Cronin removed to Chicago from Philadelphia, it is said that McGeehan was furious and became more violent and more frequent in his denunciations of the doctor than he had been before. Now, the question arises, did his threats have any bearing on subsequent developments? Did his complaints sympathize with his friends? It is rumored that he was acquainted with Dr. Cronin and Coughlin, as well as Detective Coughlin. It is reported that he joined the Cronin as an 'old comrade.' He made the rounds with Coughlin. He looked on Coughlin as a valuable man, he often said so."

As a result of the exposure of Detective Coughlin's knowledge as to the man who killed Dr. Cronin a deep two conferences were held on Saturday between Mayor Cregier, Chief Hubbard, Lawyer Elliott, Corporation Counsel Hutchinson, Attorney W. J. Hynes, and Lawyer Forrest. The second detective was brought before them and subjected to a searching examination. At the close of the last examination of Coughlin it was 6: 30p. m. and the detectives was not only suspended from duty but placed under arrest.

The officials were very reticent as to Coughlin's admissions, if he made any, but Chief Hubbard stated that things looked very black for him. The chief said he had been received in some things and would make a thorough investigation.

One of the most surprising features of Coughlin's connection with the case is that Mike Whalen, another detective who, with Coughlin, was detailed on the Cronin case, is a brother-in-law of Sullivan, the informer. Coughlin has admitted to Chief Hubbard that Smith, the man who took the white horse from Dinan's stable on Coughlin's order, gave him $15 to pay for the horse and afterward left the city for New Mexico. The apparently inexplicable part of Coughlin's case is the fact that when he was sent out to bring in this man Smith he returned with the statement that Smith was a 1 right and had left the city that afternoon.

The most startling rumors have been circulated regarding the enmity of Detective Coughlin to Dr. Cronin and the probable reasons why he is at least aware of the murder of the unfortunate. Many of the friends of Dr. Cronin are outspoken in their charges that a man can be found in the local camps of the Irish Revolutionary brotherhood. It is well known that Dr. Cronin and his supporters were actively prosecuting a vigorous campaign which would fasten the crimes of embezzlement and treason on certain leaders in the Irish Revolutionary brotherhood.

It is now claimed that the detective, Coughlin, has been for some time acting as a spy to keep the accused parties informed of the actions of Cronin and his friends. Dr. Cronin had organized several independent camps of the brotherhood, and it is these camps that, as is claimed, Coughlin acted the part of a spy. He is said to have been recently expelled from one of the meetings on the ground that he was not a properly initiated member. The most sensational disclosures are promised regarding a general system of espionage on Cronin's actions, which, it is claimed, will implicate a large section of the Chicago police force.

The police have been put in possession of facts which, if true, are far more startling than was ever expected concerning Dr. Cronin's murder. It has been clearly proven by the dead man's friends that his removal was ordered by a committee in some way representing the Clan-na-Gael society. Charges of treachery and treason were preferred against him at a meeting of a Clan-na-Gael camp; he was found guilty and his removal was ordered.

The charge was based on the statement of the British spy, Le Caron, that three were four more spies in America. When Le Caron made the statement on the stand before the Parnell commission, he was ordered to state the names of the spies. He said he did not do it, because if they were known they would be murdered, and the detectives was not only suspended from duty but placed under arrest.

MANITOBA LIBERALS AROUSED.

They Want Premier Greenway and Attorney-General Martin to Resign.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 27.—It is reported that the Liberal party of Manitoba is demanding the resignation of Premier Greenway and Attorney-General Martin in consequence of charges made against them in conducting the affairs of the province. An investigation into the manner in which the public interests have been guarded since the Greenway government came into power, will, it is said, be demanded at once. The association of the names of these gentlemen with the Northern Pacific and Manitoba frauds and their repudiation of the government obligations in connection with the Manitoba railway have become subjects of great public satisfaction here.

SUGAR RIOTS THREATENED.

Parisian Workingmen Object to the Recent Advance in Prices.

PARIS, May 26.—There is considerable agitation here over the rise in the price of sugar. Socialists threaten to break into the sugar refineries.

The subject was brought before the chamber of deputies last night. M. Thevenet, minister of justice, expressed the opinion that the advance in price of sugar was due to natural causes. He declared the government would act with severity if any fraudulent combination to raise the price was discovered.

—A recent letter from the State capital says:

Between Marquette and L'Anse nearly 70,000 acres have been purchased by Boston, Houghton and Ontonagon Railroad capitalists in anticipation of the building of a branch road to the Gogebic range. Report has it that the State gave a patent to the railroad company the latter was allowed to select the lands where it chose, instead of being required to take those nearest the line of the road. As a result the lands south of the road, that were before the grove 20th in iron deposits, were selected, and there is a little doubt that the Gogebic range will come prospered against him at a meeting of a Clan-na-Gael camp; he was found guilty and his removal was ordered.

—Benzie County has just lost by death two of her oldest pioneers—Samuel W. Benton and Capt. W. B. Sutherland.

—Much sentiment has been created among women of Detroit by a well-dressed man whose actions to women who are unprotected by his sex, have given the fact that a severe struggle must have taken place before the victim was rendered unconscious. The blood stains on floor, walls, and furniture are profuse and terrible. Here and there are strands of hair sticking to the congealed blood. The supposition is that Dr. Cronin must have received several blows before being unconscious and the ability to defend himself. There are finger prints and footmarks showing that the assassin or assassins must have had presence of mind and caught in a bungling fashion to cover the evidences of their terrible crime.

The Evidence Against the Three Prisoners Presented to the Grand Jury—Woodruff Tells Capt. Schaack of His Connection with the Crime.

A Chicago dispatch says: Daniel Coughlin the detective, P. O. Sullivan, the lawyer, and Frank Woodruff, alias the "Irish man," have been indicted by the grand jury on the charge of murdering Dr. Cronin. There are three counts in the indictment, but they refer only to the instruments used in the killing, and not, as known, the actual murder. The witness was old man Patrick Ashland avenue, Lake View where the murder took place. The old man was a member of the grand jury but a very short time, when he was called upon to testify he should not issue roum.

Mrs. Conklin, the saloon keeper and personal friend of the dead doctor, was also a witness. Her testimony about twenty minutes he was followed by young Carlson.

John J. Cronin, a brother of the murdered man, was also a witness. The young man said in order came the following persons: John Ryan and Patrick Ryan, Ashland avenue, John J. THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

An Important Inquiry.

The Reform Club of New York is collecting the opinions of farmers in every part of the country on the condition of the agricultural class. We are requested to ask that every farmer who reads the JOURNAL will be kind enough to answer the following inquiries. The results of the investigation, which will be a summary of many thousands of opinions, will be published in these columns. As many answers are desired as can possibly be obtained, for the more that are received the more valuable will the result be. Please answer as requested, below:

1. Are the farmers in your community as prosperous as they have ever been?

2. If so, to what do they chiefly owe their prosperity? If not, what has been the chief reason of the change? (Leave out of consideration such temporary causes as a bad crop year, and consider the social and political causes.)

3. Do the farmers take less or more interest than formerly in economic discussions?

4. What effect does the tariff have on their condition?

5. Will a bushel of wheat or a barrel of corn buy as many necessaries of life as it did thirty years ago?

6. Have they gained or lost social dignity, as compared with other classes, such as merchants and mechanics?

7. Do farmers' sons show any less willingness than formerly to become farmers? If so, why?

Please address your answers by mail to Walter H. Page, the Reform Club, 12 East 33d St., New York city, and a summary of the answers received from every part of the country will be sent to you.

Information Wanted.

Robert P. Porter, superintendent of census, addresses the following circular to the medical profession throughout the United States:

The various medical associations of the medical profession will be glad to learn that Dr. John S. Billings, surgeon U. S. army, has consented to take charge of the report on the mortality and vital statistics of the United States as returned by the eleventh census.

As the United States has no system of registration of vital statistics, such as is relied upon by other civilized nations for the purpose of ascertaining the actual movement of population, our census affords the only opportunity of obtaining near an approximate estimate of the birth and death rates of much the larger part of the country, which is entirely unprovided with any satisfactory system of state and municipal registration.

In view of this, the census office, during the month of May this year, will issue to the medical profession throughout the country "Physician's Registers" for the purpose of obtaining more accurate returns of deaths than it is possible for the enumerators to make. It is earnestly hoped that physicians in every part of the country will co-operate with the census office in this important work. The record should be kept from June 1, 1880, to May 31, 1890. Nearly 26,000 of these registration books were filled up and returned to the office in 1880, and nearly all of them used for statistical purposes. It is hoped that double this number will be obtained for the eleventh census.

Physicians not receiving registers, can obtain them by sending their names and addresses to the census office, and, with the register, an official envelope which requires no stamp will be provided for their return to Washington.

If all medical and surgical practitioners throughout the country will send their sid, mortality and vital statistics of the eleventh census will be more comprehensive and complete than they have ever been. Every physician should take personal pride in having this report as full and accurate as it is possible to make it.

It is hereby promised that all information through this source shall be held strictly confidential.

The 1890 Floral Exhibition.

The time for holding the next Floral and Musical Festival at Detroit, has been fixed for April 22, 23, 24, and 25 of next year. It will be for the benefit of the combined Detroit charities, and held, as before, under the auspices of the Detroit Journal, who guarantees the charities named fees. It will be about twice as large as the one recently held.

Wide Awake for June.

Wide Awake for June might well be called a "true-story number." It opens with a reproduction of Henry Bacon's beautiful painting, "The End of a Long Day," photographed especially for Wide Awake—a lovely picture. Then comes the true stories—five of them: "A Plain Case" is by the one novelist, Miss Wilkins, who grew her early laurels in Wide Awake; this story is most pathetic. The scene of Miss Risley Seward's brilliant story is on board an ocean steamer; it is entitled "The Naughtiest Boy I Ever Met." Mrs. General Fremont's is a California story, "The Heroine that Jack Built," Mrs. Annie Sawyer-Downs' story is of the Confederate side in the Civil War, a jolly tale, "The French Member of Company B." The story by Sara Tainer Smith, "Outward in the Java Sea," will go to everybody's heart. The serials are excellent; Margaret Sidney's "Five Little Peppers Further On" has a tremendous surprise for readers; Sibyl Fair's Fairness," by Talbot, will be enjoyed by Wide Awake's grown-up audience.

Wide Awake is $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, publishers, Boston.

Historical Lies Outdone.

There was an insurance man from St. Louis in town a day or two ago. He is a gentleman who can give Baron Munchausen and Eli Perkins both cards and spades in the direction of exaggerated fiction. Early in the morning he met a couple of friends and began to regale them with tales of his adventures. He said he has was once stopping on the fourth floor of a northern hotel when he was aroused about 3 a. m. by an awful commotion. He had retired with a comfortable "jag" as a bedfellow and very sleepy in consequence. But he roused himself sufficiently to go to the window and learn that the hotel was on fire. It was bitter cold outside. The firemen were at work in the street below. He said he signaled two pipemen to direct their stream in his direction. They did so. The stream froze solid and he slid down to the ground upon it, landing safely. Then he began to boast of the St. Louis fire department. He answered all arguments in favor of breweries here by saying one brewery in St. Louis extended twenty-seven stories under ground, and that it was found better to employ Chinamen in the lower story because it was cheaper, being nearer China than St. Louis. One of his friends rushed to the telegraph office soon after this and telegraphed that the insurance man was dead. His company wired back, "What's the complaint?" and his friend answered, "No complaint at all. Every one satisfied."—Chicago Herald.

The Colonel's Bet.

"A boy is a strange being, isn't he?" queried the colonel, as he looked out of the office window.

"I don't know anything so very strange about that particular boy," replied one of the other loungers, as he sauntered up and saw a boy of 10 on the opposite side of the street.

"But he's got a jug," persisted the colonel.

"Well, what of it? Can't a boy carry a jug?"

"But he is swinging it around his head."

"Let him swing. You never saw a boy who wouldn't."

"I'll bet he breaks it before he gets to the corner," exclaimed the colonel.

"Nonsense!"

"Bet you twenty dollars."

"Done!"

Half a dozen rushed up to watch further proceedings. The boy continued to swing the jug, apparently bent upon performing some particular feat, and just before he reached the corner his hand slipped and the jug was dashed to pieces.

"I knew it! I knew it!" chuckled the colonel as he danced around.

"Dear him—here's your money!" groaned the other.

An hour later, after having spent the interval in solemn thought, the loser mildly inquired:

"Colonel, did you think you had a sure thing on me?"

"Certainly. I bought that jug for the boy, and gave him fifty cents to carry out the programme!"—St. Paul News.

CATARRH.—Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B. For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

Sufferers from catarrhal troubles should read the above carefully. 15ov1y

Combining Business and Pleasure.

It is a breach of etiquette to allow the landing out of advertisements to people as they emerge from a theatre. Aristocratic people would deem it an insult to have an advertisement shoved into their hands as they were departing even from so public a place. Judge, then, of the surprise of the members of some of Albany's best families when, upon leaving the house of one of the society leaders at a recent swell event, a young man in livery standing within the hallway shoved into the hands of each guest a neatly folded piece of paper resembling a handkerchief, which upon being opened disclosed the advertisement of a dealer in fish, oysters and clams.—Albany Journal.

At the request of many authors who desire more time in which to complete their manuscripts, the time of the Detroit Free Press prize story competition has been extended from May 1st to July 1st.

Wm. Ranger was seriously injured by the falling of a plank leading to a scaffold, while carrying a heavy stone Wednesday afternoon at the new school house. The stone fell on his body, and he will probably be laid up several days in consequence.

John Thompson is booked for an appearance at Bartholomew's opera house in the near future, presenting his "merry crew" of comic characters, in his original protean comedy, entitled, "A Huge Joke." Singing, dancing, instrumental solos, and comic characters.

☞ The vocal organs are strengthened by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Clergymen, lawyers, singers, actors, and public speakers find it a valuable tonic. It is a positive remedy for irritation and weakness of the throat and lungs, and for all affections of the vocal organs.

Misses Carrie and Mollie Richards of Ypsilanti, who were among the killed in that terrible catastrophe at Johnstown, Pa., were intimate friends of Mrs. G. R. Brown of this place. Miss Carrie was a teacher in a private school, and her sister had arrived there but a day or two previous to visit her.

The Manistee Democrat of May 31st has the following: "Yesterday the Petoskey and F. & P. M. No. 4 had a race between Ludington and this port, the Petoskey winning by about three minutes. As the No. 4 is the largest and swiftest of the F. & P. M. steamers, the captain of the Petoskey feels considerably elated over his success."

The Star Theater Co. gave a faithful presentation of the character of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" at Lewis' opera house Thursday evening, followed by the laughable farce "Follow that Couple Looks like Me." On Friday evening they gave "The Streets of New York." Memorial Day visitors from up the lake remained to swell the audience on Friday evening.

East Jordan is all torn up over the village assessment recently made there. On Tuesday the board of review were in session, and the kickers were numerous, some more offered to sell his entire personal effects for $800 less than they were assessed at, and others complained in proportion. There seems to have been a very general increase of values, especially of personal property.

W. S. Stripp desires us to state that Mr. Folly, who was drowned last winter, and whose body was recently found and buried in the potter's field in the Charlevoix cemetery, had not worked for him for more than a year before his death; that every employe who has died while in his employ has received Christian burial in a lot bought and paid for by their friends or himself; that as Mr. Folly had not been in his employ for a year or more, he did not consider it his duty to buy a lot to bury him in.

The Wilson Hoop Co. at South Arm are running with a full force of employes.—men, boys, and girls,—and the product makes a fine appearance as piled in the yards. The hoops are coiled by machinery into flat bundles, about two feet in diameter, and in thickness the width of the hoop. These bundles or coils are then piled in huge stacks, in the yard, probably 16 or 18 feet diameter, and 20 to 25 feet high, running nearly to a peak. All are uniform in size and appearance. This is a clean industry, and undoubtedly scatters a good many dollars in South Arm and surrounding country.

Among the possibilities of the near future is a railroad from South Arm to Intermediate lake, to facilitate the shipment of a large amount of timber from that point via South Arm to the outside world, and especially to reach a large amount of elm which can be worked to advantage at the South Arm hoop factory. We not at liberty to say who will build the road, but there is undoubtedly sufficient capital behind the scheme to make it a success.

Memorial Day.

Notwithstanding the cold and disagreeable weather of May 30th, a large number of people came to Charlevoix to observe the ceremonies and services of memorial day. The procession made a very respectable appearance in numbers, and headed by the Charlevoix cornet band, marched in fine style to the cemetery. The band have reason to be proud of their work on that occasion, and the address of Byron See has been complimented by all present. The services at the cemetery were those prescribed by the ritual. The floral decorations were numerous and beautiful.

Is Consumption Incurable.

Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark., says: "Was down with sores of lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an incurable consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle, and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made."

Jessie Middlewart, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for our King's New discovery for Consumption I would have died of Lung Troubles. Was given up by the doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Sample bottles free at F. G. Hines & Co.'s drug store. 5

Promptness.

FATE'S BRAVADO.

BY WM. W. LOSS.

Last night, in the gloom and "shadow,
A stern voice unto me spoke,—
"I am standing between your love and you,
And you both shall wear my yoke.
Thy love is a fragile flower,
Pure and boy', without stain,
I have wrapped in shroud of sorrow,
I have laid away in pain.

"Captives to my will and power,
I have locked your hopes away,
With their radiant trust and beauty
That make life a perfect day.
You are mine to taunt and torture,
Mine to take from all delight,
Mine to keep for eye so tender,
And I hold you down in night."

Then I laughed, ha! ha! so fiends laugh,
As I rose from out my place,
Laughed at the bravado of the demon,
Laughed in the face of Fate, I say.
Yet, between my words he struck me
Blows that made the blood to flow,
Still he stands there stern and still;
And my hands all hot and bleeding,
Have no power to lay them by.
BOSTY HOTEL, Va.

CARROL'S CONVERSION.

It was a lady who had taken "Holmes place"—a young lady, an unmarried lady, and a beauty, that was enough to send a thrill of excitement and unholy curiosity through the dull veins of the little sleepy village. There was not in the limits of the State a duller spot than Holmesville; that was the reason that it petted and made much even of such a great little mystery as Holmes's place!

"Holmes's place" had stood empty for years—all the Holmeses were abroad, and rank and ruin had taken possession of the fine old-fashioned manor-house, with its green, shady grounds and its glorious sea-view.

Now it was put into thorough repair, and sweet and genteel for the reception of a tenant; for Miss Berkeley, the mystery, of whom nobody knew anything whatever except that she was young and pretty, and had taken Holmes's place for a twelvemonth, "from march," said the agent, who was wheeled up and down the beach twice a day in a bath-chair.

Miss Berkeley kept a man and three maids, and was "free of her money and nice-spoken," as the natives said; she was young and slight, and taller say, unfortunated on company, shunned all friendly advances, and avoided, as much as possible, even casual contact with the boarders at the Winnepegs' House, who had caught the contagion of village curiosity, and were consumed with a fever of about the fair tenant of Holmes's Place.

The only person who had caught at a shred of information concerning her was Page Carrol, a summer lounger at the aforesaid hotel. A sudden and violent thunderstorm was the conductor that brought them together.

Page, driving along the unfrequented part of the beach where Mrs. Berkeley took her constitutional, had met the maid and her mistress struggling with the bath-chair against a gale of wind, and the poor invalid shivering in the rain under a parasol!

Only too happy to be of service, Mr. Carrol had sprung down from the buggy, and with about half a dozen words exchanged with either side, instalmed the mother and daughter in his place.

He lifted the sick woman safely and strongly into her seat, put the ribbons into the girl's little gloved gray kid hands, and saw herstart his fast mare off at a gallop, then turned to the bath-chair, and chair and man disappeared together, and trudged off through the rain, and pelted straight through, and to the heart by those half-dozen grateful words, and the frank, grateful look of those lovely gray eyes.

So by laying Miss Berkeley under a debt of gratitude, Page Carrol won his way to her friendship. He was thoroughly fascinated—there was no disputing that—and Mr. Carrol was not a man easily charmed, nor by any means an impulsive one.

The most inflexiant and fastidious of men—a born aristocrat, and an aristocrat to every fiber. The idea of his falling in love with a woman of unknown antecedents and undefined social position would have seemed, many a month before, the wildest impossibility. Now, looking into Alice Berkeley's violet-gray eyes, and tender, perfect face, he forgot that she had ever had an ancestor to question, and lost sight altogether of his own indisputable family tree. Page Carrol was not the first man by many a one who had succumbed to the influence of Page Carrol's innocent and her homage.

He might have wondered or doubted a little over her calm, courteous refusal to let him ever call from the ladies at the hotel—Carrol's friends, many of them—or to grant introduction to any of the men, but her one sincere excuse satisfied him.

"She particularly wished to avoid society this summer; her mother's health demanded all her time and attention, and she had come to Holmesville expressly to devote herself to her invalid parent. Mrs. Berkeley was not just as well that he should see the entree of the old Holmes Manor."

He had kept the fact of his acquaintance with its mistress most religiously to himself for a time, but it came out at last, and in this way.

Between Holmes's Place (I find myself clinging to the rural nomenclature and forgetting the more dignified title of "The Oaks") and the main road there was a stretch of wood, a favorite haunt, where one afternoon Page and his friend Colonel Jennings were loitering with their cigars.

"Going to town, next week, Carrol" the Colonel had just demanded, and Carrol replied, "Yes."

"No! The dickens you're not! Why, you've been vegetating for four weeks already, my dear fellow; what's the attraction? Not the society, I'll swear, for you've withdrawn yourself from that like an anchorite, and I don't believe you've looked in the face of a woman since you came here."

Mr. Carrol smiled sedately behind his cigar.

"I didn't come here for society."

"Only to indulge your taste for simple country pleasures, I suppose; since when have you developed a passion for the rural? I remember the time when you couldn't exist two weeks away from the clubs and the theaters—

"But don't talk to me of theaters. If I had a hand in the government I'd burn every theater!"

"Why not, my old Athenian," laughed the Colonel. "I hope you'd spare a pretty woman or two out of the various companies, Page?"

"Women!" echoes Carrol, with a sneer and his voice rises a little. "Don't my dear boy, for my mother's sake, don't put a woman and an actress in the same breath. Any woman who exhibits herself or is much per head to a gaping, promiscuous public loses her right to the name.

Page Carrol's voice was singularly clear and distinct, but even were it less so he must have had a second auditor just then. The sound of a light footfall on the dry sticks, and from a crossroad through the wood Miss Berkeley steps out facing them, her large eyes meet Carrol's for a second, and with the color trending in her face, but without a smile, she bows gravely to him and passes straight on.

Half a dozen yards in between them before either says a word.

"By Jove!" pronounces the Colonel, with a long whistle, like a note of admiration.

Page's face is crimson with amazement.

"Solution of the conundrum, you confounded sly dog! Carrol, how long have you known—how the deuce did you happen to know Miss Berkeley?"

"In the ordinary course of events," says Page, curtly. "I've known her for some time; the precise date can't be of any moment to you, Colonel."

That night the cool and collected Page, who had never in his life before lost his temper, paced long and gloomily, walks out with his cigar into the moonlight—for what? Not to call at The Oaks—he was there last evening. No! like any distraught schoolboy or college boy, he goes to stare at a light in the window.

Leaning on the stone fence that bounds the side of her lawn, he can look straight into the drawing-room, window, and just above them is the window of her room.

A old-fashioned white room, with chintzes over the rough stone house front and the sweet, stray, sea-breeze, that seems to wend their sinuous way in her hair and in her bosom—that seem to make there twenty times.

An idiotic, sentimental desire steals over Carrol to assume the place of one of those roses, they gleamed so white and soft in the moonlight, climbing up to lay their cool faces against her window-sill. It is such an innocent theft—he could search it unseen, for the house is quite dark and still, and she is asleep up there, and he can hear She would never know if he sprang over the garden wall. Stop!

Half ashamed of his folly, half eager, Page strides across the dewy lawn, passes the belt of flower-beds, and crosses the gravel walk, and stands in a secluded niche under her window.

It is wide open, but there is no light in the room, no sound, no sign of her voice!

His heart gives a wild, hot throb and starts off, at a sharp, pressure of the fingers out from the dark room, and he catches his breath, keen and distinct.

"I tell you it would kill me! Oh, mother, don't you see I love him?"

Page Carrol ought to turn away and go, for he has heard what he should not. There is the line of indelicate honor and honor, and he, and Carrol, crosses it, thrilled again at the passionate, sweet one, but answered with tears:

"I can't do it. Let me have my own way. I will be happy just a little while longer. Oh, mother, if she knew! Alice Vane is a liar!"

That broke the spell, and Page Carrol, turning his face to the light, half feared that he could not define, turned sharply and dashed away as if he were fleeing for life.

The rose lay on the grass in the moonlight—he thought no more of roses that night.

For all the rest of the dark hours he had to think of Alice Berkeley, of the sweet face, the violet eyes, the tender, perfect passion, melting into a caress, or wailing in a cry of agony, that maddened everyone that carried with it, God only knew what manner of a woman Alice Berkeley was for her Page Carrol until he had heard those words, with no key to the difference.

For awhile he never even remembered what else had caught his ear, but it came back to him with a dim horror when the fever in his veins had cooled a little.

"Alice Vane is a liar!" he had right to wonder at—a thing of it at all, for such a vagrant of some secret never meant for his ears to hear, and yet it seemed to dishonor him, and yet he could not drive it away. He burned as a great scorch at upon her image now—a blow hearing over her had weakened her, shaken her faith, and he could not take it upon his own, or stop between her and the knowledge of it.

It maddened the man—it haunted him as he had never been haunted by a face since that face day or night.

Alice Berkeley differed far away from the conventional woman; her heart or brain was floating further and further from the traditions of her education, and was upon an ocean of doubt and wonder, and everything that—that is—if it should prove darkened Alice Berkeley's image—"mystery" would be the last to be cast upon the world wherein he met her.

And he had begun to think that it did not matter much, after all, what conventional barriers she might have raised or broken down, so long as her own pure soul was left unsullied, and her name, her honor, and her honest, he also aristocrat or roberer.

He haunted the woods and paths along the beach that he knew she frequented, and he hung around the edge of the wood near "Holmes's Place," and at last, one hot afternoon, he saw her, and he was, he came upon her, quite alone, when, for the first time, she showed no desire to avoid him.

"You don't love me?"

"I'm sorry, I can't."

"Is there another?"

"I cannot!" she says under her breath, with a sudden dropping color and a quiver in her lips.

They seemed to stab into Page Carrol's heart; the passionate, proud man who never pleaded before to man or woman—and he does not plead now. A little sneer goes over his frame, and his face seems to grow harsher and older in a moment; he drops her hands out of his and draws back.

"You cannot?" he whispers, hoarsely, "and this time the answer comes quick and ready!

"Page—

"Then that is all!" Page bows very low, and like the courtly gentleman he is, tries hard to smooth the agony out of his voice; his farewell look at this lost Alice, "As you say it is useless, I will go!"

He makes no movement to touch her hand, but with a wild, impulsive gesture, she stretches out both to him.

"Good-by!" she says, but his good-by is never spoken; it goes out in dumb kisses on those throbbing little hands—many and hot and fierce—and then her lover is gone.

Alice Berkeley, in her room, sobbing in a hot, wild fever—more than Page Carrol to hear those four words whispered over, "I love you so!"

INSPIRING SCENES.

Sights and Sounds that Rouse Spectators to Enthusiasm and Patriotism.

A dazzling flash of light bursts from the side of the ponderous warship Chicago; a cloud of smoke rolls out upon the waters, and the boom of her great rifle makes everything tremble. Bang, bang, go the guns from the sides of the sacred old Kearsarge, the same guns that sent the Alabama to the bottom of the sea off Cherbourg harbor, and woe for the Kearsarge and those who manned her imperishable renown.

The Yantic and Essex joined their guns in the salute, and suddenly the Boston puts in her great rifled cannon with a shock that almost stuns those nearest to her. The smoke gathers about and nearly conceals the warships, and through it can be seen the flashing little fire of the smaller guns from out of it comes the stunning roar that is echoed back from old Fort Columbus and the sides of Liberty statue. The excitement grows. The crowds of people on board and the tremendous hulks masses upon the Battery, packing acres with solid humanity; the people crowding the tops of buildings ten to fifteen stories high, all join in the mighty acclaim of the cannonade. Men n' women go wild in the depths. Patriotic pride in and and love of country mount triumphant in throbbing breasts. One understands, in the tremendous scene he is passing through, that it is right, although he may not have a drop of African blood in his veins. We know this is strong language, but we are prepared to stand by it, no matter who may gainsay.

DO YOU DESIRE (to his best pale little brother)—I notice you always come into the parlor to amuse yourself with the children when I am entertained. She had her mouth open, however, which goes to show that she was game even when it came to turning to stone.

WE are bold to affirm that a Southern man can't be a coward, although he may not have a drop of African blood in his veins. We know this is strong language, but we are prepared to stand by it, no matter who may gainsay.

"Don't you love me?" Yep—boy me a monkey.

Ahead of an Austin hotel table that a child attracted considerable attention by saying repeatedly, "Mamma, I want to move the candelabra." Not five or six already," replied the mother. "There's not the ones I want. I want a little one."

LITTLE JOHNNY witnessed a military review—book it sockess the man to his very soul. The whole house grims, and the sweet little face lights up, when back in his corner of the upper box, and seats his face with his hand to shut out the glare and the sight of her.

"Mamma, mamma, I'm so glad—higher and higher in the bad known it, but said the same. It rings through the house, carries Pauline's light words and musing tange to the end of the scene in triumph.

"Yes, I love you, and am happy to know, sice steps from the wing, and courteous her inquiring, quietly and sweetly, and stopping that "soft," whose every note falls the first note in the heard. Page has wumanhood and to his love.

"Oh, is that all?" she says, "this is the mystery of Miss Berkeley's life? Then an actress is a mere nothing, and I'm sorry I spoke of her in such a disparaging way to you, for the sight of whose beauty he, like the rest, has paid his tribute.

He leaves the box and paces the lobby to and fro, had determined to leave the house before the curtain shall rise again, and he would, but he has to stay for her.

He hears the gallant comments of the gentlemen who have seen her, he hears her voice; hears her talent criticised, her appearance, her dress, her manner, her acting, and he hears the cruel hot blood boils with impotent wrath and misery.

He hears the jests, the sneers, the drags on, and the actors mouth their parts. Alice Vane swoops out among them again, and

"I ought to have told you before at Hoxie Park," she is whispering, with a shamed face hidden from her cover, anxiety eyes; "only it was so hard, you know, with a sad little quiver in her voice. "You did not believe me an actress could be

"Alice, for God's sake, don't remind me of the terrible, terrible mystery of mine." Page begs hoarsely.

She smiles, but it is a pitiful smile enough.

"But you felt so. I overheard you, you know, 'no one consider that she wives passed y.' in the wood? After I heard that I could tell you. I wanted to keep your respect, even if I claimed it on such poor pretensions, and never meant to see you again—never?

Old-Time Election Bet.

Judge Joseph Cox, a few days ago, in overhauling some papers belonging to the estate of Robert Crawford, deceased, found the following unique note given by Amos Worthington, head of the well-known family of that name, now long deceased.

"On the first day of January, 1829, I promise to pay Robert Crawford one bearer hal of the value of nine dollars. The condition of the obligation is such that if John Quincy Adams is elected President of the United States at the next Presidential election, then the above obligation is to be null and void, otherwise to remain in full force and virtue. Alcoholism Cured by Hypnotism.

It is claimed that persons addicted to the use of alcoholic liquors can be entirely cured by the new French method of hypnotism. The patient is hypnotized and then told by the doctor that he must never want to drink again, but must feel disgust for liquor. If the doctor has spoken well he will be successful in every instance. Mrs. Hannah Whitball Smith writes to Miss Willard that the cases are wonderful and have excited so much attention that French specialists now have a hospital devoted to the treatment, and publish a review.—New York Telegram.

Now for Knee Breeches.

What we sigh for just now is a change in the fashion of men's clothing. Our they tailor's fancy knee breeches, and pleasing to the judge. Her eyes seemed to see such the circle of the house centrally, and the actors strutted and fretted through the film of stage-powder as her mind wandered.

Has she seen him? Something makes Carrol stop faint and the loop of the box again and lean over, looking steadily down at the dim, crowded orchestra circle, where, for her, some friend sits with her hands tight together, once more intent upon the green curtain, with its curtain. She stops short, and casts a wild, strained eye back across the stage, as if seeing and questioning—what?

One quick glance upward and she knows! She meets her lover's eyes in a flash of recognition, and the crimson dye sets of beauty and is gone, and Alice Berkeley, with that look of terror yet clinging to her shape, falls fainting behind the footlights.

"I feel quite well to-day, mother. I am so glad everything is settled. Poor mother! you have had so much trouble with all this, but we shall have a long, long rest now—don't we, dear?"

Alice stretches out a hand from the sofa where she lies, and clasps her mother's. The little hand has grown thin, and her face pale; the dimples have flown, but not now, have wasted it; surely for a month past.

"Yes, dear, we shall have a long, long rest; God for anything, almost, that takes you away from those theaters!"

Has Alice left them, then, forever? Yonty, no!

The "star" rose and set upon New York just one brief night. When Pauline sank upon the stage, the roar of the actress passed out, never to reachinate the woman more. Where the real love had breathed, the mimic passion could find no more utterance. Alice Vane's "farewell to the world" was taken in that fleeting little cry. And then the "engagements" were canceled, and the Westbrooke pulsaway, and Miss Berkeley and her mother made really to withdraw from the world to a quiet little corner where they would live so simply and so shabby that there would be nothing any more about the beautiful actress.

It was all quite settled and the preparations made, and nobody knew where they were going, and nobody cared, for the world had gotten tired of about the fickleness of the "star," and who at this very minute is sowing up the dresses of Miss Berkeley.

Alice had never meant to see him. She had put him quite away from her life, and told herself twenty times a day that that foolish, hopeless passion must starve to death—that it was dying fast already. But mother, wiser than the child, read matters differently. When she left the room to see Page Carrol her mind was half made up, and ten minutes later, when Alice turned from the door, after a long, long talk with her dear, it was to see the face that she dreaded and yearned for more than all else that the wide world held.

A Canadian Game Fish.

Its appearance a fresh-run salmon and a fresh-run winaniche do not differ much more than salmon from different rivers. The back of a winaniche is greenish blue, and in a fish just out of water can be seen to be marked with olive spots, something like the variegations on a trout; the silvery sides are more iridescent, the X-marks are more numerous and less sharply defined; the patches of bronze, purple, and green on the gill-covers are larger and more brilliant, and with them there are some reddish black spots. As the water grows warm the bright hues get dull, and toward autumn the rusty red color and hooked lower jaw of the spawning salmon develops. As the winaniche, unlike the salmon, feeds continuously, and in rapid water and swifter water than salmon lie in, it has a slimmer body and larger fins, so that a five-pound winaniche can leap higher and offener than a grilse and fight like a ten-pound salmon. The variety of its habits, which are a compound of those of the grilse and those of the salmon, with some peculiarities of its own, gives great charm to winaniche-angling, and opportunity for great sport in fly-fishing. What varieties of trees and shrubs are best to plant and how to plant them became one of the most interesting subjects of discussion. Kansas followed closely in the wake of Dakota. Minnesota, Iowa, Michigan, Ohio, most of the New England states and some of the Southern States soon caught the idea, and many millions of trees and shrubs for the prairies were sent out and been planted as the outgrowth of the Nebraska theory.

Arbor Day is now not only an established festival but an educational festival. It is a day which, if it fosters a taste for the beautiful and a love of nature, especially among the school children; it cultivates a spirit of environment and teaches a methodical, intelligent system of tree culture and management. — New England Farmer.

THE WORST WRECK, PHYSICALLY

Of any Man This Country Ever Saw, Cured.

JACKSON, Mich., October, 1885.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.

GENTLEMEN: In November, 1884, I was cast in my house by a rheumatic fever, from which I suffered extreme pain. I called a medical gentleman who prescribed some of your Rheumatic Syrup. Not only as a source of relief, but a remedy equivalent to the wonders of ancient and modern medicine, I am a convert to the efficacy of your valuable, well-tested and well-known remedy. Before I was taken sick I was a robust man, weighing 200 pounds, but was so crippled by the rheumatism that my joints were so stiffened that I could not walk without two canes. I was a wreck, but as a result of using your Rheumatic Syrup I am now in good health. Yours truly,

"What's the matter with it?"

"It abounds in classical, scientific, and other allusions, and contains an immense number of words which I am obliged to look up in the dictionary, and when I have done so find them marked obsolete."

"Ah, I see! It was a mistake. This work is intended to be used in schools. I will give you another treatise on the same subject for grown readers that can be understood."—Time.

SSS. Clear the Way. Without loss of time when the intestinal canal becomes clogged with constipation, obstruction or temporary. It should be borne in mind that this ailment is prone to become lasting and obstinate if neglected or improperly treated. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the precise remedy to remove the disorder without delay, and without drenching or weakening the blooded system. Its ingredients are entirely exempt from the use of violent laxatives, which are known to be injurious to health. The alteratives allowed by the credulous and misinformed, are not approved by the medical profession, nor are they admitted to a standard apothecary. Not only as a source of relief, but as a remedy equivalent to the wonders of ancient and modern, but as a cause of remedying the ailments of the sick, the invaluable, but forced and unnatural, is this famous preparation.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Ev line.

JUNE 4.—The amount of rain that has fallen the past week is enormous. The creeks have filled up to overflowing. The ground is getting pretty well soaked, and when the raincloods have disappeared, the sun shines forth once more on our lovely earth, warms up the ground, the crops and garden truck will shoot up very rapidly. This has been the longest rain-storm that we have known for several summers.

The blacksmith shop spoken of by Ironton brother last week, we understand will be built at the interior of J. H. Purvis' grocery store. The lumber is already being hauled onto the ground, and the work of building will commence at once.

Our faith in the railroad, brother Ironton, has always been very slimpsy.

Tuesday noon, June 4, it still rains. Did you ever see the beat.

The town board met Monday.

Eber Burdick, of East Jordan, is at Ironton visiting his brother Bert.

Chas. Bedwin was at Harbor Springs on Monday.

Having returned home some ten days ago from East Jordan, where we have been wrestling with the mysteries of the typographic art for some weeks past, we find that some improvements and changes have been made. Owing to the fact that bark, wood, etc., is bringing a very low figure this spring, our farmers are going into farming on a larger scale than ever before, and the constant rain the past week is encouraging. The hay crop will be big and the prospects are that there will be a larger display of fruits, vegetables, etc., and of better quality than ever before at the county fair this fall. When we packed our turkey on the 29th day of March, 1888, for the purpose of learning the printer's trade, we thought our fortune made, but after giving it a ten months' trial we have been compelled to give it up on account of our health not allowing such close application and confinement.

Barnard.

JUNE 3.—We were visited by a heavy frost last week which did considerable damage.

Geo. Anderson visited friends at East Jordan last week.

Children's day will be observed here on Sunday, June 29. An interesting program is being prepared.

Will Gregory of Cross Village is visiting his parents herf.

Several of our farmers have had their cattle put in pound of late.

Mrs. Cunningham and Mrs. Mc Mullin, of Ironton, are visiting friends here.

Anthony Clark is visiting his brother Adam, near Indiana.

Burgess.

JUNE 3.—The sun this morning is quite a stranger but will be welcomed by every one.

Miss Maud Scott has nearly recovered from the mumps.

Geo. Long and wife of Bay, were visiting at Frank Kane's last Sunday.

There will be a children's day service held at the Burgess school house next Sunday. Rev. Stits will preach. An organ will be furnished and good music will be had.

There is a good deal of complaint of the corn rotting in the ground, nearly all will have to be planted over.

Ellsworth.

JUNE 4.—Benj. Madell is happy in the possession of a young daughter.

Wilbert Freeman has returned home from Alba.

Chas. S. Campbell is now abiding with Robt. Fulton.

The water in the Intermediate lake on account of the present rains, is more higher than it was last spring.

S. A. Brown of Atwoo I spent a few day here last week.

"My daughter, twelve years of age, has suffered for the past year from General Debility.

A few weeks since, we began to give her Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Her health has greatly improved."—Mrs. Harriet H. Batten, South Chelmsford, Mass.

"About a year ago I began using Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for debility and neuralgia resulting from malarial exposure in the army. I was in a very bad condition, but six bottles of the Sarsaparilla, with occasional doses of Ayer's Pills, have greatly improved my health. I am now able to work, and feel that I cannot say too much for your medicines."—Wm. F. A. Pinkham, South Molunous, Me.

"My daughter, sixteen years old, is using Ayer's Sarsaparilla with good effect."—Rev. S. J. Wolfenden, United Brethren Church, Buckhannon, W. Va.

"I suffered from

Nervous Prostration,

with lame back and headache, and have been much benefited by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I am now 50 years of age, and am satisfied that my present health and vigor are due to the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Lucy McGuire, Killingly, Conn.

"Mrs. Ann H. Farnsworth, a lady 72 years old, of No. 50 Gold St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: 'After several weeks' suffering from nervous prostration, I procured a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken half of it my usual health returned.'"

PROBATE NOTICE.—State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. Probate court for said county. At a session of the probate court for said county held at the probate office in the village of Boyne City in said county, on the twenty-first day of May, A. D. 1889. Present, Fred. W. Maynard, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Frank Avery, deceased. On reading and filing petition, duly verified, of Maggie M. Avery, widow of said deceased, praying that administration of said estate be granted to Maggie M. Avery, or some other suitable person. Thereupon it is ordered that Monday, the first day of July, next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be held at the probate office, in the village of Boyne City, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted; and it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the other persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

Republican False Promises.

The N. Y. Tribune of May 6, in a review of the industrial situation of the country made the following statement, which we commend to the thoughtful consideration of all that large class of persons, more especially the operatives and laborers on farms and in foundries, factories, and mines, who were confidently assured that the defeat of tariff reform and the election of Harrison meant increased wages, large opportunities for labor, more extended markets, and a general era of abounding prosperity. Said the Tribune:

"But the industries are not in so promising a condition as might be desired. A better feeling is reported in the iron market, nevertheless pig-iron has sold at $15.75 for Southern No. 1, and steel rails $27 at mill. It is frivolous to suppose that pig-iron is going at once to be consumed at a rate of 7,800,000 tons yearly for domestic iron alone, with more than half the rail makers' capacity idle. The glass industry about Pittsburg is also depressed and overproduction is reported. The coal companies find their troubles such that they have suppressed the usual statement of stocks on hand. The situation of the copper business has not improved by a further fall at London, or that of the leather industry by some recent failures. Of the woolen manufactures, a considerable proportion are and for months have been idle and waiting. The circulation of a paper among flannel manufacturers, agreeing to close their works for some months is reported. Large crops are expected, but to all appearance they will mean prices so low that western farmers and transporters may require a microscope for the division of their gains."

Had Mr. Cleveland been re elected and all the above cited results happened, what an unanswerable demonstration would have been afforded of the folly and wickedness of free trade!

Dismissing Democratic Veterans.

A Washington dispatch states that "five democratic ex-union soldiers have been removed within a few days from the postoffice department's force." Let our readers of republican proclivities recall how they used to regard the dropping of old soldiers when democrats wielded the ax. Also let it not be forgotten that for a quarter of a century no democratic veterans were appointed to federal offices, and only republicans were on guard. Yet it seems that of the comparatively few democratic old soldiers who were given offices under Cleveland's administration, many are turned out. The worth of a veteran, argue republican politicians, depends upon the stripe of his shirt. Patriotism was not qualified in this base way when men were needed at the front and it was not then said that the national government would recognize only republican soldiers when the war should be over.—Springfield Republican.

The Tariff Illustrated.

A prominent republican of Richland, went into Gilkey's grocery a day or two since and said:

"What are you paying for eggs?"

"Eight cents."

"What! Only eight cents?"

"That's all. The hen is not protected."

"What is sugar worth?"

"Ten cents a pound. Isn't that high?"

"Yes. But the tariff has made it possible for a sugar trust, and they have run up the price. Take your medicine.—Kalamazoo Gazette

Perseverance Wins.

It is a great mistake to suppose that the best work of the world is done by people of great strength and great opportunities. It is unquestionably an advantage to have both these things, but neither of them is a necessity to the man who has the spirit and the pluck to achieve great results. Some of the greatest work of our time has been done by men of physical feebleness. No man has left a more distinct impression of himself on this generation than Charles Darwin, and there have been few men who had to struggle against such prostrating ill health. Darwin was rarely able to work long at a time He accomplished his great work by having a single aim and putting every ounce of his force and every hour of his time into the task which he had set before him. He never scattered his energy, he never wasted an hour; and by steadily keeping at it, in spite of continual ill health and of long intervals of semi invalidism, he did a great work, and has left the impression upon the world of a man of extraordinary energy and working capacity. Success is rarely a matter of accident, always a matter of character. The reason why so many men fail is that so few men are willing to pay the price of self denial and hard work which success exacts.—Christian Union.

Robbed by Every Combination.

The effect of the twine trust to squeeze the farmers and the vigorous kick made by them against this high-handed attempts at extortion, is costing the combine considerable money and anxiety. The farmer would not swallow the pill without other coating than the duty on wool, so the combine has resorted to print paper and printer's ink, and is flooding the farming community of the west with hundreds of thousands of circulars denying any attempt at extortion and explaining the necessity for the extraordinary increase in the price of binders twine. The twine trust is ably backed by the manufacturers of binders, who think they see an immense decrease in their sales unless the acts of the binder men are met by plausible explanations by those apparently outside the combine. The item of binding twine looks like a small one in the economy of the farm but it is not only the twine trust that is robbing him, but every other combination. Before the farmer gets through investigating he will conclude that the tariff which makes the extortions of the twine trust possible is also responsible for hundreds of other impositions upon agricultural interests. We are glad the farmers is investigating.—Monroe Democrat.

The Latest Fraud.

A fraud who carries beautiful samples of ladies underwear is traveling through the state cheating milliners. He shows his samples to the ladies asks them to sell on commission and offers liberal terms, but exacts $11 prepayment of freight and cartage as an evidence of good faith. It is unnecessary to add that the goods, like the letter that she longed for, arrive an almighty long time coming.—Tradesman.

How They are Protected.

Carnegie, the Pennsylvania steel magnate, and friend of the republican system of "protection," has given notice that he will reduce wages twenty per cent, on July 1. This is the reward he has given persons in the event of Harrison's election. Hurrah for protection! It is quite likely workingmen will have enough of it before 1892.—Pontiac Democrat.

The New Discovery.

You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it is, that when once given a trial, we sing's New discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any throat, lung or chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. Amusing Acuteness.

Anecdotes of Three Men Whose Wit Was as Amusing as Their Check.

Nothing more acuteness is deemed essential to success in any direction, and a certain amount of it does materially aid in the accomplishment of a purpose. But of a person reputed "cute" it is advisable to beware, else one may find himself unexpectedly involved in difficulties of some kind.

While, for the greatest part, human acuteness is tinctured with base elements, it may be exercised without injury to the agent or object, merely to exemplify a good natured, laugh keen wit.

A young man under examination for admission to the University of Edinburgh, was asked if he studied logic, and replied affirmatively.

"You understand the difference between cause and effect?" inquired the professor.

"I do."

"Did you ever know an instance where the effect was in advance of the cause?"

"Yes, sir."

"Mention it," said the professor, in great amazement.

"Well, when a man pushes a wheelbarrow ahead of him."

On a certain occasion Rabelais desired to visit Paris, but was destitute of the means for so doing. He made up three packages and marked them "Poison" for the king, "Poison" for the dauphin, "Poison" for Monsieur——

His landlord saw them, reported the case to the authorities, and he was arrested and taken before the king. The contents of the packages were analyzed, found to be brick dust and harmless. Then Rabelais explained matters, and the king was highly amused by the ruse.

In days gone by few southern lawyers were more distinguished than Luther Martin. He was one day riding to Annapolis in a stage coach, when his only companion—a young man who had just been admitted to the bar—addressing him, said:

"Mr. Martin, you have been wonderfully successful in your profession. Are you willing to acquaint me with the secret of your success?"

"If you will pay my expenses during the few days that I shall remain in Annapolis."

"I will," was the earnest response.

"It is in this advice: Deny everything and insist upon proof."

At Annapolis, Mr. Martin enjoyed all the luxuries that a fine hotel could furnish, regardless of expense, and, when the time for his departure arrived passed the "bill"—of enormous proportions—to the young lawyer who was standing near. The latter merely glanced at it, and then referred it to Mr. Martin.

"Aren't you going to pay it?" Mr. Martin asked.

"Pay what?"

"This bill. Didn't you promise to defray my expenses while I was in Annapolis?"

"Yes, I did, sir," was the quiet reply, "I deny everything and insist upon proof."

The eminent lawyer paid his bill, and laughingly said to the young man: "You need a lesson further counsel from me."—Golden Days.

The "Thunderer's" Retraction.

Years ago the great London Times was a power in the land of England, and it has always been as stubborn as powerful. It was strong enough to be called the "thunderer." In its younger days the thunderer was not much of a thunderer. It made mistakes, of course, which others saw; but it would not acknowledge them. It assumed the virtues of a king, and persuaded itself that the Times could do no wrong. That was before childishness and Pigotts overcame it. It would never acknowledge a fault, or take back or correct anything once published. It was a great shock to publishing a report that a certain gentleman had committed suicide by hanging himself. The gentleman happened to be an English gentleman of considerable importance, and he objected to being slaughtered in that way. He called at the office of the thunderer and said that he objected. There was a dilemma for The Times. With an English love for fair play it wanted to be just, but it could not retract, and did not like to contradict its own report. For that once it promised to make a correction. The gentleman felt honored by the exception made in his case and went away satisfied. In the morning, along from the Walter press, the thunderer came to him with his coffee and rolls. He read the correction in his case. It said that there was a partial error in the statement that the gentleman had actually committed suicide by hanging. It said they had since learned the gentleman had been cut down by friends and had been resuscitated.—New Orleans Picayune.

Longevity of Insects.

It is well known that Sir John Lubbock has shown how long insects may live, when kept out of harm's way. The greatest age attained by any insect, so far as is known, is that reached by the queen of an ant (Formica fusca), which lived in his care until Aug. 5, 1888, when she must have been nearly 15 years old. Another queen of the same species died at the advanced age of over 13 years. He has now a queen of another kind of ant (Lasius niger), which is more than 9 years old, "and still lays fertile eggs which produce female ants."—New Orleans Picayune.

At a Large Depot.

Did you ever think what a place a depot in a city like Minneapolis is for the study of human nature, and what a world of interesting sights and scenes are to be had there? If one could become ubiquitous for an hour or two and stand a disinterested observer at all the railroad stations and become oblivious to everything else for the time being, what would be the impression? Why, if you look at the incoming trains as they stop, you would be tempted to think that everybody had run away from everywhere else and come to Minneapolis and brought his wife and daughter, or somebody else's wife or daughter, and taken a stroll up and all their nights and mains to getaway from the depot before they got armed. And this impression would not be lessened by the rush and scuffle between trains and the hackers and cabmen and draymen and hotel and boarding house drummers, as the latter grab and nab, and rush and push and yell and scramble to get baggage and passengers into their various conveyances, and the former dodging and shoving and rushing and tugging and pulling at goods and grips and other luggage, dogs, canary birds and babies.

But then your attention is drawn from all sides before they are out of sight by another such a crowd rushing and hurrying the other way, just as if everybody was running away from Minneapolis and going to other parts unknown, taking with them all the money, all the portable property, all the wives, children, dogs and canary babies of themselves and their neighbors, and more all being their very best to get out of the city before they were arrested. At the gate the keeper seems to think so too, as he gives each of them a punch as they pass out. This hurry and scuffle, hard on the do and hustle, is being repeated every hour in the day and many hours in the night. It is a kind of panorama, bewildering to the brain. No doubt a good many of these crowds both going and coming contain some runaway thieves, burglars, bank defaulters, elopers, etc., for the next thing that attracts the attention is the crowds of ever dreaded, ever welcome, never appreciated, never feared and never half respected shipping newsboys, crying, in every imaginable key and tone of voice: "Here's your Jour—nawy! All about the latest scandal!"—St. Paul Globe-Press.

Crime in Paris.

A species of crime which is increasing daily is that styled dynamite. Once it was Chambige, the sorry hero of the Alexandra tragedy, who set the ball rolling, and now his example is being followed by no end of disappointed lovers. Here again the cause is mainly due to the clemency of both juries and judges. The press, too, has much to answer for. Such is the condition of public morals that fashionable writers do not hesitate to treat these offenders as "martyrs to their affection." They are pitied, and, in fact, almost petted, and entertaining circumstances are voted them unanimously. Today we have another case of a young soldier running away from his regiment in the company of a concert hall beauty, and blowing out his brains after having shot her through the heart.

In this instance, however, the culprit displays humanity, for he had only wounded himself like Chambige, or he would infinitely have got off with little or no punishment. Love or what is called such—is made to cover a multitude of sins, and the vestal scamp who pretends to have lost his heart in spodiscomed like a boy. Morbid sentimentality is the vogue of the moment. It is played on the stage and pictured in novels. Everybody is affected with it, and under its baneful sway the sacred ties which form the foundation of virtue and morality are being rent and torn. The worst, then, the "love tragedy" has become quite a fad, and the heads of school boys and girls—not to mention adults, who ought to know better—are being turned topsy-turvy. But if laws were enforced as its makers intended it to be, a speedy improvement would unquestionably ensue.—London Globe.

Burning Rods.

"A curiosity," said Rev. A. S. Ladd, of Auburn, "that has struck me with much interest is this: A few days ago I visited a friend on Munjoy Hill, Portland, and I was much interested in one fact that my friend mentioned to me, and I think your readers will be somewhat interested also. My friend Mr. Alfred Tuckwell is an Englishman. He has recently bought a new house near the eastern promenade. "This part of the city has been a common for the passengers of cows and a playground for children and a sauntering place for lovers until within the last few years. But now it is being rapidly covered with pleasant dwellings and affords some of the most pleasant localities for homes in all the city. Now I come to the interesting incident. In hazellar and in his garden Mr. T. found a large bed of peat of excellent quality. During winter he digs it out of his cellar, and without any drying, mingled with coal, it burns readily and makes an excellent fuel. He dumps his ashes in where he takes his peat out, and when the supply is exhausted he proposes to cement the cellar. He thinks he has enough in his garden to last several years. I am not sure that a Yankee would have thought of burning such mud."—Lewiston Journal.

Enjoying a "Northeaster."

Pleasure on a Sloop Yacht During a Stormy Trip to Marblehead.

The day opened windless and foggy. In the middle of the forenoon the fog lifted and showed a sullen, ominous ceiling. By noon a breeze set in from the northeast.

"Let's get up the mainsail," said Benton.

"You ain't a-going to see today, be you?" asked Brown.

"Why not?"

"Don't you see the wind's dead ahead? We'll have a dead beat of it down to Marblehead, and if it comes on to blow I guess we'll get caught out and have to run for a lee, and the fog on the coast just as thick as wool."

"Oh, I guess not. At any rate there's a breeze, and we'll try it. We've got a chart and compass, and if it don't blow harder than this we're sure to fetch up inside Marblehead light before dark."

Reaching down to Apple Island through the main channel, the Frolic fetched a tack up to Stirley Gut, a tortuous channel between Deer Island and Point Shirley, which is impassable except for small craft. The tide was running out, while the long swell was rolling in. The two meeting on the bar made a mass of boiling foam that looked a great deal more savage than it was in reality, if not with a steady eye and a firm hand at the helm. The tackle was pretty short, and the Frolic, carrying a stiff weather helm and buryant as a duck, rapidly and gracefully shivered her sails and fell off on the other tack every time, leaping the sea and taking their very best to get out of the city before they were arrested. At the gate the keeper seems to think so too, as he gives each of them a punch as they pass out. No Occasion for Thanks.

One occasion when Tom Delehunt returned home from congress there was very little travel upon the railroad, and he was the only person of consequence on the train. When it stopped at his town there was an unusual crowd around the depot, and naturally enough he thought it had assembled to welcome him. So he stepped out on the platform and began:

"Gentlemen, I thank you for this hearty demonstration——"

"Demonstration! thunder!" said one of the crowd. "John Hall has just committed suicide in the depot!"—Washington Critic.

"Grabbers."

A youth was recently sent to jail for a month at Pillown, Ireland, for calling a man a "grabber." No less than fourteen young men were arrested for this "crime," while the man who had been thus stigmatized by them was also locked up as a witness, though he positively refused to testify against the prisoners. Although he persisted in his refusal, one of the prisoners was found guilty, while the others were discharged.—San Francisco Chronicle.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS.

EVENTS AND INCIDENTS THAT HAVE LATELY OCCURRED.

An Interesting Summary of the More Important Doings of Our Neighbors—Crimes, Casualties, and General News Notes.

Four miles of new steel rails have been put down between Petoskey and Clarion.

Traverse City parties have had an exhibition a sturgeon weighing over 100 pounds.

Five million dollars in property, and forty business blocks were destroyed by fire at Seattle, Washington territory, last Friday.

Dr. C. G. Chaddock, assistant physician at the Northern Asylum, who has had a year's leave of absence in Europe, has returned.

Material is being put upon the ground for the extensive repairs and additions that are to be made in the baptist church at Traverse City.

Three times last week it was found that Traverse City had no place to hold public gatherings that would accommodate all who wanted to go.—Herald.

George L. Thurston of Central Lake secured the prize offered by the Detroit "Tribune for the best ghost story. There was a large number of competitors.

A dispatch received by the officials of the G. R. & I. R. R. states that owing to the recent disasters in Pennsylvania, all arrangements made for the Gettsburg celebration will be canceled.

When wheat went up to a dollar last fall flour followed it surprisingly quick. Since then there has been a big decline in the price of wheat, but flour, it is claimed, refuses to come down to its old figure. It's a poor rule that don't work both ways.

The heavy frosts last week did great damage throughout the state and in southern Michigan especially, where all the tender vegetables of all kinds were further advanced there than here. The crop of early strawberries will be unmistakably light.

The sixth annual encampment of the Michigan department Sons of Veterans at St. Joseph, was the most successful in the history of the order in this state. The weather though cool, was dry and pleasant and the attendance was much larger than at any previous encampment.

C. D. Hampton, postmaster at Harbor Springs, has been removed because his son, C. S. Hampton, took active part in the campaign last fall. Harrison made a slip of the pen in writing his letter of acceptance, he intended saying, "civil service is dead—d; its the offices we want."—Cheboygan News.

Mrs. Helen M. Middaugh of Elmira, went down to Mancelona on the morning train last Thursday, went to Mrs. A. L. Wilcox, a dress maker, was measured for a new dress. She started to go to the door and fell dead. Mrs. Middaugh was the wife of W. W. Middaugh of the Commercial hotel at Elmira, and was 55 years of age.

Can't you fellows up at Charlevoix give us a little railroad news? Is Cherrie in New York? Is everything moving right along?—Breeze. That's right Al. Stir those fellows up, We'as all along the line have done our fall duty in this matter, and its about time that we had some encouragement in the way of decinite information. We want that railroad, and want it b-a-a-d.—Kalkaska Leader.

Prof. Wadsworth, a mining expert, who has charge of the state mining school at Houghton, and is now state geologist, was at Harbor Springs last week accompanied by Wm. Crosby, and in company with Messrs. Eaton and Clark made as close an investigation of the supposed "iron region" as could be done with the instruments he had. Being a very conservative man he was guarded in his opinions but was so favorably impressed with the outlook that he will return as soon as possible or send a man, and make a thorough investigation. There is either iron in the hills, or else the indications are no guide.—Democrat.

The railroad officials were up the other day, and decided to build a new depot on the triangle at the foot of Roe's dock, as mentioned in these columns a couple of weeks ago. They will be up in a day or two with the company's builder, and lay out the plans for the station, which we hope will be something better than the house burned last fall.—Harbor Springs department Petoskey Democrat.

The Barry County Democrat, sensibly remarks: People take the papers for the news they convey, and they like to read of the escapes and misfortunes other mortals fall into, but when scrapes and misfortunes happen to them, and the papers locate in their case, they their ears tingle and they rise up in indignation and curse the paper. There is lots of human nature in his man nature.

"Whenever a man is successful" says LeMars Sentinel "it matters not in what, he will be hated. If his success is in the wrong direction he will be hated by the better class of community, and he should be. If he succeeds in good work he will be hated by the bad men and envied by the conservative. When you are sailed for good work, stand by your guns. Woe unto you when all men speak well. The aggressive is worth a thousand 'don't care' fellows, ten thousand who will sacrifice principle and let needed work go undone for fear of enmity. Such men are cowards and stumbling blocks. They deserve to be left behind in the race of life."

Grandma Bennett, of Roxand, Eaton county, has lived to see her 90th birthday. In her younger days she was a very hard working woman and her life has been a very useful one. She has ever been ready to minister unto the sick and feed the hungry. She brought up a family of ten children, nine of whom are living. She has 43 grand children, 34 of whom are living. She also has 34 great grand children, 29 of whom are living, and the greater number of them living where they can visit her often. To all appearance she has strength and vitality to reach her 100th birthday. Her memory is remarkable as she can can talk intelligently upon almost any subject, the bible being her principal theme.—Charlotte Tribune.

The latest move in the new celebrated Moiles Brothers' saw mill case is the sale of the mill for customs dues by the Canadian authorities, which occurred Thursday in the Canadian Soo. The mill was seized by the customs officers for dues amounting to $8,500, and the sale announced by virtue of the building was so lively—indeed there were only two bidders, Stephen Baldwin, of Detroit, bid $5,000 and Henry Colclough, of Milwaukee, bid $5,000 and got the mill. Mr. Cloclough is said to be an uncle of the Moiles. He is a wealthy man. The mill is worth in the neighborhood of $50,000. It is said that with the duty added it will cost him as it is now, the Buffalo mortgagees will have to encounter more irritated legal difficulties to get their money. The fight goes bravely on.—Soo Times.

☞We notice a new departure in the treatment of disease that promises to revolutionize the medicine business. It consists in the collection of the specifics used by noted specialists of Europe and America and bringing them within the reach of all. For instance, the treatment perused by special physicians who treat Indigestion, stomach and liver troubles only, was obtained and prepared. The treatments of other physicians, celebrated for curing catarrh, were procured, and so on till these incomparable cures now include disease of the lungs, kidneys, female weakness, rheumatism, nervous debility and piles. Originated and used by specialists, being a positive cure for each disease, these preparations are the best remedies procurable. We advise all to send 2 two cent stamps to the Chase Medical Specialty Co. 70 West Adams St., Chicago, Ill. and receive by return mail their interesting hand book. 16be

Mrs. F. J. Stone returned Sunday morning from attending the state W. C. T. U. convention at Bay City, and reports having had a very pleasant and profitable time.

Dr. Willard returned home on Friday last from his visit to Chicago. Almost his first act was to slaughter the two turtle, who had been imprisoned in the swill tub to fatten up for the occasion.

The Charlevoix County Fair is organized for the purpose of booming the products of northern Michigan, and is not an individual or local enterprise. Every resident of Charlevoix and adjoining counties should interest themselves in this opportunity to get together the products of their industry, and show the visitors from abroad who attend the fair that we are an industrious and prosperous people.

Mrs. Mark Rogers has a fuchsia with 226 buds and blossoms on it. The plant is nearly three feet high, and is a perfect vision of floral beauty.

The premium lists for the Charlevoix county fair will be issued about July 1st. Look about and see what you can exhibit that will add interest to the fair and help boom your county.

Miss Maud Loveday will leave Denver on Wednesday next on route for home. She will visit at Iowa and Chicago, and is expected here about the 20th inst. Miss Loveday will remain about six weeks, and then return to fulfill another year's engagement at Wolff Hall, where she has charge of the primary department.

Wm. Parkes for the past two weeks has been renovating and enlarging his dwelling home by raising it and joining on the store building which he moved from the corner of Water and Bridge streers. This makes a large and commodious residence.

Those who eat strawberries this year will have to pay a good price for them, as the first are all killed with frost, and other fruit more or less injured.

The schooner Cora, of Benton Harbor, is loading 2,500 bushels of potatoes for S. Hull & Co. The high price of 12 cents is being paid for Burbank and 10 for Beauty of Hebron.

The Pilgrim was invited to present and read an article before the Western Michigan Press Association, but was forced to decline the honor for the reason that he will have to stay at home, stick to his job, job press and cut paste until we have a railroad. After we get the road we hope to be able to attend the press meeting and eat pie and frosted cake and drink cooling be—verages with the gang. Owing to the gen eral depression of business we are doing more work and hiring less help than previously. We should like to kick up a little saw dust down in Muskegon with Ren Barker though.

A Sound Legal Opinion.

E. Bainbridge Munday Esq., County Atty., Clay Co., Texas, says: "Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with malarial fever and jaundice but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life."

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxon, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: He positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters.

This great remedy will ward off, as well as cure all malarial diseases, and for kidney, liver and stomach disorders stands unequaled. Price 50c, and $1. at F. G. Hines & Co.'s drug store. 6

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

REV. T. P. DAVIS of Philadelphia has been elected successor to Bishop Harris recently deceased.

LUKE JOHNSON is another old crippled soldier, who has to thank the republican party for his removal from office of postmaster at Caseville. M. C. Gregory gets the office.—Port Austin Post.

COMMENCEMENT exercises of the Michigan State Normal School, at Ypsilanti, will commence Sunday June 23, with the meeting of the Christian Association and continue in the various features through Wednesday, June 26.

A SOO special says the canal authorities have knowledge that some boats have had their marks changed so to endeavor to get through the canal, drawing more water than the regulations permit, and that all crafts are now being measured and marked at the locks.

The Scripps League of newspaper publishers have chartered the magnificent steamer City of Rome, the largest passenger steamer afloat, to carry their expedition of workingmen to the Paris Exposition, and have advanced $5,000 to bind the contract. The City of Rome will sail from New York July 24th.

PENSION Commissioner Tanner has succeeded in getting several very brilliant falls out of the surplus already. During the last administration it was the pension commissioner who was a "total wreck." There is reason to believe that under this administration the poor old surplus will leave its bones bleaching on a lee shore.—Chicago News.

THE excellence of the railway mail service since it has been "restored to its old time efficiency" by Wanamaker and Bell is illustrated by some experience of a prominent Michigan business man who writes protesting against this marvelous restored efficiency. He says the Michigan mails are in a fearful state. Some three weeks ago several very important papers in a heavy timber deal were mailed and never reached him. A letter plainly directed to him at East Saginaw was sent to Au Sable and another to Petoskey. He closes his letter by observing that the reform in the railway mail service is a sham. —Washington Correspondence.

DAY by day the horrors of the Jonestown calamity become more apparent. The bodies of thousands of the dead have been removed from those places where they found lodgment and still the work of removal goes on. It is now thought that the number of killed and injured will not fall far short of eight or ten thousand. If we can judge anything from the reports that come from the scene of the disaster, the sight there begins description. The wild rush of waters was no respector of persons. Rich and poor, high and low were borne before the onward sweep to find a common grave. In all probability the bodies of many never will be recovered, the terrible flood having carried them miles upon miles down the the Ohio river. The thought of the disaster is a terrible thing for contemplation and it is to be hoped that the terrible horror may never again be repeated.

"The Land of the Midnight Sun" must indeed be an interesting portion of the earth's surface to visit if we may judge from the extremely interesting and beautifully illustrated article about that region that appears in Demorest's Monthly Magazine for July, and that the modes of travel in that far-off country are ages behind the times is clearly shown by turning to another article in the same number of this valuable Family Magazine. In a most charming vein or we are told of the "Comforts of Modern Railway Travel" in our own country, and the illustrations give us a comprehensive idea of the luxury one may find in one of our palaces on wheels, from the kitchen to the boudoir. "Birds in our homes," by Olive Thorne Miller also handsomely illustrated, will please all lovers of our feathered friends; "Aids to Beauty," a series of articles commenced in this number, will certainly be of great benefit to those wish to enhance their personal charms. The stories in the July number are particularly attractive and summery, and the beautiful "Elsie" frontispiece is a study in colors well worthy of framing. Published by W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York.

The House committee on the judiciary has reported favorably on the bill of Mr. Wachtel "to prevent crime or attempt to commit, or procure to be committed, the crime of murder and manslaughter in certain cases." The idea of the bill was prompted by the murder of Mrs. Latimer, of Jackson, by her son R. Irving Latimer, the motive being to succeed to her fortune. It provides that any person convicted of the murder or manslaughter, or of attempting or procuring the crime of murder to be committed on "any ancestor, next of kin or other person, through whom such convicted person might inherit or recover lands or goods, by descent, devise or distribution shall, in addition to the other penalties for the crime to be pronounced by the court upon conviction, "absolutely forfeit all such right of inheritance from all benefit of devise or bequest in the will of such person whose life has been destroyed or attempted and all benefit by distribution of the estate of such person to next of kin."

A Dealer Young Brakeman.

It was only a few years ago that a green country boy applied to Division Superintendent Hitchcock, of the Galesburg division of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, for work. Mr. Hitchcock could set him at nothing but breaking on a freight train, and disliked to give such work to him because of the lad's youthful appearance and the dangers beetting that vocation. The boy, however, pleaded until he secured the employment. On one of his first trips, if not indeed the very first, it chanced that his train met another freight train at a station where the side track was not long enough to accommodate either. The conductors were discussing the question which train should back up to a point where they could pass, when the green boy ventured to suggest that neither should back up; that they could pass by means of the short side track if they worked it right. This occasioned a good deal of laughter on the part of the older and more experienced trainmen, but the boy insisted he could work the trains by each other.

"Well, how would you go about it?" asked one of the conductors, confident that the lad would soon be up a stump. The boy took up a stick and traced in the sand a diagram of how he would do it.

"By thunder," or worse, said the conductor, "I believe that'll do it."

They tried it and it did do it. To day every trainman in America probably knows how to "saw by" two long trains on a short side track, but until that inexperienced country boy worked it out of his noddle the practice on the old "Q" road had been for trains either to avoid meeting at such points or, when they chanced to meet, for one of them to run back to a longer side track.

That boy is in Washington today. His name is C. H. Chappell, and he is the general manager of the Chicago, Alton and St. Louis road.—Washington Post.

Reasonable and Human.

Hours of labor are exacted in certain employments, which cannot be maintained without ruining the constitutions and forbidding the home pleasures of the hapless people obliged to comply with them. The Vienna strike and the capitulation of the tramway company furnish a lesson. Public associations should consider, before they are compelled, whether their dealings with those who serve them are equitable, reasonable and human. It may well happen that arrangements must often be continuous, that good men cannot be spared, and that there must be long spells of work. In that case an honorable directorate will establish a system of relays and relieds, it will not wear its personnel out body and soul, as though they were brute beasts; though, indeed, animals are constantly treated better than human beings, by reason of their marketable value. We would invite all omnibus, railway, tramway and public societies generally to study these occurrences at Vienna in the light of the certain truth that it is better to do justice spontaneously than to have justice forced upon you. The best work and the biggest dividends are not got by screwing the last drop of strength out of willing and necessitous creatures. There must be kindliness, consideration and fair play between employers and employed if the world's affairs are to go on pleasantly and successfully.—London Standard.

The Opium Habit in Washington.

One of the leading physicians of the national capital remarked to me today that if a brazed wen on the forehead of every woman who used opium in some form, society here would go to pieces. He attributes this frightful condition of affairs to the dissipated life led here by the women of the upper tendom. The endless round of balls and receptions is such a strain upon them that they must seek relief in some way. They begin by taking a soothing sirup, as a rule, to put them to sleep. This after a while fails to act, then paregoric is restored to. From this it is only a step to pure opium and absolute ruin. Some people buy the crude gum and eat it regularly every day, while others buy laudanum and drink it in quarter ounces, half ounce and even ounce portions. And then there are Dover's powders and morphine pills, both of which act much more especially the latter. The habit seems more of a disease than a vice, for the whole nature of the victim undergoes a complete revolution, moral, mental and physical. After a short time the victim will sacrifice honor, friends and family for the fatal drug. There is no cure, for even the asylums fail to effect a permanent cure except in rare instances.—Washington Cor. Pittsburg Times.

BUILDING ASSOCIATIONS.

How They Are Operated and Loans Are Made—How to Buy a Home.

The persons composing a building and loan association agree to pay into their treasury a certain sum, at fixed periods, on each share that they own, until their shares through such payments and the accumulated profits reach their par value, or, as it is technically termed, "mature." The stated payments (called "dues"), their frequency, and the par value of the stock vary. The general rule is that $1 shall be paid on every share once a month until a par of $250 is reached. When the shares "mature" the assets in the treasury are divided among the shareholders. Just as fast as the money is paid in it is offered in the shape of loans to the members—and to the members only—the security taken being a mortgage on real estate and an assignment to the association of the borrower's stock.

The amount which a member is entitled to borrow equals the par value of his or her shares. Thus, in an association where the par value is $250, a member who wants $1,000 must own five shares. As every member has an equal right to become a borrower, the disposition of the loans is made by putting the money up at auction, from time to time, and awarding the loan to that member who will give the highest premium above the regular interest rate. The Building and Loan association laws provide that the acceptance of these premiums shall not constitute usury. In order that the dues and interest shall be paid regularly, the by laws provide that they shall be received only by the secretary, and by him only at the stated meetings; and there is a small fine for non-payment, which is increased from meeting to meeting, a delinquency for a certain period causing the forfeiture of the stock, or giving ground for the foreclosure of a mortgage.

The interest is paid monthly, and the interest money, with the dues and any other receipts, goes into the treasury to be loaned at once. It is apparent, therefore, that a building and loan association whose money is in demand not only receives interest constantly on the dues paid in by all the members, but that it compounds this interest monthly. Herein lies the chief secret of the profitableness of this kind of investment.

It is quite as easy to show by figures the economy of laying one's house with the assistance of a building and loan association as compared with paying rent. The following statement is only given as a form of comparison; every prospective borrower can change the figures to suit his own locality.

C and D occupy houses worth $3,000 each (lot $600, and building, $2,400). C is a tenant paying $25 a month. D, with $600 in cash, has borrowed $2,400 on twelve shares of a building and loan association, and built his house. Supposing that D's shares mature in twelve years, their accounts at the end of that period will stand thus:

C has paid out	$3,600 in rent, and has nothing to show for it.
D has paid out:
Monthly dues	$1,728
Interest	1,728
Premium, 3 per cent	72
Search	50
Taxes	150
Insurance	100
Interest on value of lot	600
Total	$4,428

The neighborhood must be a very incentive one where the increased value of the property will not more then offset the cost of repairs. We find, then, that D owns his premises by paying out only $828 more than C who at the end of the period names has nothing to show for his money.

Loans are made to members either to purchase houses already erected, to build houses or to remove existing encumbrances. If a member borrows to build a new house, the money is not paid over to him in bulk, but is paid over to the contractor, on the audit of the owner and the association's building committee as the work proceeds.

One of the great advantages of these associations as mediums of persons of small means is, that they can safely lend very close to the appraised values. —W. A. Linn in Scribner's.

Josh Billings' Philosophy.

If I was called upon tew tell who was the bravest man that ever lived, I would say it was him who never told a lie.

The meanest thing that cuy man ever followed for a bizness is making money.

Everybodddy luvs tew feel that they are ov sum importance in this world; even a purper looks forward tew the day ov his phuneral as the time that he has got tew be noticed.

If yu hav a spirited and noble boy, appeal to his generosity; if yu hav a weasy rum, distrust some yours ago, and, in accordance with the rural custom, he did a great deal of "visiting around."

He spent one night at the house of an old farmer who had a daughter famous, not for her beauty, but for her lack of it. To enumerate her peculiarities of face and figure would be to give a catalogue of imperfections. Those who regard bulk as a mark of beauty, who think a head of red hair, cut short and parted at the side, is an attraction in a young lady, would have been charmed with "Becky Ann."

When our somewhat fastidious young teacher was introduced to this paragon, her uncomeliness was increased by the fact that she was bare footed and wore an inharmonious gown of green and yellow calico.

Naturally enough his amazed gaze was fixed often on Miss Becky Ann during the evening. When he retired to his room for the night, he was followed by her father, who almost stupefied him by saying, with perfect gravity:

"Look here, I'm going to tell you something I reely think you'd orter to know, or it may save you from raisin' any false hopes to have 'em dashed to the ground. I seen yer eatin' sleep's eyes at my Becky Ann all the evenin', an' it's my bounden duty to tell ye that she's spoke for by Jarvis Sipes. Sorry for ye, young man, but Jarvis has got ahead of you this time."—Youth's Companion.

Bequeas.

The new teacher in some rural districts, if he is young and unmarried, is often supposed to have matrimonial designs on the young ladies of the district, no matter how innocent he may be in your statement, eh! Oh, well, that's all right, that happiness to older men than you, every day. I have noticed that you have a very positive way of flinging a decision where older men state an opinion, and you frequently make a positive assertion where older men merely express a belief. But never mind; you are young. You will know less as you grow older. "Don't I know it? you will know more!" Heaven forfend, my boy. No, indeed! I mean that you will know less. You will never know more than you do now; never. If you live to be ten thousand year old, you will never again know so much as you do now. No hoary headed man, whose long and studious years were spent in reading men and books, ever knew so much as a boy of your age. A girl of 15 knows about as much, but then she gets over it sooner and more easily. "Does it cause a pang, then, to get rid of early knowledge?" Ah, my boy, it does. Pulling eye teeth and molars will seem like pleasant recreation alongside of shedding off great solid slabs and layers of wisdom and knowledge that now press upon you like geological strata. "But how are you to get rid of all this superincumbent wisdom?" Oh, easily enough, my boy; just keep on atring it; that's the best way. It won't stand constant use, and it disintegrates rapidly on exposure to air.—Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

Making Match Boxes.

Few are there who, when traveling in Sweden in the home of the land stickors, leave the fjords, rocks and fir for a day, and trace the Swedish match back to its source. And yet it would more than repay a day's sojourn at Jonkoping to visit the factory whence proceeds not a small part of the light of the world. The latest novelty is an enormous engine which daily produces 1,000,000 boxes of Swedish matches. This wonderful machine receives the raw material—namely, blocks of wood—at one end, and, after a while, gives up at the other the matches neatly arranged in their boxes, ready to be dispatched to the uttermost ends of the world.—London Tid Bits.

Advice to a Young Man.

Annual Commencement.

The commencement exercises of the Charlevoix High School, class of '89, will be held at Lewis' opera house, on Tuesday evening next, beginning at 8 o'clock, p. m. The patrons and citizens generally are invited to attend. The exercises will consist of music by the classes of '89, '90, and '91, essays by the graduates, addresses, presentation of diplomas, etc.

To insure the accommodation of all who may attend, four hundred free tickets will be issued; these will be on distribution at Cochran's drug store, and at the Charlevoix Cigar Mfg. Co.'s store, on Monday, June 17th, at 10 o'clock a. m., where they can be obtained on application, until the number is exhausted. Members of the school will obtain tickets of their teachers. It is desirable not to encourage the attendance of the younger children.

Friends desiring to present flowers to any of the class are requested to present them, labeled, to the ushers, on entering, or leave them at the hall in the afternoon.

Automatic Device for Stopping Trains.

An exhibition was given on the Old Colony railroad, in the presence of a number of railroad men, of an invention for automatically stopping trains. The form of the device consists of an inclined plane beside the track, which is raised into position whenever the danger signal near it is set in warning, and the inclined plane forces up a lever on the engine and sets the brake. A portable form of the device, made of wood and weighing less than ten pounds, may be placed on the track at a moment's notice in case of danger, and will stop any train passing it. The cost is only twenty-five cents. The tests were very satisfactory.—Boston Transcript.

Polluted Ice.

Users of ice must read up on the results of investigations of Keblin, Pasquere and Prudden, showing that ice taken from polluted streams is not purified by freezing. Keblin tells us that if ice from streams containing putrefactable matter or sewage it will produce diarrhœa. In 1873, at Rye beach, an epidemic broke out in a large hotel, and was traced at last to ice taken from an adjacent pond. The water of this pond is surrounded by foul and stinking with putrescent matter. Organic matter, as well as bacteria, exist diminished by any ordinary degree of cold. Too many of our streams are the recipients of sewage. This is the ice age of civilization, and we must have it pure.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In Honor of Burns.

A Burns inaugurate to celebrate the birthday of the poet is an annual custom in Leslie, Fifeshire. At the late celebration twenty-four plowmen, merchants and farmers, mounted and dressed to represent the principal characters in Burns' works, paraded the street headed by a voluntee band and accompanied by a crowd of people. Burns himself appeared in blue coat, buff breeches and knee breeches; while other characters were from Orthodox Souter Johnnie, Auld Nick, Tam o' Shanter, Souter Tam, Tam Lin, Tam o' Bothwellhaugh.—New York Home Journal.

He Got Away With It.

A short old man in a coat with a long gray beard and an armful of Christmas trees through Fulton market at noon and stopped at a stand of grapes were displayed.

"Here you are!" yelled the proprietor, pointing to open baskets of Concords, Catawbas and Malagas. The small man stopped, hesitated, looked longingly at the grapes, furtively pulled off a bunch in a basket of Concords, hesitated again, looked longingly at the Catawbas, and began on the Malagas.

The fruit vender, who was with a customer, now looked at the man's actions with astonishment.

"How much for grapes, mister?" asked the man.

"Forty cents a basket."

"Forty cents!" said the man, as he put the basket back and turned away two more Concords.

"Are you a wholesale dealer?"

"No."

"You a vineyard, maybe?"

"No."

"Where did you learn to be such a hog?"

"Well, see here, old feller, I'm not about a pound and a half of grapes, and I'm not the man that wants to buy them, but I'm the man that's going to buy, so you don't want to go around here."—New York Sun.

The Cane's Use.

WHAR' THE HAND O' GOD IS SEEN.

Do I like the city. Stranger, 'tain't likely that I would;
'Tain't likely that a ranger from the border ever could Get accustomed to the flurry an' the loud, unearthly noise;
Everybody in a hurry, men and wimmin, gals an' boys,
All a-rushin like the nation 'mid the rumble an' the jar,
Jes' as if their souls' salvation hung upon their gettin thar'.

Like it? No. I love to wander
'Mid the vales and mountains green,
In the border land out yonder,
Whar' the hand o' God is seen.

Nothin' yar but bricks and mortar, towerin' over head so high,
Than you never see a quarter o' the overhangin' sky;
Not a tree or grassy meddor, not a runnin' brook in sight,
Nothin' but the hillside shadder makin' gloom o' heaven's light.
Even the birds ar' all imported from away across the sea—
Faces never me all distorted with the hand o' mistery.

Like it? No. I love to wander
'Mid the vales an' mountains green,
In the border land out yonder,
Whar' the hand o' God is seen.

Reckin' railroad trains above you, streets by workmen all defaced,
Everybody tryin' to shove you in the gutter in their haste.
Cars and carts an' wagons rumblin' through the streets with deafenin' roar,
Drivers yellin', cursin', growlin', yo' like imps from Sheol's e'yore;
Factories jun' in the chorus, helpin' of the din to swell;
Auctioneers in tones sonorous lyin' 'bout the goods they sell.

Like it? No. I love to wander
'Mid the vales and mountains green,
In the border land out yonder,
Whar' the hand o' God is seen.

Yes, I love the western border; pine trees wavin' in the breeze
Rocks piled up in rough disorder; birds a-singin' everywhere;
Jes' a-playin' in their gladness; elk a-feedin in the glen;
Not a trace o' pain or sadness campin' on the trail o' men.

Brooks o' crystal clearness flowin' o'er the rocks ga' lessy flowers
In their tinted beauty growin' in the mountain dells an' bowers.

Fairer pictur' the Creator
Never threw on earthly screen,
Than this lovely home o' nature'
Whar' the hand o' God is seen.

FROEBEL AND HIS WORK.

Life of the Founder of the Kindergarten School System.

The founder of kinder gartens, Friedrich Froebel, was born in Oberweisbach, Germany, in 1782. He was not a happy child, for his mother died when he was only 9 months old, leaving him to the care of a harsh and unsympathetic father, whose duties as pastor of a church seemed to leave him no time to attend to the motherless boy. Left to his own resources, the naturally thoughtful child dwelt much within himself, and learned from his own needs how to sympathize with childish thoughts and feelings.

When he was 10 years old he was taken into his uncle's home, where he remained for five years, enjoying the first real happiness of his life. He developed a deeply religious spirit that was yet in harmony with nature, whose workings he delighted to study. When a student in the University of Jena he became dissatisfied with the methods of teaching, feeling that they did not produce those mental results without which facts are of little use.

He decided to become an architect and as a means of self support took a few private pupils at Frankfort. It was here that he became acquainted with Gruner, the director of the Model Normal school, who quickly discovered in the young man remarkable talent for teaching. "Froebel, you must be a schoolmaster," he said, and offered him a position in his school. This was accepted by Froebel, who soon realized that in the school room he had found his proper vocation. He wrote to his brother that he felt "as if he had long been a teacher and born to that special employment; as if he had family found his native element; he was like a bird in the air or a fish in the sea."

But he was constantly seeking for better methods in his work. He felt that they should follow the laws of mental development, and so studied these with the suggestions of various philosophic instructors. As his ideas unfolded he began to apply them in a little school at Keilhau, where his brother's children were gathered with a few other pupils. Ten years more passed before he had completed his system, which he called the "kindergarten," or child garden, a term descriptive of the natural growth it was meant to foster.

Although Froebel's system is rarely mentioned except in connection with elementary training it was elaborated by him to include the entire school life. It has not yet been widely adopted for older pupils, but its influence seems to be growing.—Chicago News.

A Godsend to English Farmers.

Wire barbed fencing has proved to be a godsend to English farmers. They are using it around their fields quietly to annoy and prevent fox hunters from trampling their crops. They say nothing of the sort, of course, only keep on putting up the barbs as a convenient and cheap fence. The horses and hounds are often injured by these fences. There is no law to prevent the use of the wire, and not likely to be. So a revolution is wrought in the manners of English barristers and parsons and gentlemen by the bits of twisted wire invented for us on our western prairies, where timber is scarce.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Deceptive

Plyden on the Hair.

The best way to avoid scalp troubles, hair falling out and premature baldness is to use nothing but clear water on the head. When you go to a barber do not let him put Bear's grease, vaseline or similar substances on your hair. These are more likely to cause trouble than to do good. In cases where dandruff, scald head or any scalp disease appears, soap of good quality should be used in the water with which the head is cleaned. Cold water, followed by a good rubbing, is exhilarating to the scalp and is usually all the attention that the hair needs. Dandruff is an exudation from the pores of the scalp that spreads and dries, forming a scale or scurf. It is caused in nearly all cases by a bad condition of the blood, a person affected with scrofula almost always has dandruff. The proper use of a fine tooth comb is likely to irritate the scalp, and cause dandruff to appear. In cases of this kind, after washing the head, apply a little vaseline to soften the skin. If the hair falling out, and a stimulant is wanted, rub the scalp with brandy with a little salt in it.

Baldness is due to several causes, heredity is one of them. Members of some families get bald early, while in others the hair remains until old age. Scrofula is a frequent cause of baldness, and illness, particularly fevers, causes baldness. Excessive brain work is responsible for many bald heads, and worries have certainly cannot be too often condemned. Whenever I get into a railroad car I take off my hat. I don't put on a tight fitting skull cap either. The hair needs air, and the friction of the cap is the reason that there are more bald men than women in the world. The fact that women wear hats that admit the air to the top of their heads, while men's hats exclude the air. Baldness among men is undoubtedly increasing, and is due to the fact that men do more head work and take less rest and recreation now than formerly.—E. B. Foote, M. D., in New York Mail and Express.

An Actress Talks About Hair.

I do nothing to my hair, except comb it and wash it. I believe in plenty of sun naturally. My maid gives my head a shampoo occasionally, and brushes and combs my hair every day. I never use oil or any of the things that are said to make the hair glossy. When I am playing parts in which I wear my hair down, as in "The Quiet and the Dead," my hair needs washing and combing very often. When I dress my hair I seldom put it up twice the same. I arrange it just as the fancy takes me. I never twist it so tightly as to injure it. Crimping and curling with hot iron injures the hair, and I guess the patent mixtures do more harm than good. Nearly all American women have good hair, if they only take care of it. Their hair is heavier and better than that of most European ladies. English women have splendid heads of hair, but it is coarse and heavy in texture. American women on the contrary have soft, fluffy hair. The soft American hair is the prettiest, and it may be due to the superior variety of styles than the hair of foreign women. Dodging the fashion and changing its color has gone out now, and nearly everybody wears her own hair.—Estelle Clayton in New York Mail and Express.

Bass Makart's Models.

In the painting of the late Viennese painter Makart, two models served for male figures often occur. In his "Diana," his "Charles V Entering Antwerp" and many others these figures of surpassing beauty occur again and again. The originals of the pictures are now living in Vienna. They are the two daughters of Herr Klinkosch, a leading gold and silversmith of the city. Klinkosch, the father, is an expert in his profession. Most of his work consists in designing presents for the royal family and the government, as gifts to foreign ambassadors. Makart was his intimate friend, and, receiving permission, painted his daughters as the heroines of his great paintings. Instantly they became the rage, and the Viennese court, usually so punctilious regarding questions of birth, freely welcomed the beauties immortalized by the brush of the painter. It is some years now since Makart died, but the beautiful Klinkosch sisters, although a little passé, are still seen in Vienna society. They are both unmarried.—New York Telegram.

Queen Victoria's Sensible Shoes.

A shoemaker from London, who worked in the shop where Queen Victoria's shoes are made, being interviewed by a reporter, said: "I suppose the queen's number is at least a six, and she wears a very sensible shoe, long and broad, with a low heel and plenty of room at her toes. She has several bunions and corns, you know. I suppose her common sense ideas about shoes didn't come to her until late in life. I remember making a pair of tall shoes for the Princess Beatrice just before I left. She has a foot something like her mother's. It is just as tightly as to injure it. HOW HORSES ACT IN BATTLE.

Some Remarkable Instances of Equine Intelligence.

"It is remarkable how quickly horses adapt themselves to the military service," said Capt. Cox to a reporter. "Every artilleryman knows that they learn the bugle calls and the evolutions quicker than the men do, as a rule. For one thing they soon acquire a uniform gait, which is about the same as the "route step" or the usual marching step. If the horses did not acquire this they would be rattling, jolting and rattling to the rear, and finally they would be varying distances between the different arms of the service—that is, between the infantry and the cavalry, artillery and the commanders and their escorts.

"In the drills in the artillery service the horses will themselves preserve their alignment as well as the infantry. I shall always remember one illustration of this trait which I noticed at an exciting and critical period of a battle. In order to save some of our infantry from being surrounded and captured I quickly mounted the cannoneers on the guns and put the whole battery at a dead gallop across a field of 600 yards about half a mile wide. I was quite occupied at the time, but when we were half way across the field I noticed the army, and for a moment I was lost in admiration of the magnificent picture. Every driver was plying whip and spur, the great guns were rocking and thundering over the uneven sod, and every horse, reeking with foam and full of animation and excitement, was straining every muscle as he galloped forward, yet it seemed to me that a straight line drawn along in front of them would have touched the heads of the lead horses in front of the six guns. I had no artillery charge, one of the most thrilling sights in the evolutions of war.

"It is surprising how quickly they learn the bugle calls. After we had been in the service some little time we could hear a bugle call and wait for the man, as the bugle blew some one else would perform the duty. It is a pretty question for you to ask, I said. "How in thunder do you know how to make the calls I know," he said, 'but my horse knows.' Let the first note of the bugle call for water call be blown and there will be a terrific stamping, kicking and neighing. Once, in a terrible storm, our horses and those of several other batteries broke loose, and there was a wild rush among the artillerymen to get horses in the morning. All was excitement and hurry and we were hard to get, but when I ordered the bugler to mount a squad and blow the call for water the horses all made such a mad rush for the stream that the men could hardly get out of the way quickly enough.

"When it comes to battle a horse seems to know everything that is going on, but he does his duty nobly and seems to be in his element. He enters into the spirit of the battle like a human being. He knows no fear of death, and it is singular that if his mate is shot down he will turn to look at him and seem pleased. A horse in my battery was once struck by a piece of shell, which split his tail so that one side was loose. The driver turned him loose, but he walked up by the side of the gun and waited for the firing, and when a shot was fired would look away in the direction of the enemy as if to see the effect of the shot. When a shell would burst near by he would calmly turn and look at it. When he saw his own team going back for ammunition he ran to his own place and galloped back to the caisson with the rest. When the lieutenant pulled his rein to put in another horse he looked at the other one sorrowfully while he was being harnessed up, and when he seemed to realize that there was no further use for him he lay down and died. The lieutenant strongly asserted that he died of a broken heart.

"At the time that Adams', Jackson's and Preston's brigades charged one at Murfreesboro some officer was killed and the brigades were driven back. Its the fallen officer's horse had not been taught to retreat and he did not. He just came at full speed through the battery, and I tell you he looked simply grand. He was a large, fine animal, his nostrils were dilated wide, his eyes fairly blazed, and he clutched the bit with his teeth as he came on. He came like the wind, and with his saddle flaps flying he looked as if he were flying himself instead of running. Everybody gave him a wide berth, and I called to the infantry that I would give $100 to the man who would catch him, but no one tried it, and he is running yet for all I know of him."—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Hindoo Settlement.

The relatives are not the only members of a Hindoo family. There is also the priest, for every well appointed house has its shrine, at which no one but a Brahmin can officiate. All the Hindus are not Brahmins. The priests are Brahmins. Now, if the Karta is not a Brahmin himself, he must support a priest out of the common funds, whose work is to bathe and anoint the family idol, recite the ritual, make the offerings of fruit and flowers and perform the births, deaths and marriages in the family. In case there is no priest in the house, being of higher caste, he cannot eat with the others. His perquisites are the offerings given to the idols, and presents on the occasion of any family events. There is also a resident astrologer in wealthy families; but more important than both is the guru, or religious guide, who initiates the Hindoo into his religion, and is an extraordinary institution altogether.—All the Year Round.

Coolness in Danger.

Lord William Lennox, in his "Recollections," tells a story of the coolness of the Duke of Wellington. The French, with a fresh force double that of the duke, were closing in upon his jaded troops, one stormy night in Spain, and Wellington composed the famous dud in 1806, between Gen. Andrew Jackson, afterward president of the United States, and Charles Dickinson, of Nashville, Tenn., as an unparalleled exhibition of courage and fortitude on the part of the former.

Dickinson was a dashing young blood of Nashville, and considered the best pistol shot in the state. He had fought several duels and always killed his opponent. The cause of the duel is immaterial here, but Jackson being the challenging party pistols were of course named by Dickinson, and the distance eight paces.

The duelling ground lay a good day's journey from Nashville, and early upon the appointed day Dickinson set forth accompanied by a chosen party of sporting friends, and was followed a few hours later by Jackson and his second.

All during that long day's travel the general was constantly regaled in all the different inns and taverns upon the road with such evidences of Dickinson's confidence in the result of the duel as strings hanging from two boughs with papers attached stating that they had been cut by Dickinson's bullet at eight paces. Just before reaching the ground he fired four balls, each at the word of command, into a silver dollar at the same distance, and tossed it to the landlord as he rode away, with the request that it be given to Gen. Jackson when he arrived. The latter's revenge for these cruel taunts and contemptuous nonchalance was equally unfortunate, as the music lover who occupies a chair directly in front of the ill mannered one.

The rear rung of that chair is a good foot rest, but the last rung is apt to hurt the most refined feet. It is the polite exercise of the concert room. The rear rung is the rung of the chair, keeping time with the music, a habit my tatoo that moves the occupant to murderous thoughts, and makes any enjoyment of the concert impossible. The owner of that foot man or woman, is entirely unconscious of, or at least indifferent to the torture he inflicts. There is where his, or her, utter lack of good breeding is clearly manifested. If the victim is fiery of temper as well advocated in music, and determined to get the full value of his dollar, he will say something forcible, and there will be a disturbance which will spoil the pleasure of a score of people in the vicinity of the detrimental foot. If the sufferer is of a meek and forgiving nature he will remain silent, but his pleasure is ended and his enjoyment of that concert will be painful.

Another form of the concert room terror is the young person who hums the air or the theme in process of playing by the orchestra or soloist. She is proud of her own attainments, musically, and regards it as her mission to let others share in her pleasure. In this overly days of English history, if my friend could have obtained a few more compartators of like robust faith, he would have been acquitted. At the present day, if I tendered myself as a witness on that score, the judge would tell me to stand down, and the younger bar would smile at my simplicity. Miserable indeed is the man who has not such faith in some of his fellow men—only less miserable than the man who allows himself to forget that such faith is not, strictly speaking, evidence, and when his faith is disappointed, as will happen now and again, turns Timon and blasts the universe for his own blunders. And so, if a man can find a friend, the hypotasis of all human hopes, the mirror of his ethical ideal, in the Jesus of any, or all, of the Gospels, let him live by faith in that ideal. Who shall or can forbid him! But let him not delude himself with the notion that his faith is evidence of the objective reality of that in which he trusts. Such evidence is to be obtained only by the use of the methods of science, as applied to history and to literature, and it amounts at present to very little.—Professor Thomas H. Huxley in Popular Science Monthly.

A FAMOUS DUEL.

Coolness and Bravery Displayed by Gen. Andrew Jackson.

The Philadelphia Press offered a prize for the best story of personal bravery. The following is one of the productions: I have considered the famous duel in 1806, between Gen. Andrew Jackson, afterward president of the United States, and Charles Dickinson, of Nashville, Tenn., as an unparalleled exhibition of courage and fortitude on the part of the former.

Dickinson was a dashing young blood of Nashville, and considered the best pistol shot in the state. He had fought several duels and always killed his opponent. DEARER EVERY DAY.

They and I wished come to love her
When her freshness showed dearer;
They were wrong, for as the river
Wears its channel more away,
Deeper grew my love, and clearer
Seemed her beauties in display;
She grew older—she grew dearer—
Dearer every day.

Had I loved her for her beauty,
Had her charms been my only joy,
Then might cares have ceased in worship
But her truth's a treasure for me
Filled my soul and drew me nearer
To the heart's sweetest mystery,
Still the older still the dearer—
Dearer every day.

Age has had its handiwork on her—
Yet I realize it not.
Her cheek's bloom my heart remembers—
Forgetting its decay.
And it shall be mine to cherish her,
As her friend and her May.
Still the older, still the dearer—
Dearer every day.—William Lyle.

CONCERT MANNERS.

Some of the Ways in Which the Thoughtless and Ill Bred Annoy Others.

For every one hundred music lovers, there are at least ten who may, with all their fondness for melody, be regarded as disturbers of their ministry. They are clever people in their place, but that place seems to be outside the walls of the concert room and remote from the auditorium where ears eager for music are gathered to listen to the masters. They may possess fairish manners at home and in society, but their lack of breeding rises to the surface in a most aggressive way when the well behaved ninety wish to enjoy, undisturbed, the music they have paid to hear and have a right to hear. Of the ten detrimental ones, probably half will develop into the most maddening form of ill manners in the concert room, and unfortunate is the music lover who occupies a chair directly in front of the ill mannered one.

The rear rung of that chair is a good foot rest, but the last rung is apt to hurt the most refined feet. It is the polite exercise of the concert room. The rear rung is the rung of the chair, keeping time with the music, a habit my tatoo that moves the occupant to murderous thoughts, and makes any enjoyment of the concert impossible. Hard on Our Funny Men.

A writer in The London Globe has discovered that Americans are humorless humorists. He says: "When the writer wishes to brighten the "human soul, he turns to some of the little American child; and when we find the little American child we know that we are going to be treated to specimens of precocious cleverness, or insanity, which are the more objectionable because they are invented by adults, we to be pleased with them, unless they attribute them to innocent children, at chance we have to the mirth of their readers is gone. Jokes are undoubtedly made in the States as they are in other countries. Humor there certainly is among that great people, but it is not the humor of Thackeray, The Haliburtons, Lowells and Holmes, or of the Jerrolds, Brownes, Samuel Ward, Bret Harte, Mark Twain, Max Adelar, Stockton, the authors of Helen's Babies, Jack The Bad Boy's Diary," ain lower, but give us genuine amusement of an honest kind. But when these have been mentioned, what name remains to be added? Who shall we go to to pit against the authors of "Vanity Fair, "Pickwick," "Essays of Elia," Mrs. Caudle's Curtain Lectures, "Alice in Wonderland "Vica Verca," "The Ballads, "Happy Thoughts," "The Jumbles"—to mention only a very few of the works of great English humorists of late years! And if Europe a to be included, what of Marquet, About, Saphir and the rest? America's claim cannot be allowed for a moment. In the humor of the paragraphists she is rich. This 'humor' is manufactured by wretched men often with wretched spelling out of wretched materials."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Be Paid for the Last Drop.

A young lady employed at a hotel in Dixmont, Me., one day carelessly left her one drop in the sauce dish. A young man who dined there swallowed one of the car drops with his sauce. It so happened that this winter the aforesaid young man presed lay for the father of the aforesaid young woman. When they settled the young man was handed an envelope containing his pay. In the envelope was a bill for $3 for the car drop he had swallowed, and money accounted to make the account good.—Chicago Tribune.

Beauty

Is desired and admired by all. Among the things which may best be done to enhance personal beauty is the daily use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. No matter what the color of the hair, this preparation gives it a lustre and pliancy that adds greatly to its charm. Should the hair be thin, harsh, dry, or turning gray, will restore the color, bring out a new growth, and render the old soft and shiny. For keeping the scalp clean, cool, and healthy, there is no better preparation in the market.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

"I am free to confess that a trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor, has convinced me that it is a genuine article. Its use has not only caused the hair of my wife and daughter to be but it has given my rather stunted mustache a respectable length and appearance."—R. Britton, Oakland, Ohio.

Abundant and Glossy,

"My hair was coming out by reason of any assistance from my wife, either). I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor, using only one bottle, and I now have as fine a head of hair as any one could wish for."—E. T. Schmitton, Dickson, Tenn.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor in my family for a number of years, and regard it as the best hair dressing I know of. It keeps the scalp clean, the hair soft and lively, and preserves the original color. My wife has used it for a long time with most satisfactory results."—Benjamin M. Johnson, 36 E. Tenessee Hill, Mo.

"My hair was becoming thin and dry, but after using half a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it grew black and glossy. I cannot express the joy and gratitude I feel."—Mabel C. Hardy, Dalavan, Ill.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Ironton.

JUNE 9 - Guess we are going to have some rain, but hardly think we need any at present.

Mr. Almon Bird is quite sick with German measles.

The ferry is getting to be quite a resort for the big goats and little kids of Ironton.

Mr. Purvis is putting up a building in the rear of his store to be occupied as a blacksmith shop by Mr. Hicks. A good enterprise, we think.

Mr. Boswell, the Boyne City artist, intends coming to Ironton soon, to remain a short time and take photographs. Just what we have been wanting.

E. L. Shelden, the ferryman, has bought out Malcom McDonald's peanut stand on the west side of the ferry in R. Miller's building.

James Alexander is laid up with rheumatism.

W. M. Holland has been granted a pension.

Will Robinson and family are stopping with Alonzo Sheldon.

Mr. Galbraith has purchased a span of 3-year-old colts, double buggy and harness of Dugald Campbell, of South Arm. Consideration, $220.

We should have announced last week a pair of twins at the home of Brad. Langsworthy,—a boy and a girl. We hear that the girl has since died.

We should like to inquire of our Boyne City brother how his succotash is prospering these days.

The following program has been prepared for the closing exercises of the Ironton school, at the school house Friday afternoon, June 14th:

Greeting song	School
Recitation, "Why I Mind Mother"	Maggie Thorp
Song "It is Home where Mother Is"	Elizabeth Stewart
Recitation, "The Farmer"	Harry Purvis
"A Temperance Boy,"	Eddie Thorp, John Gilbraith
"Twinkle Little Star,"	Frank and Dick Lenore
Song, "Footsteps on the Stairs,"	Lewis Girls
Recitation, "Getting Acquainted"	Arlo Waldron
Song, "Which Loved Best"	Rosie Moroney
Song, "Will I Meet My Angel Mother"	Little Garland
Song, "Soldiers' Memorial Day,"	School
Recitation, "Drink and Danger,"	Walter Bird
"A Clever Maxim"	Arthur Shelden
Song, "Vacation Song"	Dickie Green
Recitation, "Sweet Heart Mother"	Emma Bird
Song, "Take Me Back to Home and Mother,"	Eva Lewis
Recitation, "Golden Keys,"	Annie Gilbraith
Recitation, "When Mamma was a Little Girl,"	Little Sherland
Singing, "Good-Bye old School Room,"	School

JUNE 12—This weather will make our Boyne brother think of the succotash he recently promised.

The M. E. Sunday-school did not go over to the Black school house last Sunday as they expected, on the account of the rain; but will go next Sunday, weather permitting.

Mr. Hicks has moved into the front part of Mr. Sheldon's house. The blacksmith shop is soon to be completed. It is to be a two-story building, the upper story to be finished for a hall.

The tug Bob Stevenson is at work again, towing wood scows.

The school board is negotiating with J. M. Harris to teach the next term of school. While we are glad to get Mr. Harris and wife back to our town, we are sorry to lose Mr. Severance, who has made many warm friends in Ironton.

Atwood.

JUNE 11—We are having very wet weather. The outlook for corn is very discouraging.

The quarterly meeting was well attended notwithstanding the heavy rain.

W. C. Byers is remodeling the basement of his barn. He will also build a sheep-shed.

G. T. Bentley has a large post barn nearly completed.

Will Knight has a well house.

Albert Superanw has improved and repainted his house. It has a fine appearance.

The organization of the grangers Monday afternoon failed to connect.

Albert Superanw has been appointed postmaster in place of D. Flanagin.

Net Moore has a new chimney.

Children's day will be observed in M. E. church on Sunday, June 16.

JUNE 11.—And still it rains.

Albert Todd has a new drive well.

Mrs. Hotkins was on the sick list last week, but is better now.

Mrs. Thos. Shepherd Sr. is seriously ill; Dr. Foster is in attendance.

Jason Lewis and family of Advance, visited relatives here for a few days recently.

Mrs. Thos. Shepherd Jr, and daughter also Miss Dolly of Dwight, Sundayed with relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Thomas of Central Lake were called here on Thursday last by the illness of their daughter Mrs. Preble.

J. R. Vance lost his best horse "Billy" with spasmodic colic, on Thursday last. His weight was 1900 and he was considered worth $200.

It is worthy of mention that Mrs. H. C. Scofield of this township a lady of over 61 years, is cutting her third set of teeth; in fact has one full grown, and another through. Next!

Mrs. Wm. Preble was taken very ill with "German measles" last week. Dr. Warne was called, and she is now convalescent.

As Sydney Barber was peeling bark a mosquito lit on his hand. The first weapon he saw—an ax—he grabbed and hit the m—o, cutting his thumb, not the mosquito, badly.

Mrs. Gurley Boak and daughter of Charlevoix came up on Thursday last for a few days visit among relatives here; Mr. Boak and master Ernest came up on Saturday and they all returned on Monday.

We hope all of your readers are thankful that they are not suffering from fire and floods, if it is rather moist for business.

Old Mr. Svoboda of Jordan died on Friday last. He was one of the oldest settlers in the Bohemian settlement. He was buried from the church with Catholic cermonies, on Sunday last.

As Terry Barbor was plying his vocation as cook in Camp Comfort, he heard a gnawing sound. After a few minutes hunt he found that it proceeded from a woodchuck under the bed. He crawled in after it with a club, but failing to hit it, it ran out between his feet and he "sat on it," took out his jack knife, cut his throat with one hand. Hail to the woodchuck hero.

JUNE 11—John Healy is traveling agent for the Farmers Mutual Ins. Co. of this county.

The Oneida loaded with wood for A. B. Stone last week.

The Amsden loaded with lumber at Platner's last week.

P. B. Newton sent away a vessel load of potatoes last week, and has been buying them for fifteen cents a bushel.

L. E. Phillips went to Chicago on the Amsden last week with four hundred bushels of potatoes.

Our genial postmaster, A. B. Steele, has been getting a new case for the post office.

F. E. Miller is having a touche with rheumatism. He says that sometimes it is doubtful which will come out ahead, F. E. or old rheum.

Miss Addie Lewis and Miss Samantha Willis attended the funeral of Miss Speidel in South Arm last Tuesday.

Your correspondent was so busily engaged last week in laying plans for the constructions of an ark that we could not write any items, and still it rains. Corn and garden truck looks sick. We are glad that Brother Eveline finds such good prospects for fruit. Our observation has been that the show of fruit at our next fair will be slim if it depends on the exhibition from this part of the country.

W. C. T. U. Convention.

The W. C. T. U. of Charlevoix county will hold its third annual convention and institute June 26, 27, and 28, in the M. E. church at Charlevoix.

A very cordial invitation is extended to all classes of society and especially do we urge the attendance of clergymen, teachers, school boards and parents. We earnestly request your co-operation and aid in these discussions for "Purer Thought" and and "Higher Education." All visitors will receive entertainment.

FRANC J. STONE,
County President.

JUNE 11.—More rain.

Remember the picnic and entertainment of the Ironton school tomorrow.

Potato and corn planting is now in order.

Ironton school reports next week.

Mrs. Wm. Black of Marion, who has been spending a couple of weeks with her daughter Mrs. A. J. Beers returned home last Friday.

The furnace shut down last week for want of ore; and while out of blast they cleaned the boiler.

The Ironton school will hold a picnic in the grove near the school house on the 14th. At 2 o'clock the school will give an entertainment in school house. We understand that a good program is being prepared. A cordial invitation is extended to all. This ends the spring term. At the close of the exercises Wm. Boswell, the photographer at Boyne City, will will take a photo of the school.

John Healy, of this place, agent for the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance company, is now going the rounds of Eveline, insuring property.

The frame of the new blacksmith shop at Ironton was raised Saturday.

We wish to correct the mistake made by us last week, in stating that the blacksmith shop would be built at the interior of J. H. Purvis' grocery store. It should have read "at the rear." Mistakes will occur.

Richard May, of Boyne Falls, is in town visiting friends.

A. E. Hays and family, of East Jordan, but formerly a resident of Eveline for several years, started on the Friant for Kansas on Monday. Their many friends in this place will join us in wishing them a pleasant journey and prosperity in their future home.

Mrs. Lon. Sheldon, at Ironton, we understand is quite sick.

Burgess.

Mrs. Gibson has moved to Bay View.

Mrs. Saunby has recovered from the fall she received in Petoskey, so as to be able to be moved home, but is still in a bad condition.

The rain last Sunday disappointed a good many Sunday school children.

R. Bowman's stolen team has been recovered.

Out of Her Element.

Termagancy comes into the genius of our race. The common scold, who was treated with the branks and the ducking stool, found her less personally brutal but no more intrinsically refined copy among the fine ladies of courts and palaces; and the shrew's occasional tongue has never wanted for exercise in any time or sphere. What but a shrew could have been the mother of Robert de Insula, Bishop of Durham in 1274? Having given her a train of male and female servants, and an honorable establishment as befitted her rank, the bishop went to see the old dame to see how things fared with her. "How fares my sweet mother?" said he. "Ill and worse," quoth she. "And what ails thee or troubles thee? Hast thou not men and women attendants enough?" said he. "Yea," quoth she, "and more than enough. I say to one Go, and he runs; to another, Come hither, fellow, and the varlet falls down on his knees; and in short all things go on so unconscionably smooth that my heart is bursting for want of something to pick a quarrel with."—San Francisco Argonaut.

A Japanese Tattooer.

A Hong Kong journal gives an account of a Japanese who has lately been in that colony as a professional tattooer of pictures and designs on the body. In a room decorated with fans, hanging pictures and scrolls the visitor or patient is received. In a conspicuous place is hung a notice in the following words: "I do not business if fiddled." Sample books are first produced for inspection and selection; they are filled with colored drawings of dragons, birds, insects and scenes comic and serious. At the bottom is written the cost of tattooing each, the price varying from about twelve shillings for three butterflies to an elaborate group for £20.

The operator himself was tattooed all over his body with groups of bright flowers here, the conventional Japanese girl with colored drawings with long flowing robes wound round one arm from the shoulder to the wrist, while on the other was a dragon with every scale carefully shaded. On the breast was a picture of the god of storms, with inscriptions in Japanese characters, and similar representations all over the body, the hands alone being free. The apparatus consists merely of a small box containing a slab of black Chinese ink, some vermilion, a few bamboo slivers, and a drawerful of penholders, on the ends of which were fixed tiny bunches of needles, numbering from three to fifty. The customer chooses his design from the pattern book, the operator draws it on the part desired, and then, with a large bunch of needles for the heavy black and a small one for the fine lines, the colors are punctured in. No blood is drawn, and the pain is very little.

A dragon, which would be tattooed for £4, would take five hours, on account of the number of scales. The part is then rubbed with vaseline to allay the inflammation, and in a day or two the skin would come off. After that the marks would be indelible. The Hong Kong operator tattooed the arm of an English prince, and in Kioto was engaged for a whole month reproducing on the trunk and limbs of an English peer a series of scenes set in Japanese history. For this he was paid about £100. He has also tattooed English ladies, and seems to be especially proud of one picture, which was a tiny fan about the size of a half dollar, on which a complete landscape with figures well defined. His English patrons have, however, shrunk from tattooing in Hong Kong is about £1,200 per annum.

Beth Had Pluck.

A burro and a bulldog had a fight recently in Fresno, Cal. Burro is Californian for donkey. The burro was browsing on cockle burrs by the roadside when the bulldog trotted along, stopped, and without a growl seized the donkey by the shank leaving of the off hind leg. The burro kicked and kicked, and then he tried to reach the dog with his teeth, but unavailingly. Then the burro laid down on his back and brought its hind legs forward toward his head. He shut his jaws on the dog's back and slowly straightened out. The dog without flinching kept his grip on the shank bone. But the donkey had too much grit, and kept on straightening itself out, though the strain was easing the flesh and muscles to be terribly lacerated. The dog let go first. The burro kept its hold on the dog's back and in a second was standing on its feet, with the dog dangling from its mouth. The burro's leg was terribly lacerated, but he did not seem to mind. He limped across the road and deliberately, pausing several times to rest, rubbed the dog back and forth over a barbed wire fence until it was killed. The dog did not howl from the beginning to the end.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Bamboo and the Chinese.

Without bamboo, the Chinaman would be lost. It is of even greater importance to him than rice, although the latter is to the Chinaman what wheat and corn are to the people of other countries. The bamboo is more to him than any other one article is or can be to any other nation of people.

With bamboo he builds his house, even to thatching the roof, and around it he puts a bamboo fence. His carts are made chiefly of bamboo, his clothing is often, for the prostrugger, made of fine bamboo, and his hat is of bamboo. In hot weather he cools himself with a bamboo fan. His pencils are of bamboo; if he smokes opium, his pipe is of bamboo; if he smokes tobacco, his pipe, all but the bowl, which is brass, and perhaps a small amber mouthpiece, is of bamboo. In short, he uses bamboo for almost every conceivable thing, even to utilizing the young shoots as an article of food, and a very palatable dish they make, too, when fried in combination with other vegetables and meats.—Boston Globe.

MY KINGDOM AND MY QUEEN.

My kingdom has no dazzling throne,
No palace grand upon it,
Yet 'tis as bright as e'er was known,
Or sung in loval sonnet.
I've travled east, I've travled west,
Mid scenes of wealth and splendor,
But this one spot I love the best,
With all its joys so tender;
No palace e'er I've seen more,
For peace reigns here and Love is queen.

Two subjects in my kingdom dwell,
One has an eye of azure,
And smiles upon her fair face fell
Of pure and perfect pleasure;
And one has hair of raven hue
And eyes of hazel beauty,
And whatever he may strive to do
He always does his duty,
And faithful they have ever been
To her who is my household queen,

And so life yields me never joy
And hope divine and human,
I see one star in earth's sky
And one almost a woman.
The bright days come, the bright days go,
And each brings some new pleasure,
And so spot on the earth I know
Is richer with heart treasure.
For happier subjects we're were seen
Than in my home where Love is queen.

For such a kingdom, royal name
Are coronets, but empty
Compared with the joy we have
With love, they kiss and bless her;
And when at last we come to pass
Which joy gives to each other,
They will be in one name alone,
The hallowed name of mother:
The same in name as in heaven is man
Since time and love their course began.

As Important Inquiry.

The Reform Bureau of New York is collecting the opinions of farmers in every part of the country on the condition of the agricultural class. As many answers are desired as possible to be obtained, for the more that are received the more valuable will be the result. Please answer as requested, below.

1. Are the farmers in your community as prosperous as they have ever been?

.....

2. If so to what do they chiefly owe their prosperity? If not, what has been the chief reason of the change? Leave out of consideration such temporary causes as a bad crop year, and consider the social and political causes.]

.....

.....

3. Do the farmers take more or less interest than formerly in economic discussion?

.....

4. What effect does the tariff have on their condition?

.....

.....

5. Will a bushel of wheat or a barrel of corn buy as many necessaries of life as it did three years ago?

.....

6. Have they gained or lost social dignity, as compared with other classes, such as merchants and mechanics?

.....

7. Do farmers' sons show any less willingness than formerly to become farmers? If so, why?

.....

.....

8. If you will write a fuller answer to these inquiries than this blank will hold, it will be highly appreciated.

Please address your answers by mail to The Reform Club, 15 East 33d St., New York City, and a summary of the answers, received from every part of the country will be sent to you.

No Soldier's Widow Need Apply.

The postmaster at Bellville has lately been changed and the new appointee is comparatively a stranger, having lived here but a little more than a year. There was another applicant for the office in the person of Mrs. Laura E. Sands, a soldier's widow, the mother of three children, one of whom is crippled for life, but owing to the fact of her husband having voted the democratic ticket in former years, the local bosses decided she could not have the office. This appointment may have some effect on local politics as Mrs. Sands has four brothers who have always voted the republican ticket and they now feel rather sore, and who can blame them?

Tariff Notes.

The tax how ever low, is immoral, unjust, complicated, wasteful and indirect. It shifts the burden of government to those least able to bear them, fosters monopolies, encourages fraud, perjury, smuggling, and other crimes, and the percentage of cost of collection is enormous.—Kansas Jeffersonian.

There are some people who it is necessary to have a brick house fall on them before they can "tumble" to a scheme. In other words they must live under high taxation and help to pile up money in the United States treasury and in the banks before they can see the bold scheme of robbing them by excessive taxation. Protection will not be the issue in the next campaign. That word has fooled the people once and they dare not try it again.—Traverse Bay Eagle.

To call a protective tariff "the American system" was an outrageous misnomer. It would have been far more correct, as a matter of propriety and geography, to have called it "the Algerian system." It was practiced in Algiers long before it was naturalized in America.—Philadelphia Record.

Please remember that "unnecessary taxation is unjust taxation;" that all tariff is paid by use consumers, and that the tariff taxation that is protective is robbery of the consumer for the benefit of the producer. Get this into your head and you will understand all there is to the tariff question.—Greenville Democrat.

The average farmer, counting his own work in, makes his investment nearly 2 per cent. Selling in the cheapest and buying in the dearest market may be a nice kind of republican protection, but what twenty-three cents less per bushel than last fall and potatoes from five to fifteen cents per bushel the poor farmer begins to wonder what next "protection and home market" will do for him.—Pontiac Bill Poster.

What Was His Motive.

The first auditor of the treasury ought, other things being equal, to be an honest man, and known to be one. There could be, we should say, no more contemptuous insult to the people of the United States than to put in this place of delicate trust and responsibility a man of scandalous reputation, believed by those familiar with his career to be the comrade and friend of thieves and scoundrels. Exactly why Mr. Harrison has named to this office George E. Fisher, of Delaware, a man driven from the district attorneyship in Washington by the exposure of connection with the vilest sort, we do not pretend to know. Mr. Harrison would agree with us that it should require a very powerful motive indeed to induce an honest president to make such an appointment. He would not agree with us, probably, that no good motive can be imagined for it. In this situation he would, perhaps, relieve himself of much anxiety if he would frankly tell the public what his motive was. On the other hand, he might only confirm the belief that this act, like many others, was due to his desire to provide his own political ends, to strike a "Harrison machine" in Delaware.—New York Times.

Calvin S. Brice for Chairman.

The election of Col. Calvin S. Brice to the chairmanship of the national democratic committee cannot be tortured into proof that the tariff-reform wing of the party is to have things its own way in the future. Mr. Randall, Mr. Gorman, Mr. Dana, and all the other hight-tariff elements gave their assent to Mr. Brice's election some time ago. They know that the policy of a party is not to be built up from the complexion of the national committee. They have no desire for a prostitea brawl at this stage of the proceedings. Besides, it is highly probably that Col. Brice's election suits them well enough. He had won the promotion fairly and honestly. There was no reason why he should not have it.—Chicago News.

"A White Man's Party."

The president's appointment of Lewis E. Parsons to be United States district-attorney in Alabama, is direct proof that Mr. Harrison looks with favor upon the movement to make the republican organization of the south "a white man's party." Mr. Parsons is one of the originators and leaders in that movement in Alabama, and his appointment has raised a small cyclone among the colored preachers and politicians of that state. Those whom McKinley called "our black allies" ought to understand by this time that they are wanted only as hewers of wood and drawers of water" for the republican politicians.—New York World.

Promptness.

First a cold, then a cough, then consumption, then death. "I took Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption the moment I began to cough, and I believe it saved my life."—Walter N. Walker, Washington. Sold by G. W. Emerson, druggist.

Test of Death.

Tests have been suggested to determine whether or not life is extinct. Death has been supposed to occur, the most recent, and held to be the most reliable, is called the Hippocratic test. In using it the operator injects one hypodermic syringeful of strong solution of ammonia under the skin of the arm or other convenient portion of the body. If the body be not dead—if there be the faintest circulation—the ammonia will produce on the skin, at the point where it was injected, a red patch, on the contrary if life has ceased red spots will appear. If there be absolute death, there will be produced a brown dark blotch. It is definitely conclusive against possible vitality.—Boston Herald.

Polluted Ice.

Reports of ice must read up on the results of investigations of Keddin, Pengres and Troldes, showing that ice taken from polluted streams is not purified by freezing. Keddin tells us that if ice from streams containing putrifying animal matter or sewerage is used it will cause diarrhœa. In 1878, at Rye Beach, an epidemic broke out in a hotel, and was traced at last to ice taken from an adjacent pond. The ice of this pond in summer was foul, abounding with putrescent matter, organic matter, as well as bacteria, as determined by any ordinary device of cold. Too many of our readers are the recipients of sewerage, is the ice age of civilization, if we must have it pure.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In Honor of Burns.

A Burns inaugurate to celebrate a birthday of the poet took place at Ayrshire in Leslie, Fifeshire. At the one celebration twenty-four plowmen, mechanics and farmers, mounted and dressed to represent the principal characters in Burns' works, marched in the street headed by a volunteer band and accompanied by a crowd of people. Burns himself appeared in his coat, knee breeches and blue bonnet, while other characters represented Tam O'Shanter, Souter Johnnie, Auld Mare Maggie, Tam O'Shanter's Grey Mare, Jean, Nanse Tinnock, Maggie Lauder, Highland Mary, Bonnie Lesley, Bonnie Jean, Cutty Sark, Tam O'Shanter's Wife, Souter Johnnie's Wife, Auld Mare Maggie's Mate, Tam O'Shanter's Mare, Souter Johnnie's Mare, Nanse Tinnock's Mare, Highland Mary's Mate, Bonnie Lesley's Mate, Bonnie Jean's Mate, Cutty Sark's Mate, Tam O'Shanter's Wife's Mate, Souter Johnnie's Wife's Mate, Auld Mare Maggie's Wife, Tam O'Shanter's Mare's Wife, Souter Johnnie's Mare's Wife, Nanse Tinnock's Mare's Wife, Highland Mary's Wife, Bonnie Lesley's Wife, Bonnie Jean's Wife, Cutty Sark's Wife, Tam O

SEATTLE IN RUINS.

Washington Territory's Chief City Laid Waste by Flames.

The business portion of Seattle, the largest city in Washington Territory, is in ashes. Every bank, hotel, place of amusement, all the leading business houses, all the newspaper offices, the railroad depots, miles of steamboat wharves, the coal bunkers, the freight warehouses, and the telegraph offices are burned. The fire began near the corner of Front and Pearl streets in the Seattle candy factory building, and consumed the whole of the business section of the city northward to Stetson and Postmill along Front and Second to the water front, involving a loss of over $3,000,000. The city is literally wiped out except the residence portion on high ground. A stiff breeze was blowing from the northeast when the fire began, and it soon got the best of the fire department. The water supply gave out within two hours after the fire began and then the flames had a clean sweep. The ocean steamers Mexico, for San Francisco, and Aveno, for Alaska, escaped destruction by pulling out into the harbor. A great deal of property was saved, only to be burned up again, so quickly did the flames spread.

SIGHT-SEERS SHUT OUT.

Johnstown Allows no Visitors Except Workers.

A wall has been thrown around Johnstown, and nobody can enter unless it is shown he has business in the city. There is only one bridge across the Conemaugh and a pass from Adjt.-Gen. Hastings or J. B. Scott is necessary before it can be crossed. Johnstown and adjoining villages are now under thorough military and police regulations. Each place has been provided with men enough to keep out intruders and now have those who are actually employed will be allowed to remain. The officers are arresting men every hour, some of them on the slightest provocation. In all cases where the offense is trivial the victims are pressed into work with the relief gangs.

NAMED FOR OFFICE.

Land Officers and Revenue Agents Appointed by the President.

The following appointments have been made:

Charles G. Williams, of Watertown, Dak., to be register of the Land Office at Watertown, Dak.; M. M. Hunt, of Salem, Ore., to be Commissioner of Internal Revenue, vice Joseph S. Fulton, of Silver Springs, who declines the appointment; Enos C. Lamb, of Wisconsin, to be a Special Agent to make allotment of lands in severalty to Indians, etc.; John D. Lee, of Pennsylvania, to be a Special Agent to negotiate with the Chickasaw and other Indians for the cession to the United States of certain lands, as provided by act of Congress approved March 2, 1889; in the matter of the claims of the Choctaw Nation; Jefferson Davis, of the Southern District of Columbia, to be collector of customs; Henry Clay Dean, D. C. Ellis, and Thomas Ewing, to be collectors of Internal Revenue; Albert B. White, for the district of West Virginia; John B. Eaves, fifth district of North Carolina; William A. Allen, second district of Tennessee; John Peters, district of Nebraska.

The Result of the Conference.

The official text of the Sunoas conference agreement shows that the island is to have an independent government; that Samoa is to be recognized as King, when so elected by the people, and the United States shall have the right to establish a coaling station at Pago-Pago.

Pestilence Feared at Johnstown.

Surgeon General Hamilton, at Washington, has been notified that there is serious danger of sickness at Johnstown, Pa., unless active sanitary measures are taken. He has given the necessary orders, and has had shipped a large quantity of disinfectants. A temporary depopulation is urged.

Kilrain Puts Up His Belt.

Jake Kilrain has handed over to Mr. Cridge, the stakeholder in the approaching Kilrain-Sullivan prize-fight, the champion diamond belt which is to go with the stakes to the winner.

Electric Flashes.

Arrangements have been made for a fight on Aug. 27, at San Francisco, between Jack Demprey and Le Blanche for a purse of $5,500, the loser to get $900.

The subscription of Jay Gould for the relief of the flood sufferers was $1,000.

It is feared that Wm. Mills the well-known runner of Watertown, Mass., who has a record of 100 yards in 10¼ seconds, perished in the Johnstown flood.

Parts of the wreckage caused by the Conemaugh Valley flood have passed Cincinnati.

THE TRADE OUTLOOK.

A General Improvement Due to Favorable Crop Prospects.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

On the whole the crop prospect continues unusually good and the markets are rapidly adjusting themselves to the assurance of supply and demand. Exports are still enormous, the future large in volume and the clearings through banks show an increase of about 12 per cent. over last year. There is no appearance of any disturbance to the money market, but the rate for call loans has hardened to 6 per cent. in the west, six weeks for gold exports, and will be strong enough to prevent serious pressure in the fall. Money in other places is almost everywhere in ample supply. Cleveland being the only place where the rate has hardened to 6 at Kansas City. Nowhere are serious complaints are on the whole not increased, though in some markets business has been decidedly lazier. No change is seen in cotton. The price of wheat has not yielded much, but the crop is assured, the west has been greatly improved, more than last week. Corn is still the question is regarded by many as insuring a great crop, and the west is now driving up exports a dull market for pig iron, with lower prices, and a decided check to the boom in Pittsburg, which has been carried far beyond the impression prevails at Philadelphia that prudent buyers are not anticipating. Manufacturers are encouraged by sales of 40,000 tons of Bessemer pig for Chicago, and by the fact that even $18,000 tons of Scotch have been sold. The branches of business the outlook is encouraging, the west is now in better condition than for years, fifty dollars of hogs sold for butter and cheese, with a full demand. The shoe manufacture is still very unsatisfactory, others report not any large, the business failures are fewer than last week, but more than last year.

OWES THE BASE-BALL FIELD.

NEWS AND GOSSIP ABOUT THE NATIONAL GAME.

The League Battle for the Championship—Pennant and Interesting Gossip—The Boston Club Leading—What the Other Teams Are Doing.

[CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.]

With the exception of the three games which Chicago will play in Cleveland June 14, 15 and 17, the base ball play in unbroken series of a month's duration opens in the Chicago grounds, beginning with Cleveland this week and ending with Washington on July 6. Anson's men are just now pretty well down the list among the candidates for league honors, but the close of this long series upon familiar ground, all and fair competition will spur up to find them a good deal nearer the front than they are at present.

The Eastern trip just completed was a sad disappointment to Adrian C. Anson. He felt full of confidence that Chicago would take at least half of the games played, and when the trip ended up by Bilsko dropping four straight to Boston, "The Old Man" was decidedly out in the cellar—not at the least, but at the miserable supposition, which is always responsible for Chicago's poor showing on the trip. Chicago, with, fifteen games to play with Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but a paltry good half, has some good world with little question, have won, at the least calculation, half, leaving, thinks or its games but for the incompetency of Umpires McQuaid and Lynch. Speaking of the trip, Anson said to me the night we left Boston:

"We've done poorly on the trip, and I am ready to admit it to anyone I see. If we did hit the ball as hard as we usually do, we would have taken two games from Boston, and possibly three; we'd have taken three from New York (or at least two from Philadelphia, which, together with two at Washington, would have given us a pretty respectable record. We didn't hit the ball, however, particularly at Boston, and I know, and so does everybody else who saw the games, why we didn't. Of all the outrageous decisions ever given by an umpire those of Barnum were the worst. Understand, though, I'm not offering any excuses or making any 'kick.' Chicago isn't where it would be in the race if I had been able to get my men together last spring and put them through the course of training, which I near to let nothing on earth interfere with hereafter. I know what my team's capable of, and the fact that we've not won more games on this trip doesn't worry me a bit. If we had anything like a fair deal in the umpiring we'd have won a majority of the games, and my team wasn't playing up to its speed at that.

When asked what he really thought of the pennant chances in the race—if he, like many others, thought it would win, he said:

"No, I don't think they will win it. The Boston have been playing in the biggest kind of luck. I think it has but one pitcher, and that is Clarkson. I am sure he is the only one that will last. The Boston team is strong behind the bat, but it is, I think, a weak fielding aggregation. They have been getting all the best of the umpiring—something that won't reliable when they come West. If they have to face the same luck that Chicago has so far had, I think Boston just as strong as way team in the League. I have not weakened. I think Boston will lead, but I think it will be a close race, which one I cannot say, as New York, Philadelphia and Chicago are all in the race.

"What do you think of Boston as a batting combination?

"Very good, but I'll bet a suit of clothes that Chicago has a better average at the end of the season than Boston.

"Why do you think Chicago is going to finish ahead?

"In the first place, Chicago has the best pitchers. You may pick out one man in every club that can pitch good ball, but for a crowd of good, sound pitchers that are going to last through the season, I tell you I have the men. Hutchinson is a very young pitcher, and the Chicago club has been away from home in all but four games, winning three of them from our rivals, the Pittsburgs. You know we never allow any one to come to Chicago and take away games without a hard fight. I am not boasting when I tell you that Chicago, with Ned Williamson in his old position, is a stronger team than ever represented the Windy City, and you will all have to admit it before the season is over."

DIAMOND NOTES.

Chicago now has the clean stretch before it, and should do something toward regaining public confidence before it makes its next trip East.

Anson is still willing to back Chicago in the race.

Wouldn't it be funny if Chicago were to turn the tables on Boston for four straight when the latter got here this month?

Clarkson is pitching great ball this season.

Chicago has a Class A catcher in Sommers.

Ad Gumbert is a remarkably hard-hitting pitcher.

Big Dan Brouthers beats Anson by thirteen hits in the batting race between the two.

A great deal of rivalry exists among the members of the Chicago team in the try for batting honors. All depends upon statement of the stick-work done by the rival teams in the last Eastern trip will show what the boys are doing:

	A. B.	R.	H.	Percent.
Duffy	68	10	23	.338
Pfeffer	61	12	20	.327
Van Haltren	61	12	19	.311
Williamson	67	11	20	.298
Burns	59	17	17	.288
Anson	59	17	17	.288
Farrell	51	10	14	.275
Gore	61	11	16	.262
Tener	19	1	4	.158
Sommers	19	1	3	.158
Hutchinson	11	1	1	.091
Flint	11	1	1	.091
Kerfoot	11	1	1	.091

Little Duffy, it will be seen, leads the lot, while the "old man" is pretty well down. Ryan and Pfeffer are coming at about the usual speed—perhaps a trifle better.—Ad Van Horne, Gumbert and Burns are all doing well.

HORROR OF HORRORS

JOHNSTOWN, PA., A SCENE OF DESOLATION.

An Entire City Swept Away and Thousands of Its Inhabitants Overwhelmed in the Flood—Heartrending Scenes in the Devastated Place.

A Pittsburg dispatch says: Late details of the calamity in the Conemaugh valley multiply many times the early estimates of the number of lives lost and the probable value of the property destroyed. The first reports were confined mainly to the destruction wrought at Johnstown, but they have since been extended to a dozen towns and villages and to cover a vast extent of territory. The catastrophe was caused by the bursting of what was known as the South Fork dam, 110 feet high and restraining a body of water twelve miles in area and 100 feet deep in place. For days previous to the break in the dam there had been continuous rains through out the extensive watershed drained into the lake, and citizens of Johnstown were warned of danger, but apparently the majority of them had implicit confidence in the Pittsburg dropping four straight to Boston, "The Old Man" was decidedly out in the cellar—not at the least, but at the miserable supposition, which is always responsible for Chicago's poor showing on the trip. Chicago, with, fifteen games to play with Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but a paltry good half, has some good world with little question, have won, at the least calculation, half, leaving, thinks or its games but for the incompetency of Umpires McQuaid and Lynch. Speaking of the trip, Anson said to me the night we left Boston:

"We've done poorly on the trip, and I am ready to admit it to anyone I see. If we did hit the ball as hard as we usually do, we would have taken two games from Boston, and possibly three; we'd have taken three from New York (or at least two from Philadelphia, which, together with two at Washington, would have given us a pretty respectable record. We didn't hit the ball, however, particularly at Boston, and I know, and so does everybody else who saw the games, why we didn't. Of all the outrageous decisions ever given by an umpire those of Barnum were the worst. Understand, though, I'm not offering any excuses or making any 'kick.' Chicago isn't where it would be in the race if I had been able to get my men together last spring and put them through the course of training, which I near to let nothing on earth interfere with hereafter. I know what my team's capable of, and the fact that we've not won more games on this trip doesn't worry me a bit. If we had anything like a fair deal in the umpiring we'd have won a majority of the games, and my team wasn't playing up to its speed at that.

When asked what he really thought of the pennant chances in the race—if he, like many others, thought it would win, he said:

"No, I don't think they will win it. The Boston have been playing in the biggest kind of luck. I think it has but one pitcher, and that is Clarkson. I am sure he is the only one that will last. The Boston team is strong behind the bat, but it is, I think, a weak fielding aggregation. They have been getting all the best of the umpiring—something that won't reliable when they come West. If they have to face the same luck that Chicago has so far had, I think Boston just as strong as way team in the League. I have not weakened. I think Boston will lead, but I think it will be a close race, which one I cannot say, as New York, Philadelphia and Chicago are all in the race.

"What do you think of Boston as a batting combination?

"Very good, but I'll bet a suit of clothes that Chicago has a better average at the end of the season than Boston.

"Why do you think Chicago is going to finish ahead?

"In the first place, Chicago has the best pitchers. You may pick out one man in every club that can pitch good ball, but for a crowd of good, sound pitchers that are going to last through the season, I tell you I have the men. Hutchinson is a very young pitcher, and the Chicago club has been away from home in all but four games, winning three of them from our rivals, the Pittsburgs. You know we never allow any one to come to Chicago and take away games without a hard fight. I am not boasting when I tell you that Chicago, with Ned Williamson in his old position, is a stronger team than ever represented the Windy City, and you will all have to admit it before the season is over."

DIAMOND NOTES.

Chicago now has the clean stretch before it, and should do something toward regaining public confidence before it makes its next trip East.

Anson is still willing to back Chicago in the race.

Wouldn't it be funny if Chicago were to turn the tables on Boston for four straight when the latter get here this month?

Clarkson is pitching great ball this season.

Chicago has a Class A catcher in Sommers.

Ad Gumbert is a remarkably hard-hitting pitcher.

Big Dan Brouthers beats Anson by thirteen hits in the batting race between the two.

A great deal of rivalry exists among the members of the Chicago team in the try for batting honors. All depends upon statement of the stick-work done by the rival teams in the last Eastern trip will show what the boys are doing:

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE

No business was transacted by the Legislature on the 1st. Immediately upon the assembling of the Senate on the following day, establishing the death of Senator Tolmie was announced. A resolution setting forth the esteem in which the deceased was held by the Senate, tendering condolence to his family and providing for the expense of the funeral, was adopted. Senator Winsor offered a resolution to the effect that a letter of the deceased Senator, which he had received in his office, showing a struggle of life with him in Pinkney, Michigan, should be read at that time. Senator Winsor said that the letter was addressed to his father, and he had learned to know a Senator Tolmie, and the resolution of the deceased Senator with him, in which he paid a tribute to the purity of his character and fidelity, with a passing acknowledgment of praise to his devoted and faithful wife. Resolutions of a similar purport to those presented to the Senate were offered in the House. Speaker Stephenson, Representatives Lyon, Hill and Ketchum were appointed on behalf of the House; Messrs. Dykes, Curtis, W. W. Williams, N. A. Brown, Eaton and Randall. The Sergeant-at-Arms will accompany them.

The proposed Libel law drawn by the State Bar Association passed the House on the 5th inst. It throws the burden of proof of malice in the publication of a libel upon the plaintiff, requiring him to show the malicious intention of the publisher before bringing suit, and provides that the truth of the publication may be pleaded. The House by a vote of 41 to 1 refused to concur in the Senate amendments to the Insane Hill. A Senate Libel Bill, with a conference committee will be appointed, and it is probable that it will be the fate of the Insane Hill to become a victim of the Libel Bill. Representatives Hill and Ketchum introduced a joint resolution for the relief of the Michigan Insane Asylum, which provides for the transfer of the Insane Asylum from the State Board of Managers, Dr. Gorham, of Ionia, as State Commissioner, and H. H. Hinds, of Stanton, as member of the Live Stock Commission.

The Senate passed its bills of importance on the 5th inst. The Senate Bill authorizing the formation of little corporations for mining purposes, which passed the House last week, was passed, with a few amendments, and the Senate Bill to increase the capital of the State Reform School from $100,000 to $150,000 was passed. The Senate Bill to provide free school books wherever a majority of the school district voters shall so decide, passed. The Senate Bill to provide for an inquest on both houses asking aid for the sufferers from the Johnstown disaster either by direct appropriation or through an appeal to the people by the Governor, passed. The Senate Bill (Senator Ten Eyck) to amend the act of the State Board of Home Board of Managers, Dr. Gorham, of Ionia, as State Commissioner, and H. H. Hinds, of Stanton, as member of the Live Stock Commission.

Ter Senate passed no bills of importance on the 6

The War Taxes.

There has never been an honest doubt as to the democratic doctrine in regard to what taxes should be first reduced in legislating to relieve the people or to stop the surplus.

The Tilden democratic platform in 1876 did not mention the internal-revenue taxes, but denounced the tariff as "a masterpiece of injustice, inequality and false pretense." The Chicago platform of 1884 called for a revision of the tariff which should leave "taxes on fewer imported articles"—i. e., an enlarged free list—"bearing heaviest on articles of luxury and lightest on articles of necessity." This is the principle upon which the Mills bill was framed.

The platform of 1884 likewise declared that "the system of direct taxation known as the 'internal revenue' is a war tax," and said that "the money derived therefrom should be sacredly devoted to the relief of the people from the remaining burdens of the war" and for "the payments of pensions." The "remaining burdens of the war" are the interest account and the pension list, and these combined will just about equal for the current year the receipts from internal tax—$130,000,000.

In 1866 the internal revenue tax upon spirits was $2 per gallon, and the total receipts from the comprehensive internal-revenue system were $309,000,000. The average tariff duty in that year was 48.35, and the receipts from customs were $179,000,000. Since then all the internal-revenue taxes save those on spirits and tobacco have been repealed, the tax on whiskey has been reduced to 90 cents a gallon and the total collections have fallen to $130,000,000—a reduction in internal taxes of $179,000,000. But the average tariff rate last year was barely one per cent. less than in 1866, and the revenue from customs was actually $40,000,000 greater.

To advocate free whiskey and tobacco while the war taxes on the necessaries of life remain substantially untouched is degenerate old whiggery and an outrage on the name and traditions of democracy.—N. Y. World.

Chairman Brice.

Calvin S. Brice has been chosen chairman of the democratic national committee. It is an important position and one that calls for peculiar qualities of character. It is an old saying and a true one that a man may be a very good man and yet not specially fitted to keep a hotel. Likewise one may have brains and wealth and executive ability and still not be transformed to lead his cohorts to victory.

The representatives of the party which is to wrest the government from the hands of the "all sufficient coefficient" republicans in 1892 have unanimously concluded that Mr. Brice is the political Napoleon of the future. Their judgment is perhaps based on their hopes rather than on past experience.

Two things are absolutely certain. First, that the democrats will win if judged by the merits of their politics; second, that as sure as death and taxes they will be whipped off the field unless they stand shoulder to shoulder and follow leaders who know how to lead.

In the matter of tricks, games, deals and the expenditure of money they are no match for their opponents. There is a remnant of conscience left in their party, while the republicans have there in pickle as a useless obstacle to present success, but well enough as a curiosity for the next generation to gape upon.

But when it comes to fair play and no favor the democratic onset carries the day every time. It is necessary, therefore, for the democrats to trust to providence, keep their powder dry, and fill up the ranks. Then they will make the fur fly in '92.—New York Herald.

Demoralizing the Mail Service.

The "loot of the railway mail service" continues to furnish incidents which betray a scandalous disregard for the good of the service. At least one postal clerk in this region who was appointed by the democratic administration and shortly after discharged for incompetency, was reinstated when the wholesale changes were being made. This man along with lots of others just as undeserving, applied for reinstatement on the ground that he had been turned out by the democrats—and all such appeals appear to have been honored and no questions asked. This at least one incompetent democrat "owed it" on the republicans. "To the victors belong the spoils," and never mind the efficiency of the service—such was the doctrine and the practice. Now comes the report of George S. Evans to be chief post-office inspector for the New England division. He was retired from the railway mail for cause, and no private employer would deem it just or wholesome to promote a man with this record to greatly enlarged authority in his business. The example is demoralizing in the last degree.—Springfield Republican.

He Killed Himself.

Mr. J. R. Gilmore relates that on one occasion, during the civil war, he was riding in a railway train, and had fallen half asleep, when somebody laid a hand on his shoulder and said: "Don't want ter sturb yer, stranger, but there ain't nary brother sittin' place in the whole kear." The speaker was a man of about 40 years, whose strange clothing at once attracted Mr. Gilmore's attention—the gray uniform of a Confederate officer, and in the coat, just over the heart, a rou. d hole scorched at the edges and stained with blood. He proved to be a Union scout.

"How could you manage to live with such a hole there?" asked Mr. Gilmore.

"Oh, I warn't inside of 'em just then, though I warrant he was a likely feller, that war. I certent ter 'a done it, but I hed ter. This war ain't

He took out of his pocket a small miniature. It was a plain circlet of gold attached to a piece of silver ribbon. The side of the rim was slightly clipped, and the upper portion of the ivory was stained with blood, but enough of it was unobscured to show me the features of a young man, with a fine, frank, manly face.

With a feeling akin to horror, I was handing the picture back to the scout, when, in low, stammering tones, he said: "Other side, sir. Look at t'other side."

I turned it over and saw the portrait of a young woman, scarcely more than a child, a most beautiful and engaging face.

With intense loathing I turned upon the scout, and exclaimed: "And you killed that man?"

"Yes, sir. God forgive me! I done kill it. But I couldn't help it. He had me down; he'd cut me thar," turning up his sleeve and showing a deep wound in his arm, "an' thar," removing a bandage and displaying a long gash back of his ear.

"His arm was ter strike agin; in another minute he'd hev clav my brain. I seed hit, sir, an' I fired. God forgive me, I fired! I wouldn't a done hit ef I'd knowed thet," and he looked down upon the face of the sweet young girl, and the moisture came into his eyes. "I'd ler shot jim somewhar but yere, somewhar but yere!" and laying his hand over the rent in his coat, he groaned as if he felt the wound.

With that blood stained miniature in my hand, and listening to the broken words of that ignorant scout, I realized the horrible barbarity of war.—Youth's Companion.

Antique Pockets.

The pocket was invented only a girdle and first of all a purse, or pouch. The ancient Hebrews carried a pouch and the Roman matrons carried a hand bag which originated the modern reticule. They were at first made of netting but later of leather. The Romans came nearer to having a pocket than any people until modern times. A portion of the toga was bound in a fold under the left breast and a protuberance was there formed divided into many folds, which was named sinus, and answered the purpose of a pocket. The Roman matrons concealed valuables about their persons in the upper part of the stroluum, a kind of corset fitting the waist tightly, yet loose at top.

Charlemagne carried a traveling pouch, which was suspended from his person. The Saxons had purses, and the Normans, when they came to England, carried the aumoniere, a little purse for carrying alms for the poor, which was suspended from the girdle. The fashion of carrying the purse in that way, but not for that purpose, has revived in recent years. The general thing was a purse of triangular form, frequently ornamented with beads or trimming, and suspended from the girdle. Bankrupts figuratively gave up their effects to their creditors by putting off the girdle to which the purse and keys of their estate were attached. So long as girdles were worn there was little need of a pocket, for custom and convenience made it a habit to thrust anything within the encircling band.—Good Housekeeping.

Destroying a Fine Moral.

Uncle Clearwater (noted temperance apostle, on a visit to his nephew, looking out of parlor window)—What a fine building that is across the way! Nephew—Yes; but the owner built it out of the blood, the aches and groans of his fellow men, out of the grief of crying children and the sorrow of wailing women.

Uncle C.—Ah! a rumseller, of course! Yes, yes!

Nephew—Oh, no; he's a dentist.—Toronto Grip.

Proving the Judge.

The judge's blood is not very thin, but through force of habit he likes the temperature in his room to be nearly 95 degs. His porter is sometimes late, and if the room is not up to the temperature where it should be a "blowing up" results. Recently, on a chilly morning, the porter overslept. He hurried to the office, arriving but a few minutes in advance of the unusual judge. The temperature was under 50 degs. The porter hurried the stove on, but it was impossible to get the required heat before the judge would arrive. So the porter pressed his thumb against the bulb at the bottom of the thermometer. He was none too soon, for the mercury had no sooner reached a sufficient point than the judge's key was in the lock. The porter hastened away as the judge entered. The judge, as is his invariable custom, went directly to the thermometer, and was pleased to find that the temperature was sufficient, sat down at his desk with a satisfied air and went to work.—Albany Journal.

Life on the Planet Mars.

There are continents, seas, islands, shores, peninsulas, capes, gulfs, clouds, rains, inundations, snows, winters and summers, springs and autumns, days and nights—all are there, exactly as with us. The years are longer, consisting of 687 days, but the seasons in intensity are absolutely the same as ours, for the inclination of its axis is the same. The days are also a little longer, since the diurnal rotation of Mars takes twenty-four hours, thirty-seven minutes and twelve seconds; but the difference is not great. And all this is known with precision. The diurnal rotation, for example, is determined within the tenth of a second.—New York Telegram.

"STEP BY STEP."

The Graduating Exercises of the Charlevoix High School a Brilliant Success.

Four hundred tickets were issued to the patrons and friends of the Charlevoix public schools, in addition to the members of the schools, for the public exercises of the graduating class at Lewis grand opera house on Tuesday evening.

The stage was tastefully decorated, and the class motto, "Step by Step," was made of white flowers, arched, on a green back ground, and surrounded by an almost solid bank of fuschias from Meech & Son's greenhouse. The work of decoration was under the direction of the teachers, assisted by Dr. Frank Brown.

The exercises commenced with a number not on the printed programs. On that day the Charlevoix corset band received their new uniforms, and the boys made their first appearance with them in a pleasing overture, which was altogether quite a surprise to the audience.

The program of exercises was as follows:

Come where the Flowers are Flinging, Fox Fistine Class of '89.

Prayer.....Rev. R. F. Aldrich

How It Secure Social Power.....Address Rev. W. H. McCartney.

When the Roses Bloom Again.....Dwanhaller Vocal Solo by Edith Mason.

Class Motto, "Step by Step".....Oration Clinton B. Whitmoyer.

Zoan of Arc.....Essay Lula O. Carter.

When Life is Brightest.....Cleo Pinault

How Do Others See Us?.....Essay Vocal Duet by Artie Kanagy, Mamie Sec.

Ada M. Litzan.

What We Owe to Government.....Essay Angie S. Wood.

Last Rose of Summer, with variations, Henri Herz Piano Solo by Maggie L. Green.

The Future of America.....Oration Fred M. Green, Valedictorian.

Greeting in the Morning Song.....Leon Bert Fox.

Presentation of Diplomas.....Superintendent Armourer—Vocal Solo, ...Rejdgf Clinton B. Whitmoyer.

Mr. McCartney called the attention of the class to the various lines of "social power," as exemplified in everyday life, and reminded them of the benefits to come from keeping within the lines of honesty, integrity, and Christian fellowship.

Discussing the subject of the class motto, Clinton Whitmoyer showed how all life, all work, and all accomplishments are made up of little things added together, piled up one upon another. In the school the daily proceeds "step by step" through its studies, profiting by the little things in the work. In one's life work, success must come from small advancements retained with vigor and determination.

Lula Carter presented in an interesting manner the chief events in the life of a most interesting person. Though her voice is not strong and clear, every word was distinct, and held the attention of the large audience to the close.

The subject of Ada Litzan's essay is one that interests every person more or less, and particularly those just entering a business or social career. In her treatment of the subject from the standpoint of the schoolgirl, she showed a keen conception of the force of favorable and unfavorable criticisms, coupled with a disposition to rise above any ill feeling from the latter, and to profit by both. "As failures prompt a brave spirit to greater effort, and lead to final success, we may have occasion to be thankful that unfriendly or unjust criticism compels us to stop, ourselves and possibly discover faults which we did not dream of possess ing."

"Angie Wood's conceptions of our civil government are good. She discussed in an interesting and comprehensive manner the causes leading to the formation of our system of government, the purposes and benefits of the government, and the duties of the citizen in supporting and maintaining the government.

Fred M. Green made his estimate of the "Future of America" by a sort of mathematical calculation, based on the results of recent years. The ratio of growth of population, inventions, business methods, etc., of the last generation, continued a hundred years, will show results to astound any person who will stop to figure it up.

In presenting the diplomas, Prof. Enos gave the class some encouragement and good advice, which, if followed, will make them better women, better men, better citizens.

Success to the class of '89.

The reception tendered by the class of '88 to that of '89 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Wood last evening was a most joyous affair.

Mr. A. T. Washburne was elected as chairman of the evening and the following program was furnished:

Instrumental solo.—Luna E. Washburn.

Recitation, "Gradatim."—Josie Litzan.

Essay, Retrospect.—Angie Wood.

At this point Mr. Clinton Whitmoyer came forward and in behalf of of the class of '89 presented Prof. Rhea with a handsome brass clock as a token of their esteem.

Recitation, "Skipper Ireson's Ride," —Lula Carter.

Letters from Miss Phila Wood and Edith Hawkins, absent members of '88 alumni, read by Josie Litzan.

Essay, "Prophecy"—Ada Litzan.

Toast, class '88 to '89.—Jennie Stover. Responded to by Clinton Whitmoyer.

Toast, class '89 to '88. Fred M. Green. Responded to by Anna F. Washburn.

Toast, The Graduates.—Egbert Carpenter. Responded to by R. W. Kane.

Toast, Our Boys and Girls the men and women of the next decade, L. D. Bartholomew. Responded to by Prof. Enos.

Refreshments were served during the evening, and the class, receiving the hearty congratulations of those present, closed the evening program by forming the Alumni Association.

Charlevoix Will Celebrate.

Test of Death.

Many tests have been suggested to determine whether or not life is extinct. A wished-for test has appeared to occur the most recent, and held to be the most reliable, is called the Malpighian hypodermic test. In using it the operator injects one hypodermic syringeful of strong solution of ammonia under the skin of the arm or other convenient portion of the body. If the body be not dead—if there be the faintest circulation—the spirits will produce on the skin, where the point where it was injected, a red patch, on the surface of the raised red spots with pimples; if there be absolute death, there will be produced a brown dark blotch, which is definitely conclusive against possible vitality.—Boston Herald.

Polluted Ice.

Some of us must read up on the recent investigations of Kedzie, Pengree and Prudden, showing that ice taken from polluted streams is not purified by freezing. Kedzie tells us that if a tube of strong containing nothing but table matter or sawdust it will produce diarrhœa. In 1873, at Ryeham, six epidemic books out in a single hotel, and was traced at last to a well from an adjacent pasture. Five of this pond in summer was foul with stinking with putrescent matter. Ice matter, as well as bacteria, is not eliminated by any ordinary degree of cold. Too much of our ice is the recipients of sewage. Ice is the ice age of civilization, and we must have it pure.—St. Louis Democrat.

STORY OF THE DELUGE.

HEARTRENDING SCENES IN CONEMAUGH VALLEY.

William Henry Smith's Graphic Description of the Flood's Awful Approach—Mad Plunge of the Aqueous Avalanche on the City of Conemaugh—How Houses, Everything, Went Down Before the Fierce Niagara—Awful Scenes of Destruction.

Mr. William Henry Smith, General Manager of the Associated Press, was the eye-witness of the awful scenes in Conemaugh Valley on the night of the great calamity. He tells the following story of the flood's devastation:

The fast-line trains that leave Chicago at 3:15 and 3:30 p. m. for the East, reached Pittsburg over a roadway from Pittsburg, which runs in two sections. This train left Pittsburgh on time Friday morning, but was stopped for an hour at Johnstown by reports of a washout ahead. It had been raining heavily for about ten hours, and the sides of the mountains were saturated. A freight piano descending into the valleys. The Conemaugh River, whose bank is followed by the Pennsylvania Railroad for many miles, looked an angry flood nearly bankful. Passengers were informed that a washout had occurred, and that enormous amount of driftwood about rapidly by, and the train pursued its way eastward. At Johnstown there was a long wait, as before stated. The lower stories of many houses were submerged by water, and the upper floors were thronged with people. Much of the second stories of houses were standing up to their knees in water in the streets. A side-track of the railroad had been washed out; loaded cars were on the bridge to keep it steady, and the huge pole of the Western Union Telegraph building was bent over and twisted like a whip lash and several acres were down. The two sections ran to Conemaugh, about two miles the side of Johnstown, and lay there about three hours, when they were moved on to the main track and proceeded to Pittsburg. A dead train was placed in the rear of the first section, and a freight train was run on to a side track on the back of the Conemaugh. The report was that a bridge had been washed out, carrying away two of the tracks, and that only track was tenable. There was a rumor also that the reservoir at South Fork, some five miles up

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Eveline.

JUNE 18.—Wait till Sept. 11, 12, and 13, Bro. Advance!

Mrs. Lon. Sheldon is able to be out again.

Eugene Severance, principal of Ironton school, is visiting this week at East Jordan, and with his cousin in Jordan township.

We understand that J. M. Harris is canvassing this county for book supplies.

Richard May returned home to Boyne Falls last Thursday.

The furnace is again in full blast.

About 25 or 30 of the school mates of Miss Anna Galbraith gave her a surprise party last Thursday evening. The little folks had quite an enjoyable time; the evening enjoyment consisted of music, singing etc. Mr. Severance and Miss Papineau accompanied the party.

We failed to get the Ironton school report promised us for publication this week.

Among the vice presidents to represent each township in the county, N. L. Cash was appointed to represent Eveline, at the 4th of July celebration at Boyne City.

We clip the following from the South Arm correspondence of the Enterprise, which contains the particulars of the death of Miss Ella May Spidel, of this place: "Ella May Spidel, who, for the past six months has been very sick and for the last two of them battling with death, passed away from earth at 5 p. m. Sunday, June 9th, a victim of quick consumption. Ella was a bright and promising young girl of 17 years, well known in South Arm and East Jordan, having attended school in the latter place, and will be much missed by the circle in which she moved. The funeral took place Tuesday at 10 a. m., the services being conducted by the Rev. W. B. Grover." From the locals of the Enterprise: "Ella May Spidel was born at Turkey Creek, Ladrange county, Indiana, Dec. 28, 1871 and died of quick consumption in Eveline township, Charlevoix county, Mich., June 9, 1889. Aged 17 years, 6 months 17 days. Buried in South Arm township."

On Friday, the last day of school at Ironton, a picnic and entertainment was given as announced last week. At about 10 o'clock the grove near the school house was well filled with old and young people who enjoyed themselves with swinging and social chatting until noon, when the well filled dinner baskets were brought forth and soon released of their good things. At 2:30 the bell rung for the entertainment, the speaking was well rendered and much credit is due both teachers and scholars. At the close of the exercises Mr. Severance was presented with two beautiful books. Mr. Wm. Boswell of Boyne City, then took a photograph of the entire school, on the east side of the school house. Both teachers Mr. Eugene Severance and Miss May Papineau have given satisfaction during entire term. There will be a three months vacation. Take all in all, the picnic and entertainment was a success in every feature.

Next Sunday, June 23d, Children's Day will be observed at the M. E. church at Ironton. An interesting program is being prepared.

East Jordan.

From the Enterprise.

Bay City has thrown up the sponge, and acknowledges Chas. Lovett as the champion hoop roller. Clarlie's bride wears the medal on state occasions.

Mr. McMillen's family have packed up and followed him to Pelkey, where they will settle. Mac. is working in the furniture factory, while Dick will probably play the "devil" in some printing office.

Dr. LeFevre, wife and master Sam have East Jordan on Monday next; Doc. to dive into the mysteries of the west in search of a more lucrative field for his abilities, and Mrs. LeFevre and Sammy to visit till a new house is found for them.

The merchants decline to contribute to a fourth of July fund, saying they require the money to pay their taxes, which assessor Fogg has so liberally increased. They recommend those who wish for a celebration, to apply to that gentleman for assistance.

W. Riley, late of Boyne Falls, took possession of the Central House on Monday as landlord. There is to be several good improvements made in the building, such as enlarging the sample room, refloring the office etc. A new sidewalk has already been built in front of the house.

There is a substantial prospect of the members of the Episcopal church here possessing an edifice of their own. The site was donated some time ago by Mr. John Nicholls of Charlevoix, and at the reunion held last week at D. C. Loveday's home, a subscription list headed by the lady members of the society of the Mission of the Redeemer with $175, the results of their labors, was passed 'round, all present putting their names down for such sums as they could afford. The following day the list was carried to others, and at the moment of going to press the total was rapidly approaching $500. This amount will be increased greatly in a short time, and when as much as $800 can be locked upon as certain, the building will be commenced. For $1500 it is calculated to build a church that will be a credit to the community and an ornament to the town.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Charlevoix County Agricultural Society, held at the secretary's office, it was decided to change the dates of the fair to Sept. 11, 12 and 13 next. This will bring the fair the week following Antrim county and the week previous to Traverse county.

Wilson.

Warm and pleasant.

J. R. Vance has bought a horse of Jas. Warden.

F. L. Smith recently purchased a yoke of oxen of W. L. French.

Mosquitoes, gnats and flies, have now appeared to make the life of the wayfaring man (or woman) a burden.

A load of our townspeople went over to Boyne City to trade on Saturday. That town is picking up a little.

Mrs. Caroline Wrisley of Wexford county, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Thos. Shepherd Sr. for a few days.

Sunday school and church services at Afton were not very well attended on Sunday last. We need an earthquake or a flood to rouse people.

German Lutheran services were held at the Newstead house by a minister from abroad on Sunday last.

Hd. W. B. Grover and family have returned to southern Michigan, where they expect to stay some time.

Mr. Fabes Bowen is quite poorly. She had a slight paralytic stroke on Sunday morning but is able to be around again.

"'Tis true, 'tis pity, and pity 'tis, 'tis true." that Sunday fishing parties are getting quite common. Are we degenerating?

By the way Brother Boyne, you will be very fortunate if you secure some encoranda, as ours looks rather thin at present.

Report of school district No.—, Wilson, for two months ending June, 6, Edith Cole teacher. Names of pupils neither absent or tardy.

First month.—Edith Healy, Sam Richardson, Allie DeLong, Oliver Campbell, Willie McGonigal, Glennie McGonigal, Laura Behling, Harry Behling.

Second month.—Edith Healy, Sam Richardson, Laura Behling, Harry Behling, Willie Knop, Ina Campbell, Willie McGonigal, Glennie McGonigal.

Boyne City.

JUNE 17.—It has not rained in Boyne City in three days.

Don't be in too big a hurry to leave northern Michigan. R. E. Neville and family who moved away from here last fall are back again. They wintered in Arizona, tried to their satisfaction the climate of California, and now return

The steam barge Westover of Milwaukee, took on Friday 200 cords of wood from the docks here and at Bay Springs for John Pickering.

The wonderful Cookman, and Adventure of Detroit loaded with hard and soft wood lumber at White's dock the last of the week; the Elida, of Milwaukee also loaded with slab wood at the same time, and to-day the Cuba is being loaded with bark by J. C. Schaub.

Wm. Boswell the Boyne City photographer is preparing to build a ground floor gallery in this place.

In refering to the appointment of Samuel B. Thatcher as postmaster at Boyne, the Citizen says "he was a soldier in the late war, and it was that fact alone that gave him the appointment" but Mr. Citizen how about neighbor DeBart? He too served through the late war, by reason of which he is no longer young. "Consistency thou art a jewel."

Mrs. J. C Schaub is seriously ill.

We understand that some of our thrifty citizens subscribed largely to celebration fund, that we may show our patrotism on the 4th of July. Come and help us.

Inwood.

JUNE 18.—Farmers are pleased to see the sunshine again.

Miss Mary O'Brien returned home Saturday from Elk Rapids, where she has been attending school.

The recent rains have done considerable damage to the crops, especially the corn.

Mrs. M. E. Wilson and son of Pontiac are the guests of Mrs. O. D. Hilton this week.

Mr. Nassau Burns and Miss Jennie Cook were united in matrimony on Tuesday, June 11. They have the congratulations and good wishes of the community.

Barnard.

JUNE 18.—Farmers are busy putting in their corn and potato crops.

About 75 people attended the Children's Day service here Sunday.

Preparations are being made for a picnic here, June 28th.

The Grangers will organize a lodge here Wednesday evening.

Miss Hortense Bennett is visiting friends here this week.

Report of Barnard school for the month ending June 7th, 1889. Pupils neither absent nor tardy, Willie Trimble, Effie Trimble, Edmund Bogart, Luther Trimble, and Willie Meggison.

Elsworth.

JUNE 18.—Benj. Madell has the lumber on the ground for a new house.

H. Brush of Alba, is here for a few days on business.

Miss Addie Rogers of Atwood, returned to her home last Sunday.

Louis Deline went to Boyne City to day on business.

H. A. B.—The water lilies are begining to bloom; come and see them.

Merit Wins.

We desire to state to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as fast, or give such uniform satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. F. G. Hines & Co., Druggists. 1

A Narrow Escape.

Col. W. E. Moore, of Brooklyn, came home one evening feeling a peculiar tightness in the chest. Before retiring, he tried to draw a long breath but found it almost impossible. He suffered for hours from pneumonia, and the doctors gave him up. Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption saved him and he is well to-day. Sold by G. W. Beaman, druggist.

NEIGHBORS.
Your name is Helen: are you dark or fair?
Deep blue your eyes, or black as shadows are
That lie in woods at midnight? Tell me, sweet,
What form you wear—large, medium or petite?
I never saw you, nor you me, I ween,
Yet I have written on the self same sheet
Are printed to the last new magazine.

Talk would issue, fair neighbor, if your song
Came from the woodland, or the city's throng.
From mountain fastness, or beside the sea!
Breathed it in chambered solitude, or free
As birds on wing, amidst some sylvan scene?
I pray you grow acquaint, and let us be
Neighbors in thought as in the magazine.

So may I ask if you are deeply blue
(As to the base, I mean) or just a true,
Bright little woman—nothing Bostonese.
Whose song is song without a thought to please
Aught but the singer? May I read between
The lines, and ask such things as these,
Hoping they'll print them in the magazine?

But hope deferred—dost in the weary time
Develop acceptance and the printed rhyme
Make your sweet heart, like my old battered seat,
Throbbing upside, and curse the whole
Confounded tribe of editors whose lose,
Thinkest some scribe would not as once enroll
Our burning thoughts in their neat magazine?

Yet I will continue each month ere long,
Press healing articles to lute-a-bear,
Each page, lest haply they had lit your verse
Between some dreary kind of prosel—or, worse,
Lapped it in flea to pel a dog's end, that Miss jack your cases, the border poet's current
Also, for sending a magazine!

I question idly. Chance, and chance alone,
Does not make my verse and yours has thrown.
But, let us hope we'll be in print
Long after the critics have ceased to jeer,
And write those lines—oh, may they not be cold
Or twenty dollars from some magazine.

$77,000 Profit Per Day.

The sugar trust is reported to be manufacturing twenty-five thousand barrels of refined sugar per day, at a profit of $3.50 a barrel—$77,000 a day, or $2,200,000 a month. The capital of the trust is $50,000,000, about one-half of which is water. The profits on the entire sugar are over fifty per cent. a year. Sugar was seven and one half cents a pound before the trust was formed; it is now ten cents to the consumers.

In the first clause of the agreement between the combined robbers forming the trust one of their objects was to "reduce the expense, increase economy of administration and to reduce the cost of refining, thus enabling the price of sugar to be kept as low as is consistent with a reasonable profit."

This false pretense of "a reasonable profit" is signed by all the sugar companies, by men who stand high in the commercial circles and in the churches, who contribute money to convert the heathen, and who have entered into a conspiracy to plunder their fellow men.

For a time after this trust was formed, and others like it, no politicians or journals had the courage to defend them. They were left alone to their hired attorneys. Now however, many high tariff advocates, like Andrew Carnegie, have came to the rescue. "The bugaboo of trusts," is what Mr. Carnegie christened his defense of these looting combinations. A bankers journal says "the foolmoney" both newspapers and "financiens" is the one who opposes them. And a scientist journal refers to them with a chuckle of delight declaring that "the trust is the John the Baptist of socialism, its forerunner, who proclaims it and makes its path straight. It is of the nature of the irony of late that the very capitalists, who declare that socialism are the true disturbers of the peace, that their doctrine are un-American, that they are social heretics, long haired dreamers, who should be rounded up into a mortar and fired into kingdom come, are the ones who have been forced to resort to socialism in order to save themselves from ruin with which the old competitive system threatened them."

Both the protectionist and the socialist are consistent in defending trusts, for both advocate the same principles—protectionists being governmental interference with industry for the benefit of a few, and socialism demanding like interference for the benefit of the many; but, in both cases, the true course for the government to pursue is, "hands off" and let the people take care of themselves and their industries. The sugar trust could not rob the people if the government was not back of it.—Jackson Patriot.

Concords, Catawbas and Niagaras. The small man stepped beside so as to free his fruitively pulled off a bunch in a basket of Concords, put it in his coat and walked, he tried a Catawba, and began on

The fruit vender, who was with a customer, now saw the man's action with a shrug. "How much for grapes?" inquiring, seeing a lady. "Twenty cents a basket." "Too much," said the away two more Concords. "Are you a wholesale dealer."

"No."

"Own a vineyard, wine?"

"No."

"Where did you learn 'Grover's Jersey?'

"Well, see here, old man, you get about a pound and a half of grapes, you know how hard, and then you don't want no grapes around here."—New York Sun.

TERRIBLE DROWNING ACCIDENT.

Two Young Couples Swept Over a Dam in the Schuylkill.

At Philadelphia two young couples whose identity has not yet been established, met tragic death on the Schuylkill river. Several boxes filled with pleasure-seekers were out on the river in Fairmount park, when one of the boats in which the two young couples were seated was caught in the current. The occupants made strong efforts to turn the boat, but were unsuccessful, and in a few moments the little craft with its terrified occupants was gliding swiftly with the current toward the dam at the water-works. The girls screamed for help, but none could reach them, and a moment later the boat was swept over the dam. All the occupants were drowned. The unfortunate people are supposed to have been strangers in the city.

TWO BOYS KILLED.

Amateur Engineers Perish by a Boiler Explosion.

A foolhardy experiment of two Philadelphia lads of a mechanical turn of mind resulted in both boys being killed and two other persons injured. The boys, Harry and William Jesor, aged 15 and 17, employed their spare time in running a small engine, which they were trying to operate by an ice-cream freezer when the accident occurred. They generated their steam in an old range boiler set up in the corner of the yard and connected with the engine by pieces of gas-pipe. William was leaning the fireplace with bricks, when the boiler exploded, throwing him under a shed and fracturing his skull. He died within an hour. Harry was thrown against a fence and instantly killed. Little Harry Knipe, who was watching the experiment from a shed, was cut under the eye, and Mrs. Flora Knipe was severely scalded about the back.

THE CROP OUTLOOK.

A Favorable Outlook in the Northwest.

The subjoined comprehensive report by Signal Corps of the Government Agricultural Department, says: "The weather is generally favorable for growing crops in the South, except in Tennessee and Kentucky, where the rainfall for the entire have caused some damage to wheat and cotton. In the spring-wheat region of Minnesota and Dakota, crops have been improved by recent rains. In the principal corn States, including Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, the weather has been favorable and has made rapid growth. In Michigan and Ohio the growth of corn has been retarded, owing to continued wet weather. The harvesting of winter wheat is well advanced in the central portion of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, and the work has been retarded by frequent rains.

A BETTER FEELING.

The Business Outlook Such as to Give Encouragement.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade say:

"There is a better feeling, with larger transactions, in most lines of business, and the Presidential election has not prevented a revival of trade which many anticipated would follow it quickly. At Milwaukee continued wet weather has caused a good deal of speculation in wheat, and outside of speculative operations and those in lumber, there is little doing. At Cleveland, with improved weather, trade is reviving, and in a less degree at Cincinnati. At Pittsburg, from every report to the contrary, trade is quiet, but generally moderate, with no change in prices. At Boston, the business prospects in the Northwest, so that great interest is taken in the Boston market, are better this section.

"The large shipments of gold are surprising to those who have expected to see the money tendency to the west of the Bank of France and the large exports of specie from New York. Some have seemed to apprehend that the country would be drained of its money, but this is not necessary. Of course, they fear, merchandise exports will be less than last year, because of the failure of the crops in Europe, but if anything of the sort occurs these changes would leave a heavy excess of exports over imports to be paid for in balances or securities of gold. The business alliance which has been formed between the West and the East, with the corresponding week of last year the figures were 204.

FLOODS IN KANSAS.

Overflowing Rivers Destroy Life and Property.

Reports have been received of destruction by Kansas by storm and flood. Allen County has suffered very severely from floods in the Neosho River and its principal tributaries, all the streams being out of their banks, flooding the bottoms for a mile or more on either side. There has been no loss of life or of live stock, as those living on the low land were warned in time, but hundreds of acres of wheat which was almost ready to be promised a very large yield will be almost a total loss. The St. Louis, Wichita & Western Railroad bridge across Rock Creek has been undermined. Nearly a quarter of a mile of track has been washed out, and, while the road bed has been seriously damaged, it is expected that the bridges and culverts along the wagon roads have been washed out. A violent rainstorm on headwaters of the Walnut River caused an immense flood to reach Augusta and Eldorado. The waters washed away 1,200 feet of track for the Missouri Pacific, and carried away twenty residences. Four farmers were drowned a few miles north of Eldorado, East of Eldorado, on branches of the Walnut River, the Missouri Pacific lost six bridges. At Augusta 300 feet of Santa Fe track was lost and the bridge of the Frisco was carried away. Great damage was done to wheat in the rich bottoms. It is estimated that over a million bushels was destroyed. Reports from other places in the adjacent country tell of great damage to crops, also some loss of life.

MARTINSON IDENTIFIES BURKE.

He Was the Employer in Hauling the Carlisle Furniture.

Martin Burke, alias Delaney, has been positively identified at Winnipeg by Expressman Martinson, of Chicago, as the man who hired him to haul the furniture from the rooms at 117 Clark street, Chicago, to the Carlisle cottage in Lake View. The identification was most complete. In order that no undue advantage should be taken of the prisoner he was placed in a crowd of nearly one hundred good looking men. Martinson was allowed to see him. Martinson at once recognized him as his employer at the time mentioned.

WRECK OF A MAIL TRAIN.

Three Men Killed and a Half-Dozen Others Badly Injured.

The second section of the west-bound fast mail on the Pittsburg, Cincinnati & St. Louis Railroad was wrecked at New Cumberland Junction, near Steubenville, Ohio. Two men were instantly killed, one was fatally wounded and eight others were more or less hurt. The train at the time of the accident was running at the rate of sixty-five miles an hour. The track has been in bad condition since the flood in the first of weeks before, and such a high rate of speed has only been possible at great risk. When nearing the junction on a share curve three postal cars left the track and went over the embankment, killing two, and serious wounding all but two of those in them. The list of killed and injured is as follows:

Killed—J. H. Payne, Indianapolis, Ind.; John Bailey, Edinburgh, Ill.; S. R. McFarland, Mansfield, Pa. Wounded—W. S. Bolton, New York; Thos. Ryan, Chicago; Jas. J. E. Mathews, Indianapolis; Elmer Bonner, New Cumberland, W. Va.; Jas. Bonner, New Cumberland, W. Va.; Edward Ferguson, Ill.; A. E. Hunter, Minerville, Ohio; Mont Schenck, Steubenville, Ohio. McFarland and Schenck are brakemen. The rest are all postal clerks.

BURKE INDICTED.

The Grand Jury Finds It Was One of the Cronin Conspirators.

Martin Burke, alias Delaney, arrested at Winnipeg for complicity in the Cronin murder, has been indicted by the special Grand Jury at Chicago investigating the case. The additional evidence needed to satisfy the Grand Jury was furnished by Hakes Morcusan, the Swedish expressman who transferred the furniture from 117 Clark street to 1887 Lake View avenue. When the group picture of Irishmen around Tim Cronin's monument in Mount Olivet Cemetery, taken at the time of its dedication, was shown him, Mortesen thought that Burke's miniature was that of one of the men who hired him to transport the furniture. Then the photograph engraged from this picture was shown him, and in regard to tale larger photograph Mortesen was more certain.

PENNSYLVANIA AND LICENSE.

Prohibition Defeated in the Keystone State by a Large Majority.

Pennsylvania voted on the 19th inst. on the question of the adoption of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, and returns from sixty-four of the sixty-seven counties show a majority of 164,165 against the amendment. The counties not heard from are Cameron, Clinton and Elk. The contest voted also on the question of the adoption of an amendment providing for a court of four-tiny counties—not including Allegheny—and the majority of 45,000 in favor of it. The rural districts have voted steadily against this amendment, and, unless the most conservative estimates are wrong, the poll tax will remain in force.

RHODE ISLAND FOR LICENSE.

The People Repeal the Prohibitory Amendment.

The fifth amendment to the Constitution of Rhode Island, which is a prohibitory amendment—was repealed by a vote of 5,402 more than the three-fifths of the total vote necessary to carry the amendment. The question before the people was the adoption of an amendment repealing the prohibitory amendment adopted three years ago. The vote stands: Approve, 28,449; reject, 9,885. In 1886, when the amendment was adopted, the vote, which was about 16,000 smaller, stood: Approve, 15,316; reject, 9,230. The vote will be officially counted on or before the first Monday in June, as required by proclamation on or before July 20.

AN IMPORTANT "SUSPECT."

Martin Burke's Photograph Identified by Many Persons.

Martin Burke, the young Irishman under arrest at Winnipeg on one of the murderers of Dr. Cronin, is perhaps the most important "suspect" who has yet been placed under lock and key. His photograph has been identified by the Carlisle at Chicago as the gentleman who hired a wagon and carried the cottage on North Ashland avenue, and Hakan Mortensen, the expressman, as the man who employed him to carry the furniture from the flat at 117 South Clark street to the cottage.

ANNALS OF TANGLETON!

To the Dere Reedin Publick: I never in all my life saw a gossip. I skon such a gossip—an if I thought it was nothing like gossip to relish sum of my stored-up memerys of our town an people, why, nothin could hire me to tite these papers.

It kinder kills time in the long evenings, when I set here, my lonesome, with only my cat for company; for who ever kin an old maid that doesn't have a cat?

I hev know wimmen that was sorry the hardest bin content to stay single, an pin there faith to dumb critters.

Our town wasent allus called Tangleton. Old Jerry Smith was among the first settlers, an he was rich and owned most of the land and hossed things, so it was Smithville in its infancy, so to speak.

Before the war it dident amount to much; but after the fitin begun, an the farmers found it a good place to ship thare crops, bizness jest took a boom.

Runnin along on the north side was a big bluf, an near the foot of it was the railroad track, an about a mile to the south was the river. Jest midway between them was the town.

Main St. begun at the rale-road an run strate down to the river, but in early times there was very lit bilitin beyond the canal.

The biggest store for a long spell was kep by Doc Williams an Miles Alexander, the Doc was a quiet sort of man, but Mr. Alexander was a large, jovial feeling man, an goodnesse! how he did like to hear himself talk!

The kep a barl of whisky in the cellar, an strangers went down an helped themselves. An when they hadent bin of men tha was, them farmers from the Bend jest thare.

Then down near the canal thare was another store kep by a firm—Ricketts and Brown. Tha, too, was down with the whisky, and got thare share of trade.

Main street begun to bild up fast, with all sorts of stores. The rich was mostly bilt up an from the ground, an a body had to run up a lot of steps to get into em.

Eany one not blessed with sense wher he sat at home thinkin he never minded the steps.

Old Jerry Smith was a queer sort; when sum one wood ask him wha he want to by a lot, the old man wood mp an say thes price of it. I kin jest hit chance of selling: unless I'll know jest how I am faced with the hole.

With old Jerry to hed the fitt with sum big fogeys, the Catholics soon got numerous enough to bild a church, an tha put it on the hill. Nor long after a school house was bilt not far from it.

But it was awful hard work to clime up thare every day.

That home did dosty till the town begun to bum. Then a man came an a new district sooth of the canal an bilt a school-house thare, an sumtimes thare was a mesin in tha school house. But most of the preechin was din in the Town Hall.

When the war was endid an our men folks got home—all that was left to cum—thare bin considerable more. How fast the bildins sprung up—jest like mushrooms!—an it must be sad, sum of em hadent much better faults qualities.

Thare was lodges for Masons an Oddfellows—thare wus lots of odd fellows in our town, but I dident hev time to gettin up a lodge—an a temperance society.

So much free whisky rather got our town a bad name, an we was goin to try our level best to reform it. But Tangleton was a good grane market, an the farmers wood cum thare an hav thare dram, too; so we hed to content ourselves with tryin to save our own boys an men.

In the Town Hall, the Methodist sisters used to pleasy yung men wot temperance, an when the Baptists hed it tha preached up water, but somehow tha found it hard to fite grain whisky. Sum of our folks wus gettin tired of town hall and skool-house meetins, an as tha was makin money, tha thought tha wood go out on some hills in religion. He tell about that part next time.

JUNIPER BERRY.

The First Greenback.

Gaddis, a Cincinnati hack-driver, treasures a dollar bill of the first greenback issue. The Enquirer of that city tells that Salmon P. Chase, while Secretary of the Treasury, visited Cincinnati.

"Shine, sir!" shouted Gaddis, then a bootblack, to a stranger in the Burnet House lobby.

"Do your prettiest," said the gentleman with a smile, "and I'll give you my photograph."

The boy did not fall in very heartily with the proposition, as he had no particular use for photographs of his customers, but he concluded to earn the money he took the job. At the finish, the gentleman handed the boy a brand new one-dollar bill.

"That's my photograph," said he, walking away.

The boy glanced from his customer to the bill in momentary perplexity. Then the strong resemblance which his customer bore to the vignette in one corner of the greenback caught his eye, and he knew that the Secretary of the Treasury had been having a little fun with him at his own expense.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS.

EVENTS AND INCIDENTS THAT HAVE LATELY OCCURRED.

The Aim of Legislation.

An Extra Session to Be Called—The Minority to Be Threatened by Radical Revision of the Rules and Many Vicious Measures Enacted.

(Washington special to Chicago Herald.)

One of the leading members of the House has just had a talk with the President in regard to the holding of a special session of Congress, and he found Mr. Harrison fully convinced of the importance of having a beginning made before the first Monday in December. The President said he intended to call the special session for October 15. The Republican programme is an extensive one, and the country will find it an expensive one also. The dominant party's solicitude for an extra session means simply that the leaders feel compelled to make an effort to pay the debts they contracted last fall, and they know that with their narrow margin in the House they can hardly expect to accomplish so much in a session of Congress beginning at the usual time.

The tariff is constantly urged as the reason for an extra session, but this is little more than a pretense. The moneyed Republicans, who want the revenues reduced, are not numerous enough to secure an extra session. While a good portion of the Republicans want to raise the revenue by other duties, they are too well contented with the present situation to bother themselves much about an extra session. The Republicans also first at the prospect of the Democratic House. To do this they want to change the rules so that the majority will be more power, and then they want to unseat a number of Democrats, and so that Republican contestants. But the rules cannot easily be changed.

The Republicans have talked over their programmes among themselves and have decided that it is partly dissolved by the events of the last long session. It is not to force the fight on the changes of rules, but to start in on some legislation that will provoke the Democratic opposition, and let the House in this way drift into a dead-lock. After this has been kept up a while it is calculated that there will begin to be a demand from the country for a change of rules that will enable the majority to legislate. The Republicans encouraged the filibustering of last long session of Congress in the expectation, which was partially realized, that the result would be such a demand for a change of rules that would enable them in doing what they pleased when they got into power. After the Republicans have forced Democrats into opposition and have made the country look upon them as obstructionists their opportunity will have arrived, and they will fix up a set of rules by which the minority will be completely shorn of power. After this and they will break the Democratic filibuster and adopt rules by one of which Republican Speakers have always been anxious, and they expect to justify themselves before the country on the plea that the House was dead-locked and that something had to be done to enable it to exercise any of its functions.

The Republicans will then be in position to go on with their legislative programme, in which the revision of the tariff in the interest of those manufacturers who formed last year's campaign fund is merely an incident. There will be a pension for a general scaling up of pensions and a general service pension bill. There will be a bill for the free coinage of silver, a Blair educational bill for the purpose of breaking down local self-government and fastening the grip of the Republican administration upon the South; and to make the latter even more certain there will be the piece de resistance of the Republican menu—an election law which will give the Republican administration full control over all elections in the South. This is the scheme which the Republican leaders have been talking over with the President, and on which they and he are agreed. It is the knowledge that no such programme can be carried through without bitter and prolonged resistance that makes the Republicans impatient for an extra session. As they look at the matter, the popular verdict last fall was that the present tariff was all right, and they would not regard, and do not generally regard, the revision of custom house duties as a matter that there is any haste about. But the silencing of the minority through a change of rules and the subjection of Southern local elections to the White House on the Bill Chandler plan will take time, and it is on this account that Congress is to meet six weeks earlier than usual.

Wool.

Last year, at this time, the "groaning unutterable" of wool-buyers of the Republican persuasion were heard, to the effect that under a Democratic administration, and the tendency of the Mills bill, the price of wool would be low. The manufacturing interest and the farmer was cast to the wolf to run. If all this was changed, and the protection party succeeded, wool would bear a good price, and the farmers could roll in woolly wealth. Whether persuaded by this talk or not, the granger States voted for and elected the President whose administration was to produce this happy change. The Mills bill was defeated, and another put in the way of passing which promised more protection on wool. The Treasury Department, also, began the attempt to "bull" the price by drawing the lines on waste and woolen goods tighter, bringing certain classes under higher duties. The season comes round again, and instead of the promised thirty or thirty-five cents per pound, we see wool sticking at the old price of last year, and moving slowly. The same old rule prevails—the manufacturers must buy a part of their wool abroad, where they can make the price, they will endeavor to recover the excess they have to pay there, by paying the less at home, where they can and do make the price. The wool-buyers are silent this year. Like boys caught in mischief, they have nothing to say.—Portland Sentinel.

TO SUCCEED MR. OBERLY.

Thomas J. Morgan, One of Harrison's Old Indiana Lieutenants, Made Indian Commissioner.

(Washington special)

The number of men whom President Harrison has appointed to other places than they wanted is conspicuously large. In most of these cases there is no reason known to the public why, as long as they were to be appointed, they were not selected for some of the places they sought. The President has added to this list the name of T. J. Morgan, of Rhode Island, who is the Superintendent of Schools in his State and who was recently appointed Commissioner of Indian Affairs. After a careful search for an Indiana man to put in the office now held by Mr. Oberly, he found Mr. Morgan in Rhode Island. In addition to the claim of Indiana to be the first in the further advantage of having been a Lieutenant in the President's regiment, and of being a soldier in the war, it was concerned, there was no occasion in the office of Indian Affairs why the selected himself with so much industry, intelligence and success to the work of his office as Mr. Oberly has during the eight months he has held the position, and the President has been appealed to by friends of the Indians all over the country to rise above partisan considerations in this one case and retain in charge of the Indians a man whose fitness was established, although he was a Democrat, instead of intrusting the care of the nation to some one whose qualifications were problematical. It has happened in a Republican. The President might possibly have disregarded the claims of the Republican party in this office, but he could not disregard the claims of the Harrison party.

Protection in New England.

A manufacturing company from Delaware, Ohio, recently sent circulars to dealers for a contract to furnish the iron to build a 330 feet of fence on a new bridge at Boston. The fact is significant as showing the factor which the tariff is becoming in the iron trade. It also serves to more forcibly impress upon the iron men of Massachusetts the obstacles which the tariff places in the way of profitably conducting their business in that State. The tariff on coal and the tariff on ore have crowded the Massachusetts iron industry out of the wall, and the coal and iron barons of Pennsylvania have reaped the benefit. Now, a Republican protection also to meet, New England iron men will be worse off than ever. In 1880 New England produced 170,000 tons of rolled iron and steel; in 1887 only 102,000 tons, a falling off of 40 per cent. From 1880 to 1887 50 per cent. of the rolling mills of Maine died, 20 per cent. in Connecticut, 50 per cent. in Rhode Island and 36 per cent. in Massachusetts. The time is rapidly approaching when the lowest demand in any part of the country for the iron raw materials will come from New England.—Detroit Free Press.

A Proverb for Consideration.

Mr. Wanamaker is now engaged in the examination of the question whether less work can be done on Sunday in any of the offices under his control. We respectfully ask Mr. Wanamaker to consider the following statement made by his chief and binding on himself: "Only the interest of the public service should suggest removals from office." This statement was meant as a promise to obtain votes, and did obtain them, and Mr. Wanamaker holds his own place in consequence. The promise has been broken in his department since he took possession in the average about 900 times a week. Would it not be well to reduce the amount of this evil work done on week days before taking up the Sabbatarian matter? There is an old proverb that ought to be of some authority with this administration and cannot be too soon considered: "A righteous man hateth lying, but a wicked man is loathsome and cometh to shame."—New York Times.

Democratic Gains in Indiana.

The returns from the elections of School Superintendents in all the counties of the State have been received here, and gains for the Democrats are conceded. Two years ago the elections resulted in the choice of forty-two Democrats and fifty Republicans. In the elections of Monday the Democrats secured forty-nine Superintendents, the Republicans forty-two, and the Independents one, a net gain of nine for the Democrats and a Republican loss of ten.—Indianapolis Special.

The successful experiment of a steamer built expressly for carrying oil in bulk from New York to Rotterdam opens up a new field in lake freights. The new steamer was built at New Castle and is 304 feet long with 3,500 tons capacity. Her oil pumps are of the Worthington type and their delivering capacity 600 tons per hour. The great lakes offer a fine opportunity for carrying oil in bulk, and now that the trial has been made and proved satisfactory it is likely steamers and sail craft built expressly for the trade will soon find their places in the inland of marine.

"Protection fills the dinner pail," is what Carnegie, the great steel baron, told his men in the campaign last fall, when he wanted them to all vote the republican ticket. The other day when he cut the wages of his operatives 20 per cent and compelled every man to sign an agreement to accept the reduction for three years, he didn't explain how the dinner pail would be filled during that time.—Grand Rapids Leader.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Salt, druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best medicine. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony—this the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half a dollar a bottle at F. G. Hipp & Co.'s drug store. 2

The Cane's Use.

No Fears for a Famine.

It is claimed that a great deal of the western corn crop is being used for fuel, the farmers burning it in their stoves instead of using coal. This is encouraging to drought stricken Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin, for if they can burn corn in the stoves instead of using it for food there will be no famine in those states, for the corn crop is so large that even if the farmers should burn all the corn they could not consume the immense quantity of corn that is left over from last year. The fact that the corn is being used for fuel in the western states is a good sign for the farmers, for it shows that they are not in need of the corn for food, and that they have plenty of other kinds of food to live upon, and that they are not in need of money to buy other kinds of food with. The fact that the corn is being used for fuel also shows that the farmers are not in need of money with which to buy fuel with, and that they are able to burn their corn instead of being compelled to sell it for what it will bring in order to raise money with which to buy fuel with. The fact that the western farmers are able to burn their corn in their stoves instead of being able to sell it for what it will bring is a good sign for the farmers, for it shows that they are not in need of money with which to buy other things with, and that they are able to live on their farms without being compelled to sell their corn for what it will bring in order to raise money with which to buy other things with. The fact that the western farmers are able to burn their corn in their stoves instead of being able to sell it for what it will bring is a good sign for the farmers, for it shows

PRAY MUCH.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Pray much! God loves a sweet, independent spirit.
That owes itself too weak to walk alone.
Sometimes to ways mysterious and unknown.
Their answers come: but surely as the light
Hears the calm calling, and dispels the night,
So do those blessed messengers on high
Hear when we cry.

Pray much! The friends with whom we hold joyous fellowship
Exert a subtle influence hour by hour.
Turn often, then, with soulful supplications
To those celestial counsels. By their power
Shall we be lifted, if we choose to be lifted.
That by the strength of very many falls;
Then shall become a victor in the field
When others yield.

Pray much! Each day allow thyself a season
For close companionship with unseen aims;
Put by the world, thy pride, thy stubborn reason;
Keep nothing but humility and love.
As one is charged by magnets, so thy soul
Will be drawn upward by the centrals real
Have all its wanderings; till it glows with faith
Like a star, and conquers death.

MERIDEN, CONN.

ONE ARM—TWO SLEEVES.

BY ALEN. DUKE BAILIE.

In the beautiful Roanoke valley of Virginia the Pryor family had lived for a century, respected as ever they were, but the fortunes of war had left them but little of their former fortune of money. One treasure they possessed, however, in an only child, a daughter, upon whom her romantic father had inflicted the name of Aretha.

This was too much for the good people of that section, and as she was such a bright, rosy-polly little kitten of a creature, "Pass" she was called by her father, and "Pass" she was to all her friends and neighbors.

Adjoining the Pryvear estate was that of old man Holmes, and Walter, his son, was as brave and ambitious a young fellow as ever carried heart, eyes, and tongue in a most presentable anatomy. He was not satisfied with the humdrum, sleepy life of the village, and when offered a position, at sixteen years of age, in a great machine shop in the North, he eagerly say, we don't want no gal around here."—New Yo

A LAND OF STRAWBERRIES.

BY O. L. C.

It was not a good type of the Canton Seminary students, yet he was one of them who, at table set for ten but occupied by only about half so many, by intriguing and misrepresentation of appetites succeeded in having all the surplus strawberries passed to him, and with a voracity that bespoke a carnal mind, devoured all.

That night, when he came to Dreamland, he found it flooded with strawberries. There were great cities in which people did nothing but eat, buy, and sell strawberries. Mobs stood him with strawberries. He fled, and in fleeing, he ran into a garden of strawberries. His feet became entangled in the vines, and he was became serpents that coiled about him and devoured him. And again, he was running across a great plain and a huge strawberry fell from the heavens and crushed him. But he came into existence again and found himself fleeing before a frightful monster, and roar! It is overtaking him. The earth suddenly yawns beneath him—he is falling, falling, falling until he lands in a pit of strawberries. He writhes and struggles and shoots in terrible agony, and finally is smothered in strawberries.

But no amount of horror can annihilate his individuality, and he dies a thousand and ten horrible deaths. Finally the great day of reckoning comes and he is condemned—to eat strawberries forever.

Integrity.

"Why is it that it is the good men who go wrong?" asks an exchange. This question is a favorite of the same stamp as one that was formerly current: "Why is it that ministers are so often scapegraces?" The latter has been shown to be grossly unfair in its implication that ministers' sons are, as a whole, unworthy of their fathers and of their training. The reverse is the case. There are exceptions, but these are rare in comparison with the number of sons of ministers who are useful and honored citizens, many of them possessing the noble calling of their fathers.

So when we are asked: "Why is it that it is the good men who go wrong?" the answer is that the inquiry is misleading. Men who are reputed to be good do go wrong, in many cases, but these are few in comparison to the number of reputed men who do not go wrong. It is no surprise when it is found that a man who does not lead a good name does something dishonest or unworthy, because in this case the expected happens, and there is not a "going wrong," but a further pursuit of it. The good man by repute—and the better he is reputed to be the more surprise and shock if he does not behave as he is reputed to be—can be trusted, and when we hear of one who has proved faithless we think that his reputation was not deserved, or that his moral fiber has not been tested. Men who are upright and honest—honest with himself as well as toward others—does not go far wrong in his calling.

A reputation for integrity is one which no man can afford to be without. But the reputation is not the main thing. This is to deserve it. It is now by right doing, and is kept in the same way. Once established, it is the best letter of credit a young man can have. Without it he cannot hope to succeed. It is the foundation of strict integrity. It is needless to say that the world was astounded.

Rubber Postmark Stamps.

The Postoffice Department insists upon the use of the iron stamps furnished to most postoffices. The fine ones used in the city offices are well enough, because during cold weather they are made to tire heat as well as during mild weather by means of continuous heat fed to great furnaces. But take in the great majority of offices, especially in the North, and 20 degrees or 40 degrees below zero is as congenial to printers' ink at 6 or 7 o'clock in the morning, and, again, there is not one Postmaster in a hundred who can use printers' ink satisfactorily, with all the advantages in his favor. The rubber stamps work down, back and forth, he paces, not sensible where he directed his steps, until he found himself on Waterloo Bridge, seated in a recess, trying to cool his face by pressing it against the wet stone balustrade. It was raining, but he did not know it. Then there crept over him the dread that the end of the comedy might change the tide of success. He rose and crept back to the theater; the fifth act was on; there was an omnious silence. * * * The house shook with peal after peal of laughter at the inimitable manner of Mathews. And every fiber of the young author quivered responsively. In a few moments after this the curtain descended. The author had responded again and again to the enthusiastic calls and recalls of the public, when a strange uproar commenced—a din amidst which it seemed impossible to discern what the audience wanted. —Dion Boucicault, in North American Review.

IN Dr. B. W. Richardson's lethal chamber, in London, 100,000 homeless dogs have been put to death painlessly, with five affected with rabies. A lethal muzzle for dogs has been constructed, to be used in the streets by the police, and also a similar muzzle for horses.

"MARY," asked Charles, "what animal dropped from the skies?" "The rain, dear," was the whispered reply.

She must go.

But she did not, for the strain proved too much, and when she reached her home, brain fever prostrated her for weeks.

Old Father Holmes made the trip of his life and went to look for his boy. The wife had died some six months before, and he did not return now to write, so they knew nothing of Walter, and there was little but sorrow in the Puryvar household.

Youth helped Pass to again recover in a measure, and she moved listlessly about her home and its duties, ever looking and longing for what it seemed would never come.

It was nearly five months after the departure of old Holmes that one evening she slowly sauntered down the river path where she had met and so often wandered with Walter, her thoughts and heart all full of love and sadness for him, now; her eyes dimmed with tears and her mind far away, when she felt an arm clasped about her waist and knew in that second—even before she could turn her face around—that she was in the embrace of her promised husband.

She did turn, with upraised arms to clasp about his neck in welcome joyous beyond words, when she was staggered by the sight that met her eyes.

It was Walter, her Walter, but what a week; no glorious curls were on that shaven head, his face was pale as death, his cheeks and form shrunken, his eyes dim, and at his side hung an empty sleeve.

He saw the look of terrible astonishment with which the girl regarded him, and, losing his grasp he fell back a pace, saying:

"I beg your pardon. I forgot what a fragment of my former self I now am. Of course you——"

"Oh, Walt! My Walt! Don't talk so, my poor, poor boy," and her arms were about him and she was crying over and kissing him in a strange medley of sorrow and joy.

She soon reassured him that her love was true as of old, and then listened to his story of how he had been in charge of a special train bearing the President and Directors of his road with a large party of friends; how an excursion train, run in violation of orders had collided with them; how he had managed to save his party but been crushed in the ruins of his engine, suffering injuries to his arm which necessitated its amputation, and to his head which rendered him partially insane during all the blank months she had waited, an operation finally restoring his senses. His father had found, watched, and tenderly cared for him, but with his peculiar ways had never thought to write to the people at home.

This was the substance of the tale it took a long time to tell.

"And now dear," said Walter, "the President has offered me the General Managership of the road, with a big salary and a free home. You'll have no grimy faced and handed husband of an engineer, but a fine gentleman with only one arm for two broadcloth sleeves. Will you be satisfied, do you think?"

"I suppose I ought to be good enough to be sorry for your awful misfortune, Walt, but I can't be so very sorry, because I am going to have you now all were to myself, and so I can be happy all the time with fear of those terrible engines. You I love, the empty sleeve I honor." And she kissed it.

Dion Boucicault's First Play.

Wellington never awaited the arrival of the Prussian at Waterloo with the pale anxiety that the appearance of Lady Gay Spanker and Dolly in the third act was waited for by that young dramatist. Nobody came, he spoke and conquered. She outranked herself. The hunting speech carried the house by storm. The pace, tempo, and a flecket rose in their seats and cheered. The pit seemed to be on fire. Nothing was heard for several minutes. The author left the house. Up and down, back and forth, he paced, not sensible where he directed his steps, until he found himself on Waterloo Bridge, seated in a recess, trying to cool his face by pressing it against the wet stone balustrade. WOMEN IN ENGLISH POLITICS.

How Some Noted English Women Work, Look, Dress and Live—Lady Sandhurst, Jane Cobden, Mrs. Annie Besant and Others.

Notwithstanding our boasted superiority in the evolution of progressive ideas, especially these relating to enfranchisement and class elevation, American women will have to look to their laurels or their English sisters will outstrip them in the race for political suffrage. Whether the English woman uses more or less aggressive methods, or her greater tenacity of purpose than the American, she has apparently with less noise accomplished proportionately greater results in the work of political emancipation. Perhaps her success lies in her beginning at the foot of the ladder. She does not rest the success of her cause upon the lassoing of legislative bodies with eloquent addresses and long petitions, or the gathering together of able, brilliant and attractive women in conventions and societies, to agitate sentiment among the better classes, but she goes into the basement of human existence. Among working women, she establishes industrial schools, free schools, Sunday schools and sewing classes; she leads the people step by step from the darkness of ignorance into a region of at least some intelligence and refinement, and all the while she is insinuating into her cause her personality and ideas. In their gratitude they regard her as a sweetly lovely being in existence again and found himself fleeing before a frightful monster, and roar! It is overtaking him. The earth suddenly yawns beneath him—he is falling, falling, falling until he lands in a pit of strawberries. He writhes and struggles and shoots in terrible agony, and finally is smothered in strawberries.

COUNSEL OF EMINENT PHYSICIANS.

The People of Oakland County Wild with Excitement.

POONTIAC, MICH., March 16, 1897.

On the 10th day of December, 1896, I came from Detroit to this city to visit my parents and was taken suddenly ill. My colleagues, Drs. Gibbs and Gibbs, of Detroit, advised a careful examination of my case, formed a council, and named as counsellor, Dr. McGraw, of Detroit. They met in council Dec. 15th, made a careful examination, and pronounced my disease an Cancer of the Liver, and stated that there was no hope for me, and it was impossible to cure me. The pain was very severe and Dr. Gabrelli continued his visits, administering quieting powders. A swelling or bunch had formed on my side, and I was very low, and had failed, and I had given up all hopes of recovery. But having heard of Hobson's Rheumatic Syrup (recd. Jan. 1, 1897, and bought a bottle of the syrup from Mr. Peter Schantz, a druggist of this place, and took it as directed. About March 1st something broke and the swelling commenced to go down, until it has almost disappeared. Up to this date I have taken two and one-half bottles of the Syrup, and have so far recovered that I can walk around the house, and am truly rejoicing that I am (not being relieved of such terrible pain, and desiring to acknowledge the benefit I have received in using your Syrup, I send you this statement, hoping you will use it so that others who are afflicted may be benefited and rejoiced from pain as I have been. Very truly,

CHARLES A. SPIER.

PONTIAC, MICH., March 16, 1897.

This is to certify that Mr. Charles A. Spier, of this city, has lived with me the greater part of his case, as I have worked for his landlord and know his condition.

JOHN SPIER.

The undersigned certify that they are well acquainted with Charles A. Spier, whose signature appears above. Can just say we have no hesitation in saying that any statement made by him can be relied upon as being true in every particular.

A Multitude of Ailments.

The ailments which afflict the Kidneys and bladder are so numerous that scarcely a day does would fill a space for enumerating the limits of this article. Suffice it to say, that they are both obstinate and dangerous. To their prevention Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is well adapted. The stimulus which it lends to the action of the kidneys when they are sluggish, serves to counteract a tendency in them to lapse, first, into a state of persistent inactivity, and afterwards into one of positive organic disease, which soon destroys their delicate integuments, inflames them and occasions death. A double purpose is served by this diuretic. It promotes the secretion of the urine, and it renders the urine so acid as to prevent the formation of stones, excite fever organic, Constipation, Dyspepsia, Fever and ague, Rheumatism, and dyspepsia are also removed by this medicine of Dubious Character.

He Wanted the Calf Bad.

An old man in Texas was charged with stealing a calf. He was brought up for trial, and he made the following statement to the jury: "I was always taught to be honest, and I have always have been, but when I seed that calf I caved. I never wanted a calf as bad in my life, and you all know that when a man wants a calf he wants him." The jury retired, and the following verdict: "We, the jury, air satisfied that Steve took the calf, but as the feller that owned the animal is considerable of a slouch, we agree to let Steve and make the slouch pay the costs."

A Piece of Her Mind.

A lady correspondent has this to say:

"Mr. Editor, I have a piece of mind to a brazen-faced fellow who is advertising, when it costs them anything, that he will cure them about a year. I suffered a living death for nearly two years with headaches, backache, and a pain stabbed as sharp as a dagger, was being literally dragged out of existence, my memory impaired, life a burden, in despair, I committed the sin of trying an advertised remedy, Dr. Miles' Nervine Prescription, and it restored me to the enjoyment of life again. I want you the publication which, when its knows he can cure, he will not advertise it, but will cure people and make them write letters to the publication, which is a guarantee of the merits of the remedy." Sold by druggists, or address for free book, Dr. Miles' Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Bound to Kill Them Somehow.

"Mary," said the sick man, feebly, those yowling cats annoy me terribly. Can't you get a gun, or a shotgun or something of that kind?"

"Mary," exclaimed the individual again, after a pause—and his voice grew hard and pitiless—"throw some of these yowlers up on the roof!"—Chicago Tribune.

National Educational Association.

The annual meeting of the National Educational Association will be held at Nashville, July 16 to 19. Go via the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, the only and shortest, eight hours the quickest, and it is only twenty-four hours through from Chicago and Nashville.

Dining cars are now supplied, and the finest and most luxurious Pullman palace buffet sleeping cars ever seen on any road are now running without extra charge.

For this occasion a very low excursion rate will be made, which includes a side trip to Mammoth Cave, either going or returning. Also, you can stop off on your return trip by going or returning via Louisville, and take the Louisville and Nashville route.

The Chicago and Nashville fast train leaves Chicago (Dearborn station) at 3:30 p. m. daily, and arrives at Nashville the following morning for breakfast at 7:30 o'clock—a run of only thirteen hours and twenty minutes. Night express leaves at 11:30 p. m.

No extra fare is charged on fast trains, and the sleeping-car rate from Chicago to Nashville is less by this route than by any other, being only $2.50for one double berth. Reserve your berth in sleeping-car direct to your destination in advance by addressing Ticket Agent, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, 64 Clark Street, Chicago.

For further particulars address William Edwards, General Passenger Agent, Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad, Chicago, Ill.

Hearts in Horses.

Horses in horses primarily originate from a disturbance of function and Sheridan's Condition Powders correct the diagnostic, which is distributed principally to the liver, lungs, and stomach. Certain forms of indigestion give rise to a glutinous appetite, causing a horse not only to eat the food allotted to him but the bedding and litter, in a certain quantity of bulky, innutritious food taken into the stomach produces the functions of this nerve, which is distributed to its walls. If this function of digestion is kept up, it eventually ends in paralysis of the stomach, which is part of the nerve and involves the branches distributed to the lungs, and the latter branches becoming diseased, the lungs extend loss the power of contractibility, so that instead of the horse breathing two to three, is evidenced by the double flank movement to expel the air from the lungs during respiration. Horses on this account are apt to be thought to be fed on food of the best quality and in small bulk. Avoid putting in the feeding fermented hay and musty oats because they are cheap, this is a false economy because causes of heaves. Light, chaffy oats and crushed oats hay are nine tenths of the cause, as a horse must needs eat enormous quantities of it to get a little less than sonsy'ds in order to extract enough nutriment to live upon and keep alive. One quart of oats of first quality more than equals four or five quarts of above alluded to. Heaves are incurable. A post mortem examination of a confirmed case will show a stomach wonderfully enlarged, with its walls considerably attenuated, while the surface of the lungs, which should be smooth, will show discarded sacs, owing to breaking down of the air vesicles. In the advance of the disease can be palliated by giving a horse carefully digested, nutritious food in small quantities. As an evidence of the value of this food, if a heavy horse is turned out on pasture the horse soon begins to fatten so soon, however, as he is again put on dry food, which is not so easily digested, they again return. An ounce of Sheridan's Condition Powders is a gross diet for a horse in this condition.—H., in Breeders' Gazette.

The Cotswold Sheep.

Wm. J. Tweedie, of Walton, N. J., says:

"After a long experience with all the different breeds of sheep in this country for the last thirty-five years, and also in Scotland in my younger days, I prefer the Cotswold sheep. If my flock of two flocks together, not over fifty, in a large or even less. Where several hundreds have to be kept in one flock the trouble and expense of the Cotswold sheep can be divided into smaller flocks, both summer and winter.

"The best of the Cotswolds depends largely upon how they are fed and cared for. If properly attended to store ewes should sell on an average 200 pounds, weighing, if not fat, 150 pounds and well cared for, will gradually deteriorate in every season, and remaining, both in weight, wool and fleece.

"The average weight of Cotswold fleece depends on age, feed, ewes or wethers. The fleece of a ewe of three years from one year old to four, with a mixture of flat age in the flock, the most ewe fleece should weigh, when washed clean, twelve pounds, if I have had an average from my own flock of twenty ewes fifteen pounds of wool.

"What is an average price of Cotswold wool? During the war I sold for $1 per pound; of late years I have sold fleece to 40 cents per pound.

"I might add that no other sheep can be made to carry as much fat or meat as the Cotswolds. At four, or 24 months old lambs will weigh 150 pounds or over, live weight. I have had them at five months weigh 140 pounds.

Now.

The benefit to be derived from a good medicine in early spring is undoubted, but many people neglect taking any until the approach or warmer weather, when they will find themselves so weak and low-spirited that a substantial wonder has to overcome that feeling and give the strength necessary to do daily work. Vacation is an nearly longed for by the hard-worked people that a month's escape before rest can be indulged in. To prepare strength and vigor, giving a healthy and vigor throughout the system, nothing equals Hood's Sarsaparilla. It seems peculiarly adapted to overcome that prostration so common at this season, and to give life, and while it tones and sustains the system, purifies and invigorates the blood.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., June 27, 1889.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Wilson.

We welcome the warm and sultry weather after our continued rain.

We notice that Supervisor Hudkins has been improving his premises by clearing land and making new fences.

John Monroe, wife and daughter took a drive up to D. Carpenter's where he found his strayed pony on Monday afternoon.

Miss Ruth Isaman of South Arm, was a guest of Miss Annie Keats at F. L. Smiths on Thursday and Friday.

Richard Lewis Sundayed at Advance, Terry Barber at Boyne City, Miss Keat at home in South Arm, and Miss Annie Quye came home from East Jordan for a visit.

A few of our Afton residents, went over to Pleasant Valley on Sunday afternoon to hear Eld. Burge, of Boyne City preach. They expressed themselves well pleased with the discourse.

Eld. Scofield went over to the Wilks settlement in Jordan township on Sunday afternoon. He was accompanied by Mrs. Scofield.

Misses Malie and Prudie Scofield were guests at D. McMillan in South Arm as were also Misses Mary McMillan and Martha Dingman of Echo on Saturday.

Irving Latimer, the matricide, is a cousin of the Hollands here, Mrs. Latimer having been a sister of their deceased father.

East Jordan is quite backward about the 4th, and the people from here will doubtless go to Boyne City to celebrate. [Better come to Charlevoix.]

Eveline.

June 25—Next Thursday is the Fourth.

"Where are you going to spend your Fourth?" Charlevoix, of course.

At this writing, the weather seems more settled and looks as though it might keep so.

J. J. Tuttle, of Petoskey, Sundayed with his parents in this place.

Chas. Bechtel of this place, we understand, is seriously sick with consumption.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. John Dell, on Friday, June 21st, a son. We congratulate the little one.

A dance at Schoffen's hall on the evening of the 4th.

An entertainment at Mountain school-house tonight (Tuesday). Particulars next week.

Alex. Currey has improved the looks of his house by a new coat of paint.

"W. H. Downer of Charlevoix, got astray in the woods, Tuesday (18th), while looking for Peterson's camp between Ironton and Advance, and after floundering around in swamps and ditches, through the pouring rain for an hour, eventually landed in East Jordan, showering blessings on the road-master over there."—Enterprise. Hear ye! hear! road-masters; take warning, for vengeance is sworn upon you. Will it be necessary for us to furnish a guide for strangers coming into town? We think we are safe in saying that we have as many and as good roads as any town in the county, therefore for a person to get lost, especially in broad daylight, is a mystery. [You can't make Mr. Downer believe that the roads are all good over there.—Ed. JOURNAL.]

Ironton.

June 26—The furnace shut down for a few days to put in a new bell and other little repairs.

The Irontonites notice a broad smile on Mr. Purvis' face. Cause, a young son.

One week ago Prof. Cox of Harbor Springs organized here a singing school of 24 scholars. Tuesday evening last he gave the first lesson with good success. The class will take lessons every Tuesday evening.

Mr. Severance, the school teacher, visited his many friends in Ironton and vicinity last week. On Monday last he started for his home in the southern part of the state.

Mr. Harris and wife of Boyne City, are visiting parents and friends in Ironton this week.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. are attending the convention at Charlevoix this week.

Mr. Chamberlain of Charlevoix was in town on business, Tuesday.

Mrs. H. E. Sheldon has the agency for Miss Frances E. Willard's book.

Elk Rapids.

From the Progress.

Dr. Simons knocked out Charlevoix's crack fisherman recently while down there fishing for trout.

Twenty-five years from now there will be twenty-five club and boat houses around Elk and Torch lakes, worth in all $25,000.

The corn crop in this vicinity is not very good this year owing to the frost and rains doing so much damage, and some of this crops are lost entirely.

Elk Rapids has four roads to work with. The T. A. A., & W. M., G. R. & I. and M. C. We forgot to mention that Manistee road.

Elk Rapids will have rails in another year if everyone puts their shoulder to the wheel. We didn't get it 'other time and there is a chance for failure this time but this part of the country must have a road.

General manager H. H. Noble has retained from Pontiac. He is probably the busiest man in this region. Not only does he look after the large interests of the Iron Co. and the Chemical Co. but the interests of Dexter and Noble as well. Under his supervision are about two millions of property, consisting of furnace, saw mill, chemical works, grist mill, store, tugs, scows and shops. With all of this vast business upon his hand and running successfully, he has time for social duties and to attend the state business as a member of the asylum board.

Burgess.

June 25.—Our pleasant weather has revived up again; hope it will remain with us awhile.

Jack Saunby has got a new team of horses and they are dandies.

Amos Webster is sick with the mumps.

Children's Day at Burgess school house was a success and a large crowed attended. Miss Maud Scott played the organ and the choir did splendid with the singing.

Elder Stitts did not fill his appointment last Sunday, on account of being sick but is expected in two weeks again.

Mrs. Balch has been quite sick but is better again.

Joe Northrop (Indian) cut a terrible gash in his foot with an ax last Saturday while peeling bark in the woods near W. Dennis' place. Dr. Lewis dressed the wound.

Mr. Fred Sweetland has just finished putting in eleven acres of potatoes.

Atwood.

June 26—Fine weather again.

Joe Dennis is the father of a fine large boy.

Albert Supernau has bought him a pair of mustang ponies and buggy.

The Catholics held a special meeting last week.

A number of our people attended the Alliance last week in Charlevoix. They enjoyed themselves very much and were highly pleased with their entertainment.

A Woman's Discovery.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she suffered from several ailments, the vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night, and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamrick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Get a free trial bottle at F. G. Hines & Co.'s drug store. 2

Do Not Suffer any Longer

Knowing that a cough can be checked in a day, and that fearful stages of consumption break in a week, we hereby guarantee Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption, and will refund the money to all who buy, take it as per directions, sah do not find our statement correct. AS WE VIEW IT.

Tender landscape, regal in its splendor.
Smiling with a look half proud, half tender,
Seems a shrouded corpse when dream-fogs roll.
Life is glorious when the rays of duty
Shine upon it from a loving soul;
But its hills and glades are robbed of beauty
If a selfish mist hangs over the valley
Screening this great fact, the base man knows
Truth's test diamond, priceless if he knew its Life is good or bad, as each one chooses,
Life is as we view it.

Wanting wealth of heart, the miser's treasure,
Now too small to purchase lofty pleasure,
Soon will be a deathbed pang, or worse.
Love, contentment, goodness, hopes ethereal,
Make the poorest, slender though his purse,
Vastly richer than the whole material,
Star-limned, uncommonly universe.
Heated wealth, whose very touch enthrones,
Homeless line for all whose minds pursue it;
Man is rich or poor, just as he fashions
Wealth is as we view it.

Life's flame, flickering feebly in the strongest,
Soon, alas, is soon burnt at the longest;
Fresh as

THE Cadillac News and Express refers to the appointment of several Michigan editors to fat federal offices, and adds the following pertinent comment: "Our democratic contemporaries must have noticed ere this that republican appreciation of newspaper service is much greater than in their party."

F. A. HUDSON, chief clerk of the railway mail service for western Michigan, with office at Grand Rapids, has been removed because he is a democrat, and Sheldon Allen of Kalamazoo appointed to the position. To a reporter for the Grand Rapids Democrat Mr. Allen said that the superintendent told him that the change was made for political reasons; simply because Mr. Hudson is a democrat. That Hudson's work had been satisfactory in every respect, but that it was deemed advisable to put a republican in the position.

How quiet our esteemed republican contemporaries have suddenly become as to "derangements of the postal service," which a few months ago were a steady source of editorial objurgation. The "derangements," owing to wholesale changes, are worse than ever before; but the forest eyes that used to find them out have been suddenly blinded by the glare of partisanship. It will take months to restore the postal service to the efficient condition in which the Harrison administration found it in March.—Philadelphia Record.

In the July number of Scribner's Magazine there is a striking railway sketch by John R. Stearn, entitled "The Story of a Lost Car," which is ingenious in construction. The central incident is the mysterious disappearance from the Lake Shore Railroad of a freight-car, loaded with silver. The story is a most accurate picture of railway life, and has a fine vein of romance running through it.

Chinese Roots and Shoes.

There are a variety of boots and shoes used in China. The common shoe is made of thick, heavy felt, with a still thinner sole made of woven straw or layers of felt. This sole does not come out to the end of the shoe, but rounds upward at the ball of the foot. This puts the Cinaman on a pair of rockers, as it were, and gives him a rolling gait. Chinese persons of rank wear boots with thick soles and legs of fine cloth or silk that reach half way up to the knee. Among the peasants rude shoes are woven of straw. A wonderful shoe is that worn by a Chinese women of rank.

One of these shown at the National museum is of silk, beautifully embroidered. The general shape of the shoe is more like that of a loaf than anything else. It is less than four inches long. The wearer of this shoe had her feet bandaged in infancy and the bandages were so skillfully and tightened while she was growing up, in order to make her feet small. When she was grown she was a helpless creature, hardly able to hobble across her room. If she wanted to go out shopping she had to be carried in a chair.—Washington Star.

On Exhibition.

"A man cannot be too careful in this world, especially if he is a resident of a populous neighborhood and has a girl baby who is three and a half years old and very observing," said a south sider last Saturday. "Why? Well, I'll tell you. This morning, after breakfast, I went up into the front room to indulge in the luxury of a personal shave. The fresh window was open when I started in, but I did not suppose for a moment that I was visible from the street or sidewalk. Just as I was giving a finishing touch to my right cheek, how ever, I overheard a still small voice say:

"'Dat's my papa, an he's shavin'.

"It attracted my attention and I glanced out of the window. On the sidewalk in front of the house were forty-three children. That daughter of mine occupied the center of the group and was pointing me out to her little playfellows. This was rather too much for me, and so I locked 'em by pulling the curtain. You have to work spin on occasion. Many, many years ago we remember an old gentleman who opened Mr. Sala's book upon Russia and waded through several pages of description of his boots which flowed from Mr. Sala's pen sprayed a visit to the Gostinnoi Dvor. He laid down the book with an expression of disgust, and from that time onward till his death the old gentleman could never be induced to read another line that Mr. Sala wrote. He always spoke of him as "that man with the boots."—Pall Mall Budget.

NAPLES IN 1850 AND 1889.

Wonderful Changes That Took Place in the City During Thirty-nine Years.

I visited Naples, exclusively for reasons connected with the health of my family, in the winter of 1850-51. I saw it no more until the winter of 1888-9. The change which has passed upon the city during these thirty-nine years may, without exaggeration, be called enormous. At the earlier epoch the reaction which followed the abortive efforts of 1848-9 for national deliverance, was celebrating not only its triumph but its saturnalia. Personal liberty was deprived of every guarantee, and the trial of Pria and his associates, who had assisted the king eighteen months before in establishing, as he solemnly swore, by his own free will and deliberate conviction, a free constitution, was proceeding under a government of perjury and violence, to its predetermined issues in the judicial condemnation of the patriot culprits.

But at the later period there lay upon the surface every sign not only of change, but of transformation. There was a free press, free speech, free worship and freedom of person, with every sign of a vigorous municipal life, replacing the stagnant uniformity of a despotism, both local and central. The notes, indeed, of material progress surpassed everything which could have been expected. The basking, loitering, lolling, loafing population, so peculiarly Neapolitan, seemed to have become extinct. The filth, which formerly made the city offensive to eye and nostril, was disappeared in great measure. In all the frequented parts of the city the population was well clad.

I made it my business to look for stockings and shoeless feet; and I found them, between young and old, in four cases only during my whole stay. An excellent service had been organized, through the main streets, of omnibuses, trams and steam trams; and it was largely used, not only by the middle, but by the working class. Of the butchers' shops, as the measure of the consumption of animal food by the people, I cannot speak in the exact language of statistics; but from the evidence of the eye I should say that they were multiplied in some proportion, approaching five to one. Mendicity, formerly amounting to a public nuisance, had become comparatively rare; the most importunate beggar that I encountered was a Sister of Charity.

A supply of water, fairly alike in quality and quantity, had been replaced at great cost by one of first rate purity and abundance, and, as a result, typhoid fever, formerly endemic, had been expelled from the place. In the old quarter, or Vecchia, another vast operation was about to be commenced. Lying below the level of the sea, it was still a constant or frequent cause of disease. But municipal enterprise had the remedy prepared in a great evisceration. The present part was scrupulously clean, apparently well cared, and partly with a change of levels, partly with a system of powerful pumping, a new quarter was to rise.—Gladstone in The Nineteenth Century.

A Peculiar Duck.

A very peculiar preliminary to a death sentence that deserves to be put on record was that in vogue in Corsica in the Fifteenth century—that is, in the days of the outlaw. If with heaven itself was supposed to take a hand in the dispensation of justice in case a woman had been made to suffer in reputation by a man she was likely to challenge him to combat, which took place in the following way:

A regular ring was formed for spectators and chairs were placed for the judges. In the middle of the ring was a hole about three feet deep, in which the man, armed only with a club, had to defend himself against the woman, who was armed with a stone weighing a pound tied up in a handkerchief and attached to a slender willowy stick. The lady had a space measuring six feet in diameter in which to evolute and to attack.

The rules were as follows:

If the man in attempting to strike the woman touched the ground with arm or hand he made one error. If he made three such, or if the woman succeeded in disarming him, he was declared defeated, and was then delivered over to the executioner to be put to death, which was by being buried in the same hole in which he had vainly attempted to defend himself. But if the man succeeded in thwarting the attacks of the woman or in disarming her, he was declared the victor, and the woman herself was then the victim, and was sentenced to death and buried alive.—New York World.

Nutmegs.

The nutmeg is the innermost kernel of the fruit of a small tree that grows about thirty feet high. It is a native of the East Indies, but it is cultivated in other tropical lands. It has a small, yellow flower. The fruit is small and peach like, but with a smooth surface, and turns yellow when ripe. The exterior, a thick, fleshy husk, dries up and cracks, disclosing the nut. The outer covering of this nut is what we know as mace. It is red at first, but turns to a light brown when dried. Next comes a hard shining shell, and inside that is the nutmeg. The tree bears about the eighth or ninth year from the seed. The mace is taken off and dried in the sun for one day and for eight days in the shade, then dampened with sea water and pressed in bags. The remainder of the nuts is very thoroughly dried, when the shell is broken and the nutmegs are assorted, the best ones being exported. They are then pickled in lime water, then left to sweat and finally packed for shipment. The Penang nutmegs, the best, are about an inch long, pale brown, corrugated on the surface, with red streaks in the gray interior.—Good Housekeeping.

Nervous Headache.

There are many kinds of headaches. In these days the nervous headache is a very distinct variety. It is generally located in front of the head, across the forehead over the eyes. It may be in other parts, though—at the top of the head, at one or both sides, at the back, or all over. It is painful, depressing, disabling. A man feels at the height of the paroxysm like a hunter who has galloped his legs clean off, and who could not leap a three foot ditch to save his life. The spur is of no use, neither is the whip. The pain in the head is worse to bear than either, and the patient will rather endure both whip and spur than make any kind of effort which will make the head pain worse. Physic by itself is of no use. There is not a single drug known to medical science which will of itself at once and permanently cure a nervous headache.

On the other hand drugs are not always needed. A complete change of air and circumstances will usually take away the pain in ten or twelve hours. Perfect rest of a duration proportioned to the severity and long continuance of the symptoms will make the cure permanent. There are, of course, methods of relieving and diminishing the pain until such time as it may be possible to obtain the complete rest. But the rest is the thing to be secured at all costs. If not, the pain goes from bad to worse and the risk from less to greater. The final consequence it is impossible to predict, except that a breakdown sooner or later is inevitable, and the breakdown may be for a year or for lifetime.

A nervous headache is a danger signal; if it be frequent the danger is increased, and, if continuous, a catastrophe is imminent. The driver must put on his breaks at all hazards, or he will probably soon have a log for his life. There are very few sets of circumstances in which it is a man's duty to go on with his work when he is in this condition, at all risks. Even a threatened bankruptcy had better be risked than a threatened life. Besides a man who is in the unyielding grip of a permanent headache is not really the best judge of his own circumstances. He magnifies and distorts things amazingly. He takes counsel of his fears and abandons his hope and courage altogether. Rest immediate and sufficient is the sovereign remedy. Two weeks at once may be better than a year very soon.—Doctor in New York Mail and Express.

Distribution of Seeds.

Mr. Darwin found that the small portions of earth attaching to the feet of migrating birds contained seed. Nine grams of earth on the leg of the woodcock contained a seed of the toad rush. From six and a half ounces of earth rubbed into a ball and adhering to the leg of a wounded partridge he raised eighty-two plants, belonging to several species. Migrating birds often frequent the edges of ponds ere their departure, and in air and three-quarter ounces of such mud he raised under glass 537 plants. Seeds furnished with crowns, hooks, or prickles easily stick to the plumage of birds, which all small birds, and especially such wanderers as the albatross, might carry long distances.

Applying these facts to the case of the Azores, Dr. Watson found that most of the Azorean flora are well adapted to be carried by the methods just suggested—45 of the 439 flowering plants belonging to genera that have either pappus or winged seeds, 65 to such as have minute seeds, 20 to those with fleshy fruits which are greedily eaten by birds, some have hispid seeds, and 84 are gramineous plants well suited to conveyance by winds and currents. The only trees and shrubs of the isolated group are laurels of small berries, such as the Portugal laurel, myrtle, laurustinus and elder, while those with heavy berries, which could not be conveyed by the means suggested—oaks, chestnuts, hazels, apples, beeches, alders, firs—are absent, common as they are in Europe. The character of the flora is that of the southwestern peninsula of Europe, and, if we assume that one-half of its species is indigenous, the other introduced by European settlers, there is still a rich and varied flora which Mr. Wallace thinks has recently been carried over 900 miles of ocean by the means just indicated.

There is probably no better example of ocean migration than that offered by the Azores, and it is believed that the phenomena in question are still in progress, and that 900 miles do not form the limit of the distance to which this same ocean carriage of plants extends.—Edinburgh Review.

Baffling That Didn't Pay.

It is now all of twenty years since a raft of lumber went from the Northern Lumber company to New Orleans. There was only one raft, and that was sent as an experiment by a St. Louis firm, but when the accounts were balanced it showed a loss for the enterprise. The trip required too long a time, and when the lumber got there it did not suit the trade. The major portion of it found its way back to St. Louis on barges, and was sold here for more than it was offered there for. That was along back in 1869. It was the first and last experiment of its kind ever tried in the lumber business.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Shirking.

One may have a very good ear for a tune without knowing much about harmony, or being in any sense an educated musician.

Several years ago, during a St. Patrick's day procession, a certain official was observed listening intently to the playing of one of the bands, the cloud on his face increasing as he listened. Finally he went to the leader and broke out:

"Look, you got good money, and band we want Julim all to play; now, here's wan or two of yez playing 'Sint Paddrick's Day' and the rest of you go in 'toot, toot!' Why don't all of yez play the thrum and airn your money?"—Youth's Companion.

Great Troubles and Small.

"Man is a bundle of contradictions." He hunts a cobweb with his broom and flies into a rage at some annoyance. When the foolish conduct of Landor, the scholar, had made it necessary for him to sell his personal property, transfer his real estate to his eldest son, and hurry off to the Continent, he arrived suddenly at Mr. Forster's house in London while Dickens and other guests were at dinner.

Dickens hastened to greet his friend, expecting to find him cast down; but the old man illustrated one of his notable sayings:

"Most things are real to me except realities."

He sat upon his bed, and talked in his most genial vein about Latin poetry.

He went to Florence, and lived in rooms above those occupied by his friends, the Brownings, who used to send his dinner up to him every day.

Dinner was to him an important event. He would stand watch in hand as the hour drew nigh, and if the dinner was a minute late, he would seize the dish and throw its contents out of the window. Mr. Browning's son says that when young he remembers seeing a leg of mutton pass the window of his father's room, when it had been sent to the irritable old man a minute behind time.—Youth's Companion.

Getting Even with Him.

In a small garrison town in Prussia the officers of a cavalry company all messed together. A newly appointed second lieutenant had just arrived, and at eating his first dinner at the mess table. That day the principal dish was stewed kidneys. When this dish was passed around one officer after another declined to take any, as they knew the captain was passionately addicted to stewed kidneys. When the dish came to the new lieutenant, he, not knowing any better, helped himself very liberally.

Next day on parade, the captain asked another officer:

"Who is that wretched creature on the left?"

"That's the new lieutenant."

"Yes, I remember; he can gorge himself on stewed kidneys, but he can't ride."—New York News.

Beef for Hot Blood.

The idea is beginning to gain vogue with others who have never considered the subject in the light that the vegetarians do, that our diet is altogether too strong in the matter of the more heating meats; so much is this the case that it is maintained that mild wines do really less harm to the general system than fresh fish that is loaded with red blood. This strong meat, such, for instance, as beef, the eating of which, it is said, frequently generates too hot blood, gives us our reckless activity, our intemperate and many of our new diseases. White meats, vegetables, oils and fruits, in long tried use among the peoples, are the ones which furnish the wholesomer diet than that which we have so long considered the best to be had.—Harper's Bazar.

A Bat's Carelessness.

A firm of manufacturers in Milwaukee had an odd experience with a bat lately. Noticing that the bills for water delivered through a meter were unusually large an investigation was made, when it was found that the bat supply pipe in one place ran by contact with a waste pipe, also of lead. A rat, who frequented the waste pipe, happening to be thirsty, and driving by the curious instinct peculiar to such animals the proximity of a supply of water, had gnawed a hole through the walls of both pipes in order to get a drink. He succeeded in getting his drink, but omitted to close the hole again, and the water continued to flow through the meter and out again through the waste pipe.—Chicago Herald.

A Maine Fish Story.

A fisherman in Penobscot bay tells that he caught a pickerel through the ice on Lake Maranocook, last January, and dissected the creature and found undigested bank bills amounting to $300. He thinks that the money was lost by a sporting man whose boat was upset on the lake more than a year ago.—Bangor Commercial.

A Russian navy officer has invented a method of searching the sea or coast by night, which does not reveal the position of the ship. A mortar fires a buoyant shell containing a compound which ignites on coming in water and lights up the surrounding area.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., July 4, 1889.

LOCAL NOTES AND NEWS.

Monday was a scorcher.

Village taxes are due this month.

A P. Hendy of Clarion, was in town Monday.

Wm. Harris arrived home on Monday from Lansing.

Mrs. M. Litney has been quite sick during the past week.

Miss Della Rogers returned home last Thursday for her summer vacation.

The government dredge is at work opening the lower channel this week.

Pine Lake district Lodge, I. O. G. T. meets at Charlevoix on July 16 and 17.

W. H. Vaughn of South Arm, made the JOURNAL a pleasant call last Saturday.

Monro's driver drove piles for a dock in front of J. A. Gellick's property this week.

James Doig of Buffalo arrived at Dr. Brown's yesterday, to remain about one month.

Hyers colored minstrels at Lewis grand opera house Saturday and Monday evenings.

Miss Mattie O'Neil arrived home from Frankfort on the Pere Marquette Monday afternoon.

Miss May Gelliek entertained a few of her young friends at a birthday party Saturday.

Every seat in Lewis grand opera house should be filled on the Methodist Family concert tonight.

James Whitley and wife have returned to Charlevoix to live. They don't like Chicago for a home.

Grand Chief Templar O. W. Blaine will be present at I. O. G. T. district lodge here, July 16 and 17.

Peanut stands have risen all over town, like mushrooms after a rain, probably in anticipation of a hot Fourth.

Lilah and Myrtle Miller entertained a number of their little friends at a birthday party last Saturday afternoon.

The Charlevoix Cigar Mfg. Co. have added a stock of Japanese goods to their retail department, and the north show winstow is decorated with them. The stock is rich and varied, and is attracting a great deal of attention from the ladies.

To repair the outer end of the north pier, a row of piles have been driven across the end, and the crib work will be built up to a level of the top of the pier, bolted to the piles, and filled with stone. It is intended to make a good substantial job.

☞Until the blood is cleansed of impurities, it is useless to attempt the cure of any disease. Rheumatism, which is traceable to an acid in the blood, has been cured, in numerous cases, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, external treatment being of no avail.

Miss Della Patten closed her school at Hilton's last Friday afternoon, with literary exercises. At the close of the exercises the pupils of the school presented the teacher with a manicure set. On Monday Miss Patten went to Boyne City to open a kindergarten school with Miss Lillian Mills, which will be continued two months.

Some years ago the famous "15" puzzle made many people lose their temper, and now "Pigs in Clover" promises similar dire effects. A few evenings since a promising young man came home from town very much absorbed in the puzzle, and the next morning complained that his sleep was troubled—that all night long he dreamed of trying to drive a lot of pigs across the bridge.

A gentleman from the Charlevoix (Kalamazoo) resort a few days since requested the village marshal to remove a lot of logs from in front of his premises on Round Lake, as they prevented him from getting his yacht out of his boat-house, but was disappointed when informed that the marshal had no jurisdiction, and reminded that Kalamazoo people had bitterly opposed a measure intended to bring them into the corporation. It is the opinion of many of our people that if the reserve have the benefit of our village government, they should also help bear the burdens.

Their Twenty-fifth Anniversary

Last Saturday evening, June 29th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Byron See was the scene of one of those pleasant events that are treasured in one's memory for many years. It was the 25th anniversary of their marriage, and many of their friends assembled to make a merry celebration of the event. The party began to assemble at 8 o'clock, and at 9 the parlors were well filled. Soon after 9 o'clock the Charlevoix cornet band played some appropriate selections in front of the residence, and afterwards gave other selections in the hall. Refreshments were served, after which Rev. W. G. Wilkinson, in behalf of the guests, presented to Mr. and Mrs. See a hand some silver water set and a beautiful Bible. See responded briefly. Mr. E. H. Green then gave a brief address, in which he reminisced over the 25 years of married life of the host and hostess. Mrs. Frank McGilvery gave a selection on the piano, and Miss Phila Wood a character recitation. At 11 the company began to disperse, highly pleased with the evening's hospitality. The following were present from abroad:

W. A. Brown and wife, G. H. Blanchard and wife, H. A. Emery and wife, H. L. Bartholomew and wife, Chas. See and wife, O. D. Wood and wife, L. L. Smith and wife, Frank McGibeny and wife, M. J. Stockman and wife, Rev. W. G. Clark and wife, Rev. W. H. Ford and wife, W. A. Smith and wife, J. Milo Eaton and wife, O. S. Wilkinson and wife, John Burns and wife, John Bell and wife, Levi Blanchard and wife, Dr. Lewis and wife, H. Blanchard and wife, A. D. Crniekshank and wife, R. W. Kane and wife, Jas. Hagerty and wife, W. P. Brown, Mrs. Dr. Carleton, Mrs. Capt Upright, Hon. E. H. Green, Dr. N. J. Perry, and daughter Blanche Bartholomew, Maggie Green, Luna Washburn, Florence Smith, Katie Smith, Winnie Bartholomew, Phila Wood, May Brown, Hettie Bennett.

W. C. T. U. Convention.

At the Thursday morning session, Mrs. M. J. Robinson led the discussion on "Evangelistic Work; What is it How Carried on?"

The report of committees on credentials showed five delegates present from Charlevoix, one from Boyne City, five from Ironton, four from East Jordan, and two from Boyne City.

Under the topic "organization" Mrs. M. J. Robinson led the work of organized work, and the benefits to be had by keeping up all local, county, and state societies.

It was decided that the best way to reach the rural districts was by organizing the school teachers in the work, and by appointing a superintendent of the rural district.

The discussion of "Kindergarten Work," brought out the opinion that the best work in that department could be done by mothers at their own homes.

Mrs. Dorrance reported the "Flower Mission" as pleasant and profitable work.

In the "Lumberman's Work," Mrs. See reported the circulating of suitable literature among the lumber camps during the winter.

Reports of "Juvenile Work" were received from but two local unions, East Jordan and Boyne Falls. Its necessity and value was conceded by all present.

Mrs. Frank H. Palmiter advised a strict adherence to parliamentary rules in all meetings.

Thursday afternoon Mrs. E. F. Empey read selections from the Bible on the subject of "Sacramental Wine."

Mrs. L. H. Powers read a paper on "Narcotics."

Mrs. A. E. Martin reported that "Scientific Temperance Instruction" was given in all the schools of the county except one, but not with the vigor and effect that should be given it.

On the "White Shield Department," and "Mothers Meetings," Miss Dr. Dowse of Petoskey gave an interesting and profitable lecture.

In the "Memorial Service" eulogies on the lives of Mrs. W. C. Lemon, Mrs. J. W. Rogers, and Mrs. Bird, members of the union who have died since the last convention, were presented by Mrs. M. J. Johnson.

The evening was devoted to the Silver Medal Contest. The medal was won by Gerwin Parish of Ironton, 12 years old.

On Friday morning officers for the new year were elected as follows:

President—Mrs. M. J. Johnson.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. M. J. Johnson.

Treasurer—Mrs. C. E. Bird.

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That we sincerely thank the sisters of Charlevoix for the very complete arrangements for this convention; also officers of the Baptist church for the use of their home of worship, the members of their kindness, the citizens for opening their homes, the choir for their assistance, and the young people that engaged in the medal contest, as well as all others who have assisted in making this meeting a success.

Death of James Inwood.

James Inwood has been in feeble health for a long time, and was so feeble were this partially prepared for the announcement that at 2 o'clock Friday morning he had peacefully laid down life's burden and gone to his reward. In the closing moments he was surrounded by members of the family and a few friends.

Brief services were held at the family residence Friday afternoon, and the remains were taken to South Bend, Ind., for interment.

"Father" Inwood was born in England in 1810. In early life he followed the sea. In 1831 he came to America, and located in St. Joseph county, Ind. In 1835 he returned to England and married Miss Jane Eames, who returned with him to Indiana. Seven children were born to them, four of whom are now living.—Mrs. Elizabeth Baker of Traverse City, Mrs. John Robinson of Jessup, Iowa, Mrs. Joseph Miller of South Bend, Ind., and Miss Sarah Inwood of Charlevoix. Mrs. Inwood died some years ago, and is buried at South Bend.

For 22 years Father Inwood was living in this county, and for the last ten years in this village.

Since early life he has been a devoted Christian, and an earnest worker in the church; occupying numerous walks with God to himself and profit to his hearers. He enjoyed the esteem of the entire community, and his death will be keenly felt. The church especially will miss his zealous work and frequent liberal donations.

Memorial services will be held at M. E. church on his return of the family from South Bend.

Advance.

JULY 1.—The Amsden loaded with lumber for Frankfort left for the south Tuesday with wood for F. B. Newton last week.

"Cliff" Platen sent each of the mill hands a derby hat from Chicago as a present.

The summer term of school closed here last Saturday.

Hardy Norton has commenced his travels again. This time he goes to Chicago to astonish the natives and to see the elevated.

Sunday school is in a thriving condition. With preaching every other Sunday and fishing for trout between times it makes the summer pass off very pleasantly. Trout are said to bite better on Sunday than any other time.

I. E. Phillips moved from Advance back to his farm last Saturday. In a month's work, he doesn't think Advance a success.

Mrs. Healy returned from Ann Arbor last Wednesday where she had been staying since last October, being under treatment there for partial blindness. She returns with her eyesight poorer than when she went away.

One day last week Mr. Platen attempted to turn a bear, which weighed sixty nine pounds; it is supposed to be one of the early settlers.

Eveline.

JULY 2.—Saturday was the hottest day thus far in summer.

The Pine Lake Lumber Co. finished up rolling in their logs around Pine Lake and South Arm on Saturday, and the log rollers left Monday for Harbor Springs, where the company have about 200,000 feet. This will finish up their logs for this season, and we understand that the big mill will shut down as soon as they have their logs about sawed, and will be removed to another location we have not learned where. We are sorry to lose so good a mill from our midst. The company have given employment to a large number of men for the past five years, both summer and winter, and hence have distributed thousands upon thousands of dollars throughout this Pine Lake region, thus enabling our settlers to find ready sale and good pay for their timber at a good price. Mr. Thos. Foreman, one of the members of the company, and who has constantly been here with the mill, looking after the interest of it, has many friends throughout the Pine Lake region, who will be sorry to miss his smiling countenance from here.

Children's Day was observed at the Congregational and M. E. church last Sunday. Both churches were nicely decorated. The exercises were held at the M. E. church at 10 o'clock a. m. and the Congregational at 2:30 p. m.

Ye scribe was on the sick list week before last, with a bad attack of the Dunean McDonald and Frank Stanley have had an attack of the German measles; they are out again.

James Dunlap is in Milwaukee on business.

Jas. Dunlop loaded the schooner Florence M. Smith with 45 cords of kiln wood last week.

The magic lantern entertainment, scenes of the War of the Rebellion of 1861 to 1865, given by F. E. Miller of this place, and J. H. Kocher at the Mountain school house on Tuesday 25, was very good indeed.

Inwood.

JULY 1.—Elias Cook, commissioner, is doing some good work on the road in this vicinity.

Miss Della Patten closed her school at Hilton's school house Saturday. The scholars gave her a nice present. Miss Patten has many friends in the district.

Manford Pearl of Banks and Miss Sleeper of Norwood were married last week.

A grange was organized at Barnard last week.

The Sunday school at Hilton's school house is prospering under the superintendency of Olen Weed.

Miss Carrie Hilton is employed almost constantly with her class in music.

Wm. Bolton lost a fine horse last week.

Will Stevens took one of our "bloods" to Charlevoix the other night to board with Gurly Book.

A sister of Dr. N. Perry of Charlevoix is visiting the family of O. D. Hilton for two weeks.

There is only one man in Norwood who works harder than Edwin Cook. That man is O. D. Hilton.

Wilson.

Thermometer stood 94 in the shade on Monday.

Rain on Sunday refreshes the air for a short time.

The mill was in motion for two days last week, doing custom work.

Mrs. S. P. Smith and a friend from Advance were guests of Mrs. F. L. Smith on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Todd and William Burley go to Petoskey to day to attend the great show.

Eld. Redpath, county secretary of evangelists, visited the Alden and Sedgmen schools on Wednesday last.

Thos. Shepherd Sr. was attacked with unconsciousness for a few days, on Saturday night; Dr. Warne was called and he is much better.

Mr. Cain had the misfortune to have his watch smashed by falling a tree on it as he was peeling bark.

It was Miss Retta Isaman, instead of Miss Ruth, that visited in our neighborhood recently.

James P. Brand of Elk Rapids, is here on business for a few days, having land in this vicinity.

Railroad Prospects.

Among those in a position to know, there is a cheerfulness,—an undercurrent of hopefulness,—when speaking of the railroad, that indicates success. The newspapers can get nothing out of the manager of the company any more than the prospects are, and he will tell you "they are all right," just as he has been telling you all along. But let two members of the company get together when the reporter is busy about something else, and they will discuss the details of business as if they expected to see the dirt fly next week. Of course a good many skeptical people won't believe that anything is yet settled definitely. To all such there is a big surprise in store when that time arrives, and there is every reason to believe that it will be consummated in a very short time.

Atwood.

JULY 1.—Very warm.

Some farmers have begun haying.

Mr. Yettaw has a new mowing machine; also a wind mill for his well. He thinks it takes muscle to pump water by hand.

Miss Thompson of Ohio is the guest of Mesdames Byers.

Mr. Smithson of Charlevoix preached in the M. E. church at Atwood Sunday.

Miss Annie Marshall is home from school in Illinois.

Ellsworth.

JULY 2.—Hurrah for the Fourth of July. Ellsworth will celebrate, for or no fog.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

East Jordan.

From the Enterprise

Will Kittle is Bellaire's new village marshal. He carries a club, two revolvers, knuckle-duters and handcuffs, and he'll need them all when the editor of this paper crawls over his neck.

Jeff Weikel has an eagle caged in his barn. It was taken in the woods by Dugald Campbell, and bids fair to become a fine bird. Quite a number of the boys will go round the back way Sunday to see this living emblem of freedom!

A petition has been in circulation this week, asking the school board to take steps at the next regular meeting to build a new school house in district number five, which means East Jordan. The annual school meeting is fixed for the second Monday in July.

The establishment of an express office in town will be found a great boon to everyone. Express will now come direct to East Jordan, via Harbor Springs, and the delay hitherto necessary at Boyne Falls on all c. o. d. packages will be avoided.

East Jordanites are all saving up their money, the time is near when their village taxes, and the non-taxpayers to have a good time at Charlevoix or elsewhere on the 4th. Hail for the man who knocked our celebration on the head.

Harrison Mitchell has received his appointment as postmaster and expects his commission to follow in two or three weeks.

Dr. LeFevre returned to town for a short time last week, having got no further toward the west than Charlevoix, where he had the bad luck to strike the mumps, hence his delay.

Wm. H. Healey, writing from Portland, Ore., says: This is no place for a man without some capital. A man must have at least $1,000 to do anything here. Wages are low, and the country is flooded with help. Farm wages are about $20 per month, day labor $1.25, haying $1.50, harvesting $2. It costs lots to live here.

The asst. route agent of the Adams Express Co. paid a flying visit to our town last Friday, and located an office here. D. C. Loveday has charge of the business for a few days, until he can get arrangements perfected with another party, who has the necessary bonds filed. We venture to hope that it would be permanently located in Loveday's hardware, but Mr. L. informs us that he cannot attend to it, owing to his having so much business of his own.

The State Camp Meeting.

The 14th annual Camp Meeting at Bay View, under the auspices of the Michigan Camp Ground Association, will begin on Tuesday, July 16th and close the following Monday. It will be in charge of the Rev. D. F. Barnes, and every day be filled with varied religious meetings which are sure to be of very great interest. The services of camp meeting seem with their earnest preaching, stirring singing and reverent devotional services exert a most favorable influence and are long remembered by every one. No program has been furnished, but it is understood that a large number of excellent engagements have been made.

CATARRH.—Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustacian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American.

Sufferers from catarrhal troubles should read the above carefully. 1606i9

Epoch.

The transition from long lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is gratefully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the great alterative and tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of kidneys, liver or stomach, of lung or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at F. G. Hines & Co.'s drug store. 3

A Narrow Escape.

Col. W. K. Nelson, of Brooklyn, came home one evening feeling a peculiar tightness in the chest. Before retiring, he tried to drive a long breath but found it almost impossible. He suffered four days from pneumonia, and the doctors gave him up. Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption saved him and he is well to-day. Sold by G. W. Beaman, druggist.

The Landlord's Trick.

"It beats any of the games or puzzles of the day," said the hotel man, who was explaining his diversion to an interested crowd. "I call it Tom and Jerry, and there isn't one man in fifty can do it. You take any long necked bottle and lay it on its side—so," and he suited the action to the word. "Now take a little bit of paper and roll it into a ball, dry it thoroughly—so," and again he illustrated by making the little roll himself. "Now, place the roll in the neck of the bottle, near the external opening, and try, with all the lung power you have, to blow the paper ball into the body of the bottle. If you do it in twenty-five minutes I'll give you $10, and the hotel man drew the crisp bills from his pocket.

Of course every man in the party tried it, and, although the dawn had begun to break before the last aspirant had tried to put the ball in, the interest in the puzzle had not diminished. The first who attempted to get in Jerry, as the landlord called the recalcitrant bit of paper, blew so violently that Jerry jumped to the floor.

"Bravo, Jerry!" said the landlord.

Then Jerry was coaxed and caressed by a gentle breath that played around him so delicately that he seemed destined to glide into the body of the bottle.

"Look out, Jerry!" yelled the landlord.

Jerry seemed to understand, for he came flying back, no nearer in than when he was started. This raised a general laugh, the landlord laughing most loudly, because his call to Jerry had so disconcerted the blower that the latter failed to gauge his wind.

The first trial began saurily after midnight, and the last was concluded at about 4 a. m. Only the landlord had succeeded in getting Jerry in, and the guests went to bed to dream of Jerry and his master, Tom. Tom and Jerry are a puzzle dazzle pair.—Boston Herald.

Facility in Art.

Facility is often mistaken for genius, but it generally leads to mediocrity. How many a person I have known, who, with great promise at the beginning, soon faltered, and then stopped; while others, with no early facility, strengthened themselves by study and will, and passed far beyond them at the end. So many are satisfied with doing pretty well what they can do easily, and wait the energy to do very well when it costs labor and struggle. But at least four-fifths of genius is an indomitable will.

Take Michael Angelo, for instance; he had not a natural faculty like Raphael, but he subdued to far higher regions by force of will, and an energy that 50 years did not tire; while Raphael passed his culmination at 37, and his last works, young as he was, are far from being his best. However, we need not go to great examples; common life and every day will furnish them. A thousand are pleased with dabbling in water colors and toying with them as amateurs do odes and carnally verse, who the determination to be an artist. After all, there is far greater difference between men in their will than in their talent. What we will to do, despite of obstacles and failures, we generally succeed in doing at last. "Easy writing," says Sheridan, "makes cramped hard reading;" and we must make up our minds to work if we wish to win sense.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Separating Minerals.

Mr. Caron-Wilson has devised an effective dry method for separating the denser minerals from sand. A piece of cardboard about two feet long is bent in the form of a shoot or trough (it must not be allowed to break) and held in this form by elastic bands at either end; this must then be held, at rest, at an angle sufficiently inclined to allow the sand to travel slowly down the shoot on being gently tapped. A small quantity of the sand to be treated is now placed at the head of the trough, which is then tapped with the finger. When the trough is tapped, the sand travels slowly down, and in doing so the denser grains lag behind, forming a line, mass in the rear of the stream; this dark mass increases as the sand flows on, and must be collected and placed in a receptacle just the moment before the last tap would cause it to fall off the trough. When a sufficient quantity of this denser sand has been collected, it should be placed in the lid of a cardboard box (12 inches by 6 inches), and gently shaken to and fro at a slightly inclined angle, the mass being at the same time gently blown away with the breath. The finer quartz grains will thus be blown away, and finally any but the denser grains will remain.—Scientific American.

He Was a Distributer.

On a side lot near the Forepaugh grounds on North Doval street there was a fakir whose outfit consisted of the stake and ring game. This simple and enticing amusement is played as follows: The stake is placed in the ground at a certain angle, which leads the uninitiated to believe that it is easy to throw the five inch rings over it, whereas this feat is almost impossible. The fakir had a crowd around him and was raking in the dimes—three "tries" for ten cents—when a black mustached, middle sized man walked up and said he'd bet a dollar he could throw the rings out of five over the stake.

The fakir winked at the crowd and took the man up. The black mustached stranger threw five rings rapidly one after another, and, as three of them were on the stake, the thrower was in ninety cents. They doubled bets and the stranger won again. Then they bet $10 even that nine rings out of the first ten thrown could not be put over the stake. The whole ten settled safely, and the fakir as he handed $10 in silver over, said: "I'm broke; what's your business?"

"I'm a distributer at the postoffice," said the ring thrower. "I don't do anything but ring papers all day long into the mouths of fifty sacks."—Philadelphia Times.

STUFFING LIVE HENS.

An Automatic Chicken Feeder Which Imparts Any Flavor or Color.

The curious and anxious competitors of a Massachusetts avenue produce dealer may now turn in and advertise that they have the fattest and most delicious poultry that the American market affords. They have discovered the secret which has heretofore enabled their competitors to monopolize these claims. And so has the reporter who had often remarked the fat and overgrown appearance of the fowls which lantly strut in the dealer's side yard or adorn the frontispiece of his place of business.

Twice daily the fowls are driven into a shed on the premises. From this they always emerge stuffed until their hides will hardly hold them. Now, a hen is much like a monkey, in that it has a false and a true stomach. A monkey will eat voraciously for hours, filling up a paunch in his neck. At his leisure he draws from this sack and ruminates his food. A hen will fill her craw, and, when that is done she is satisfied. A monkey never gets enough to eat, but a chicken will often leave a portion of its food untouched. The secret of fattening chickens is to induce them to eat more than they want. This is not done by offering extra inducements in the way of superior vitands. It is done scientifically by force.

In the shed in question is a contrivance that must be taken for an infernal machine, a patent ballot box or an automatic corn sheller. But it is neither. It is a chicken feeder.

An unsuspecting fowl sidrivers on a trap door. The fool bird flies up and incloses her, except at the top. A device not unlike a Gatling gun swoops down and completes her imprisonment.

An operator then comes forward, puts the hen in a straight jacket that stretches the protesting bird neck and holds the head erect, mouth open, beak pointed toward the ceiling.

Then a spring of automatic action is touched. It sets in motion a light metallic arm acting as a lever. Starting from a box overhead it descends to the open beak of the fowl, drops in a small quantity of prepared food and forces it far down into the throat.

This operation is repeated until the hen is "chock full." An apparatus may also be attached by which liquid food may be put into the bird. Stuffing stupefies a bird, but it does not interfere with the workings of its digestive apparatus.

"Birds fattened by the stuffing process," said the manager of this apparatus, "may not relish the food at order. We can vary the food so as to produce the desired flavor. The food may impart a certain flavor to the meat. By fattening a bird in ten days or less it is made very tender, as all the new flesh is the product of rich, clean food, and is not toughened by age or exercise."

"Do you mean to say that you can control the question of the quality of the bird's flesh?"

"Certainly; that is the glory of this method. We can impart a dainty pork flavor, mingle the nutrect of bustard with the delicious cream of quail on toast, throw a touch of mint or celery into the meat, or imitate the delicacies of reed bird, canvasback ducks or frog lamb. Besides, we can make the meat black or white, according as we want to represent delicate white flesh or the dark meats of wild fowl. Of course, pegged chickens like this is worth more in the pea green market than the ordinary barn yard chanticleer. We can also feed turkeys and ducks to good advantage, but we have had no best results with chickens."—Indianapolis News.

An Important Period.

In thousands of homes all over the land the hearts of parents are sad, in the days of early June, to the daughter whose school days will end, or who will be a sweet girl graduate. In her is centered a fond mother's tender hope and a father's less demonstrative pride and affection. The pretty creature busy at her studies in this the eventful hour of school days, the fair graduate is an object of interest and refined to her parents or her brothers. There are other graduates' brothers who will learn to date all future events of their life, backward and forward, from the day their eyes were greeted with a vision of learned loveliness in spotless white, standing before the audience and reading such pretty platitudes from a ribbon bound roll of heavy white paper. The time of whose conquests does not necessarily begin in the drawing room, nor is the time of its coming beyond the era of the "ball" season. Male hearts cannot possibly resist such a combination as brains and beauty; a doubled barreled charge which Cupid launches from the drawing room on graduation day. "June, dear June," is thus fittingly associated by the poet, for a month that gives us the sweet girl graduate and the wedding bury (the honeymoon, not the travel stained berry) is meet to reign queen of all the sisterhood of twelve.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Then the World Turned 'Round Again.

He entered a tobacco store on Fifth River avenue with a handkerchief pressed to his jaw, and was at once an object of solicitude.

"I've been there," said number one, "and I can feel for you. Try peppermint essence."

"I always put on a bag of hot salt," said number two. "Have cures the worst kind o' case in two hours."

"Bosh!" exclaimed number three, "electricity will stop that ache in two minutes. I'll never feel with any other remedy."

"Gentleman," said number four as he put his finger into his mouth to feel of an old snag, "there's nothing like laudanum for the toothache. It comes from an exposed nerve. Laudanum deadens the sensibility of the nerve. I've used it with success a hundred times."

"I'd never advise a man to waste time fooling around," said number five, "take it right to the dentist and have it pulled out. It takes grit, of course, but in five minutes you are over it forever."

Ask for Ayer's
